OBSTACLES IN PATH OF COURT PLAN OF HARDING

Increasing of Number of Judges Would Necessitate Many Amendments to Constitution of The Hague Tribunal.

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH HERE IS DISCUSSED

Present Panel of Court Includes Several Men Directly Identified With League—Changes Could Be Effective Gradually.

By FERDINAND TUOHY,
Paris Correspondent of the New York World and Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

THE HAGUE, June 23.—Given good will and elasticity of mind on this side, United States participation in the Permanent Court of International Justice on Secretary Hughes' enunciated terms is perfectly possible, but it is not so on President Harding's stand at St. Louis for a complete change in the method of electing judges.

Canceling the present arrangement would mean rewriting at least 12 articles of the statute creating the court.

The problem of election of judges to an international tribunal has been a stumbling block for generations. It was the wrecking of the American proposal to build up a court at The Hague conference 16 years ago.

In any case, the next election is not until 1930. The present court may be called upon to do its most important work before that. Gradual reconstitution, however, can come through deaths, retirements and increase the tribunal from 11 to 15.

6 Judges From "Neutral" Countries.

It would be idle to insist that the present panel is perfect, though the learning and moral character of the principals may be so. Six of the 11 Judges who sit continuously belong to countries that were neutral in the war. The other five represent the principal victorious Powers. There is a crying need for a representative from one of the beaten states, especially Germany, which is the only country that has brought the Napoleonic code up to date.

Furthermore some of these judges were involved in the drafting of the covenant of the League of Nations and the rest of the Versailles treaty. The composition of the bench is:

Commendatore Dionisio Anzilotti of Italy, who apparently is still Under Secretary-General of the league.

Antonio S. de Bustamente of Cuba, who was his country's plenipotentiary at both the St. Germain and Versailles peace conferences.

Dr. Max Huber of Switzerland, who is the alternate delegate of his country in the league assembly.

B. T. C. Loder, president of the court, Dutch delegate to the League Assembly. He assisted in drawing up the covenant of the league.

Viscount Robert Finlay of England, former British Lord Chancellor and Solicitor-General.

Dr. Rafael Altamiray Crevea of Spain, who was Spanish delegate on the Moroccan Arbitration Committee in 1914 and has long been professor of law at the University of Oviedo.

Dr. Andre Weiss of France.

Dr. Yorozu Oda of Japan.

M. Reichmann of Norway, who also assisted in drawing up the league covenant.

Didrik Nyholm of Denmark.

John Basset Moore of the United States, leading international law expert, representative of his country at many international gatherings, including The Hague tribunals, and one of the drafters of the new warfare rules.

May Make Change Gradually.

Mr. Harding's hope that the court may be divorced entirely from the league, which created and is supporting it, might be realized gradually—chiefly by American participation—but it can scarcely be made a condition precedent to such participation.

Rather might this suggestion from a high authority here be considered—that on joining the court the United States might establish a delegation at Geneva as a check on all activities resulting from the liason between the league and the court, such as over advisory opinions.

It is pointed out there are already several such American dele-

DIAMONDS VALUED AT $5000 STOLEN IN EAST SIDE HOLDUP

Robbers Escape in Granite City After Looting Store—Bullet Hole in Abandoned Auto.

Two armed robbers held up the store of the Hogan Jewelry Co., 1335 North Nineteenth street, Granite City, at 1:05 p. m. yesterday and obtained diamonds valued at $5000 by the proprietor, James Hogan, and $250 in money. They escaped in a Ford touring car, which was pursued by citizens and policemen to Madison, where the robbers abandoned the car and escaped.

The two clerks, Miss Rose Lavischer and Tony Michel, 17 years old, were in the store when one of the men came in and asked for Hogan. Informed the latter was absent he went out and immediately returned with a companion. Both drew revolvers and ordered the clerks to remain quiet while they searched the store. Michel was instructed to open a diamond case, but said he did not have the key. The men then took a tray of diamonds from near a show window, looted the cash register, and ran out of the store.

As they drove away three shots were fired, but the police have not determined who fired them. A bullet hole was discovered in the rear curtain of the robbers' car. The robbers were seen to enter a house in Madison, but when policemen entered the men had escaped. The license tags of the automobile were traced to a man residing in Trenton, Ill.

The owner of the automobile, W. E. Sackwitz, appeared at the Granite City police station last night to claim his machine, and was arrested. Miss Lavischer identified him as one of the men participating in the robbery.

Sackwitz denied any knowledge of the holdup, declaring he had left his car in Madison yesterday morning to go to St. Louis, and when he returned last night learned the police were holding it. A woman also is detained as a witness.

LEGAL AGE BILL KILLED

California Governor Declares Girl of 18 Should Marry.

By the Associated Press.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 23.—Gov. Richardson allowed the bill to raise the legal age of girls from 18 to 21 years to die by pocket veto because, he said today, he believes girls between these ages not only should have the opportunity to marry but he thinks early marriage promotes better home life and improved citizenship generally.

"To prevent a girl 18 years of age from marrying," said the Governor, "would be contrary to the laws of nature and science."

HOT WEATHER TO CONTINUE; 95 AT 2 P. M. YESTERDAY

Patrolman Cornelius Ryan, Stricken While on Duty, Dies; Several Other Prostrations Are Reported.

TEMPERATURE OVER 100 MARK IN ILLINOIS

Weather Observers Say There Is No Immediate Prospect of Relief From Torrid Spell.

The June rise in temperature, following the abnormally cool and wet weather of the first part of the month, reached the 95-degree mark at 2 p. m. yesterday. Friday's highest temperature was 94 and 93 was reached on the two previous days.

The Weather Bureau sees no immediate relief from the heat, short of the reflection that it is not worse than that of other places, and that it will not last forever—even the recent cold did not last forever.

A death attributed to heat prostration was that of Cornelius Ryan, traffic patrolman stationed in the alley at the rear of the Post-Dispatch Building, and part of the time at Twelfth boulevard and Locust street. Ryan, who was 49 years old, collapsed yesterday afternoon and was taken to a first-aid station, where restorative drugs and artificial respiration were used in an unsuccessful attempt to save his life. He lived at 4223 De Soto avenue and had a family.

John Fleer, 64 years old, a lumber dealer of 2138 Alice avenue, suffered heat exhaustion at 1 p. m. yesterday at Ninth and Olive streets. He was taken to the city hospital.

Mrs. Hattie Lewis, 46, a negress, living in the rear of 121 South Channing avenue, fell from a chair while speaking with her husband about 7 p. m. A physician who was called said she had died from the heat.

Robert Riley, 44 years old, a printer, of 1222 North Euclid avenue, was taken from a barber shop at 205 North Seventh street to the city hospital, suffering from heat prostration.

Two negro patients at City Hospital No. 2, suffering from heat prostration, were Mrs. Bessie Jones, 31, of 819 Walnut street, and George Washington, 65, of 2125 Singleton street.

Heat Wave to Go Into Second Week of Torrid Temperature.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The heat wave which has turned the central section of the country into a hot house since last Monday, probably will go into its second week of torrid temperature, continuing what weather observers declared today was an unprecedented heat wave in point of duration.

The heat is still intense over the central west, central and southern district, according to the weather bureau. There has been a light moderation in the far Northwest. Readings exceeding 90 degrees occurred over a wide area. The Government thermometer at Decatur, Ill., registered 101 degrees.

No moderation is indicated for the middle and middle western sections, but local thundershowers are probable in the northern and western lake region and the upper Mississippi Valley. In the south and southwest fair weather will continue until Sunday night and probably longer.

Chicago's high temperatures continued today, raising the toll of lives to 23 and increasing the number of prostrations to more than 200 during the six hot days. In several suburbs citizens have been warned under penalty of arrest to refrain from sprinkling lawns and to use water only for essential needs, the shortage of water having become acute.

Excessive heat was predicted again for the Atlantic Coast after a day's respite. In Ohio the week's heat had taken 41 lives and caused numerous prostrations. No immediate relief is looked for there. New Orleans reported temperature above 90 degrees with no relief in sight. Several points in Nebraska reported 93 degrees.

Intermittent rain in various sections of Utah today was accompanied by large hail. Aviators of the air mail service made their flights under difficulty and one plane was covered with ice upon landing at Salt Lake City after the flight over the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

HARDING'S BOYHOOD GIRL TRAVELS 100 MILES TO SEE HIM

Happy Grandmother Described by the President at Hutchinson, Kan., as First Sweetheart.

By the Associated Press.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., June 23.—Forty-five years ago Warren G. Harding, then a boy of 12, had a love affair with a small girl, which, at that time, was believed by the school companions of each to be of a serious sort. Certainly, they said, Warren would marry Mattie.

Today, the same Warren Harding, now President of the United States, met and recognized the same girl in Hutchinson. She had motored more than 100 miles across Kansas to see him.

He told of the boyhood romance in his address before 7000 people assembled to hear his discussion of the agricultural problems of the country at the State fair grounds and described her as "my first boyhood sweetheart; married, happy, a grandmother and doing her part in the citizenship of this great community."

Members of the President's party said later that the President did not now know Mattie by her married name. He only remembered her as Mattie Meil of Caledonia, O., whom he had not seen for 45 years.

ADMITS $1,051,000,000 "BID" FOR SHIPS WAS A HOAX

John W. Slack, in Signed Article in New York Times, Says He Wanted Publicity for Home Town.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Confession that the "bid" of $1,051,000,000 that he signed for all the property of the United States Shipping Board was a hoax and "partially insincere" and was designed to give publicity to the town in which he lives, Silver-creek, N. Y., was made in a signed article appearing in the New York Times by John W. Slack, who describes himself as a "salesman."

He asserts that the result of his prank, which provoked much curiosity and ridicule, was to show that the Government was insincere in offering the property for sale and that Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board bungled in estimating its value at $250,000,000.

Both "results," he added, justified the laugh he got and the laugh others got at his expense.

His "Washington representative," described only as "a man who weighs 350 pounds," was informed by a prominent member of the board "that five billion dollars in cash could not buy the ships and other property of the board" because "from the standpoint of national defense alone the Government could not afford to lose control of the ships."

Otherwise he praises Lasker and confesses that the name of Henry Ford was brought into the case by accident. He says Ford had nothing to do with it at any time.

"CURB BANKERS" DO RUSHING BUSINESS IN GERMAN MARKS

Street Salesmen Offer Money at Three Times Exchange Rate and Have to Keep Buyers in Line.

Street salesmen of German and Austrian paper money were doing a thriving business in the downtown section yesterday at a fat profit over the prevailing rate of exchange, the quotations ranging from three and a half to five times greater than the exchange rate.

One "curb banker" was offering German marks at 10,000 for 35 cents. The exchange rate yesterday was 100,000 for $1, or 10,000 for 10 cents.

Up the street another curb operator was holding out for higher prices on the grounds that his marks were of prewar issue, "the original vintage." He asked 50 cents for 10,000 German marks and 50 cents for 10,000 Austrian kronen. The small investor could pick up 1000 marks for a dime. The soviet ruble, whose value would baffle any but a mathematician, was quoted at 50 cents for 1,000,000.

BRITISH SEALS BROKEN, LIQUOR ON SHIP SEIZED BY U. S. AGENTS

Baltic Loses 5159 Bottles of Beer and Ale and Some Spirits—Berengaria Stocks Will Be Taken Monday—Formal Protest Is Filed by Commanders.

CONFLICTING ORDERS DELAY CONFISCATIONS

'Medicinal' Supply Only to Be Left Aboard—French Liner Arrives With 'Cellar' Full—More Trouble Coming.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—After two days' reflection and two false starts, United States customs and prohibition officials today smashed the British Government's seals on the liquor stocks which the steamships Baltic and Berengaria brought into this port yesterday, to test the Treasury Department's ruling that no ocean liner may cross America's three-mile line with bar supplies for the east-bound voyage.

By nightfall there had been removed from the Baltic all liquid supplies which Dr. E. K. Sprague, Chief of the United States Public Health Service, considered to be in excess of medicinal needs. It was announced that surplus wet goods would be taken from the Berengaria Monday morning. The liquor seized was trucked to Government warehouses.

Conflicting Orders.

Captains of both vessels entered formal protest against, bnt put no obstacles in the way of confiscating officials.

Conflicting orders were numerous before the seizure was made, and in the meanwhile the French liner Paris steamed into the harbor with a "cellar" well stocked for the homeward voyage. Indications were that even more trouble would accumulate next week, when more liners would arrive carrying liquor across the three-mile limit.

Customs officials and prohibition enforcement agents massed this morning on the pier occupied by the White Star liner Baltic, which yesterday slipped into port ahead of the Cunarder Berengaria, heralded as the first liner to test the dry ruling. The announced purpose of the American officials was to sweep down on the two vessels and promptly confiscate their stocks.

This is what happened:

Deputy Surveyor Sanders marched aboard the Baltic shortly after 9:30 a. m.; the British seals were smashed; Capt. John Roberts protested; and Federal Prohibition Director Canfield began taking an inventory of the wet goods.

Proceedings were halted by a telegraph call from the Customs House. Collector of the Port Elting later explained that this halt was called because Dr. E. K. Sprague, chief of the United States Public Health Service, had not issued permits for medicinal liquor supplies. Meanwhile Elting conferred at the Customs House with Treasury officials, and Surveyor of the Port Whittle dashed aboard the White Star liner Majestic, which sailed at noon with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, for a talk with his chief.

Early this afternoon Federal agents who spent the day on the Baltic pier, resumed their work of seizing her liquor.

This work was halted by a telephone call from Dr. Sprague, after Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Moss sent orders from Washington. It was reported from the capital that Dr. Sprague had granted a permit for all the Berengaria's stock, listing it for medicinal purposes. This report Dr. Sprague denied, but he declined to discuss the Washington orders.

Dr. Sprague issued permits for a

HARDING DRIVES BINDER SO WELL HE THINKS HE IS QUALIFIED FOR FARM BLOC

Sticks to Wheel of Machine Until Sweat Pours Down Face—Shows Kansans How They Shock Wheat in Ohio.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, Accompanying the President on His Western Trip.

HUTCHISON, Kan., June 23.—The President likes to drive a car, but seldom, owing to the jealous watchfulness of the secret service men, is he able to get his hands on a steering wheel. This morning, on a big wheat farm just outside Hutchinson, the President had his wish. Mounting to the seat of a tractor, after he had proved himself no mean hand at shocking wheat, Mr. Harding drove a binder clear around the four sides of a square of billowing wheat, a 100 yards or so each way.

"By George, he can handle her," said the farmers standing around. As the tied-up bundles fell from the machine, the trailing crowd plucked out straws to be taken home and framed.

Nobody thought the President would take the machine more than a few yards. He had gone perhaps a hundred feet when one of the conductors of the harvesting party called to the regular driver, under whose auspices the President had got under way, that Mr. Harding had had enough.

The President did not heed. He drove right on, made a neat turn at the corner and proceeded around the square.

Sweaty, Grimy, but Happy.

Like a veteran, so the watchers said, he reached back at the proper intervals and pulled the rope that dumped the sheaves to the ground. One could tell by looking back over the ground that his spacing had been excellent. He gained in proficiency as he went on, so that after a while he was pulling the rope without looking at it.

Seeing that the "chief" was able to get along by himself, the driver whom he had supplanted dropped off and let the President go it alone.

It was evident that Mr. Harding was having as good a time as he has had on this trip—may be the best time. He let go of the wheel with reluctance. Sweat was pouring from his face, his hands were grimy, his blue coat covered with dust. There were probably some grease spots on his white trousers and his white shoes. But he looked happy.

He looked happy, even though there was one member of the Senate in the crowd. He was Capper of this state, who had come out with the party from Kansas City.

"He knows how to do it," said Capper, as he followed the binder's triumphal progress through the wheat.

Earlier the President, Capper and the owner of the farm, Chester O'Neal, a bronzed giant in a hickory shirt, got together on the edge of the farm, under a blazing sun, and talked wheat prices. They worked out together a lengthy computation of the cost of growing wheat and getting it to the market. O'Neal said the farmers were losing money on all that they raised.

Shows Early Farm Training.

There was a great clicking of cameras all the while the President was at the farm. He was photographed holding babies, shocking wheat, driving the tractor. A little chap in the crowd had a big bump on his forehead.

"Been fighting?" asked the President. "No," said the boy, "the tricycle stopped and let me off in a hurry."

The President passed Mary Jane, a little girl he had been holding, to the arms of Secretary of the Interior Work. The baby was as contented in the arms of the Cabinet official as those of the President.

"That little girl doesn't care who holds her," laughed Mr. Harding.

Mrs. Harding proved again she was "just homefolks" as she chatted with the farm people. The photographers buzzed around.

"You're always taking me while I'm talking, with my mouth open," remonstrated Mrs. Harding good naturedly. "People will think I never stop talking."

The President showed how they shock wheat out in Ohio. Here they pile the bundles into a shock, without a cap; there they cap the shock. Mr. Harding capped his with an expertness that denoted early farm training. He didn't like the way it looked, and made and capped another shock.

"Now," he said to Senator Capper, "will you let me in the farm bloc?"

The visit to the farm was the climax of a drive of 10 miles or so through rich Kansas farming country. The sun beat down mercilessly on the party in open cars; for some reason, the cars always are driven with the tops down in the inevitable parade that goes with a President's visit to a city, big or small. Most of the way was over a fine concrete road, but part was over a road where swirling clouds of dust engulfed the procession.

Not a Very Profound Impression.

The town—a thriving place of 25,000 whose inhabitants think in terms of wheat—gave the President and his party what the Kansas boosters called a real Kansas welcome; that is, a cordial, hospitable greeting.

The business streets were well filled to see the procession, and along the country roads little knots of farmers stood and waved a welcome.

The President this afternoon talked to a large gathering at the fair grounds. In a section where the farmers say they are losing money on every bushel of wheat they raise, his speech, reciting the achievements of the administration in behalf of the farmer, did not make a very profound impression.

It was a great day, though, for Kansas, where the corn grows tall and the golden wheat undulates over endless miles, and the sun scorches through your clothing and the trade in cigarettes is conducted by bootleggers. It was a great day for Kansas and for Hutchinson, which boasts that it has more automobiles in proportion to population than any other place in the world, something like one car to every four and a half persons. It was, despite the heat, a great day for the President, for at least he satisfied the itch of his fingers to get hold of a steering wheel.

You will see it all in the movies. It's no fake, either. The President drove that binder, and drove it well.

YOUNG MAN DROWNED WHILE SWIMMING IN MISSISSIPPI

John Day, 20, Sinks in Spite of Heroic Effort of Friend to Save Him.

Four young men rowed across the Mississippi in a skiff yesterday afternoon. Three returned in the evening, bringing the clothing of the fourth, John Day, 20 years old, of 1957 Utah street, a clerk in the Jefferson-Gravois Bank, who was drowned.

Edward Oldham of 3123 Texas avenue, one of the skiff party, said after the return that the four were swimming in an inlet called Smith's Bay, opposite Potomac street. Day swam out some distance from shore, then began to weaken and called for help. Oldham said he swam to Day and grasped his hair, but that Day struggled, broke away from him and sank. The others in the party were C. Edward Bauer of 4162 Cleveland avenue and William Telthorst of 3214 South Ninth street.

The others made an unsuccessful effort to recover Day's body. He was wearing a green bathing suit.

PRESIDENT FORECASTS IMPROVED CONDITIONS

Gradual Betterment May Reasonably Be Expected, He Tells Kansas Farmers—Gives Credit to Republican Party for Aiding Them.

DECLARES THAT IT CHECKED DEFLATION

Contrasts Farm Legislation of Republican Congress With Policy of Previous Administration — Says Tariff Helps Farmer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., June 23.—Out here in the Kansas wheat belt this afternoon the President gave the farmers of Kansas and the rest of the nation his ideas of what the administration had done for agriculture. Farmers from miles around had come to hear him.

The President painted a black picture of agricultural conditions under the previous administration and then sketched in rosy colors the improvement which he said had been effected by wise measures of relief passed by the Republican Congress. One of the policies for which he gave the party credit was the checking of the "drastic deflation" which he said, appeared to have been aimed by the previous administration "especially at the destruction of agriculture's prosperity."

Forecasts Improvement.

Owing to improved conditions the President said, the farm products of the country were worth two billion dollars more in 1922 than they were in 1921. He declared that the worst of the agricultural depression had been passed and that gradual improvement was henceforth reasonably to be expected.

The President's speech might be described as a chtalogue of Republican achievements in behalf of the farmer. He made a point of the restoration of the proper balance between livestock and grain production. Another stroke for the farmer was the resuscitation of the War Finance Corporation. The wisdom of giving this body a credit of one billion dollars and commissioning it to go to the aid of the farmer had been demonstrated, he said, by results. Then the emergency tariff was passed "to secure the farmer's home market against the flood of competing articles from distant corners of the earth."

Points to Other Measures.

Other measures to which the President pointed with pride were the granting of a credit of $50,000,000 to the Federal Farm Loan Board so that it might resume lending on farm property, passage of a bill to facilitate the co-operative marketing of farm products, legislation to prevent harmful gambling in grain futures, the act for the control of the packers, reductions of freight rates on agricultural products and the increasing of the individual loan limit imposed on the Federal land banks from $10,000 to $25,000.

A measure of the utmost importance, he said, was the act authorizing the formation of irrigation districts. To the possible criticism that the administration had paid too much attention to the welfare of the farmer, the President replied "that the farmer has received nothing more than was coming to him; nothing more than he needed; nothing more than was good for him, nothing that was not good for all of our national interests."

Crowning Achievement.

The crowning achievement of all, the President said, was the passage of the agricultural credits act of 1923. He expressed confidence that this new scheme of credits for the farmer would remove the obstacles which had made it hard for the farmer to conduct his operations on a businesslike basis. The act, he said, would repair a lack in ordinary

BRITISH ATTITUDE TOWARD SEIZURE OF RUHR DEFENDED

Under Secretary Expresses Fear That Occupation Will Cause Economic Collapse of Germany.

DECLARES THAT MEANS LOSS OF REPARATIONS

Would Preserve Entente, but Is Opposed to Supporting France at Expense of Britain's Rights.

By the Associated Press.

CANTERBURY, England, June 23.—Undersecretary Ronald McNeill, spokesman for the Foreign Secretary in the House of Commons, defended the British Government's attitude toward the Ruhr occupation in an address at Sturry, near here, today.

He saw no possibility of either Great Britain or France getting proper monetary redress for their frightful expenditures during the war merely by occupying a part of Germany's industrial district. The great fear was justifiable that, if the occupation continued, it would result in the social and economic collapse of the Germans. This the British might view with complete indifference as far as Germany was concerned, except that it would extinguish the last hope or expectation of ever recovering from Germany the money she owed.

McNeill declared there was no difference between Great Britain and France on the main question of preserving the Entente, but Great Britain had her rights in the reparations question and could not, in supporting France, lose sight of her own interests.

Marks Strengthened by Regulation Restricting Transactions.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 23.—An order from President Ebert dealing with transactions in exchange was promulgated today, becoming effective immediately. The regulations provide that in exchange for the Reichsmark or securities payable in the Reichsmark payments and charges can only be met in such foreign currencies as are officially quoted in Berlin and only at the day's official price. On days when the currency in question is not quoted officially no transactions may be concluded in it except in transactions with the Reichsbank.

It provided that business done in contravention of these regulations shall be null and void.

Violation of the regulation is punishable by a fine of 10 times the amount of foreign money involved, or by three years' imprisonment, or both.

The mark showed an improvement of more than 14,000 points on the dollar in the Berlin exchange market today as a result of the decree.

Nearly 2,000,000,000,000 Paper Marks Issued Last Week.

(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

BERLIN, June 23.—The Reichsbank's official statement shows that nearly 2,000,000,000,000 paper marks were issued last week, making a total circulation of over 15,000,000,000,000. As the total on Jan. 1 was less than last week's issue, the Government is faced with the danger of losing control of finances entirely. Chancellor Cuno tried to create an exchange clearing house, but all the banks are so deep in speculation they found it technically impossible to agree.

Indian Princess Sues Boxer.

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., June 23.—Mary Elkins, full-blooded Osage Indian Princess, owner of 5000 acres of oil land in the Osage nation, and reputed to have an income of $25,000 a year, after a hectic career in Colorado Springs today filed suit for divorce from her white husband, Wilbur Corbett, known as Bobby Corbett, local boxer. She charged her husband, whom she married May 3 after a courtship of six days, with cruelty and endeavoring to "browbeat" her into signing over to him her oil lands.

BRITISH SAY U. S. REVERSES ITS OWN STAND ON SHIP LAW

Newspapers Assail Liquor Seizures—Lawyers Assert This Country Has Held Its Vessels Amenable Only to Its Statutes.

(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 23.—The storm of criticism by the press and public which broke today, as was expected, with the news that the British customs seals on liquor aboard British liners, intended for the return voyage, had been broken and that the liquor had been seized.

Two newspapers are inclined to treat the matter as a joke, although they say the humor is in rather bad taste.

Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail says editorially:

"Before the United States carries any further its attempt to force prohibition on British shipping, it would do well to understand what the British position is.

"To us, our shipping is our very existence. Without its earnings, we cannot hope to pay the enormous amount we have borrowed from the United States. Nor can we permit our shipping to be arbitrarily attacked or harassed. If it were believed in this country that our ships were being so attacked, retaliatory legislation against United States ships would be certain and inevitable. The scope of such legislation might be very wide indeed. Furthermore, we believe we are entirely in the right. The law, as laid down in the past by the United States, is on our side."

The Daily Mail emphasizes an article—which it publishes—by an international lawyer, who writes:

'As regards the status of merchant ships in foreign ports, the United States in the past has maintained that her ships, as far as their internal affairs are concerned, are subject only to the laws of the United States. In 1806, the United States asserted this doctrine against the French and it was upheld in the French courts. That great American jurist, Henry Wheaton, in his work on international law, said of this decision in France that 'It establishes the true law and is most in conformity with the law of nations.'"

International lawyers are recalling today that in the case of Wildenhus, in 1886, it was laid down by Chief Justice Waite of the United States Supreme Court that it had come to be generally recognized, under the law of nations, that all matters of discipline and all things done on board which affect only the vessel—or those belonging to her—and which involve the peace or dignity of the country or the tranquility of the port, should be left to be dealt with by the authorities of the nation to which that vessel belonged.

The Evening Standard today takes issue with the tactics of the British lines which are making a test case. The Standard asserts it is a matter of diplomatic adjustment, writing:

"The United State Supreme Court has already decided every question which it is proposed to raise now. The case is between the Government of Great Britain and the Government of the United States.

"Great Britain is concerned, not with American law or American law courts, but with the power which makes law.

"Diplomatic representation is the only dignified way to deal with this matter, which concerns, not only local law, but international amenities. It is the business of the diplomacy of Europe to represent to Washington, quite courteously but with perfect firmness, that while America has the right to pass what laws she likes for control of her own citizens and of foreigners while on her soil, she has no title to legislate—as, in fact she is doing—in restriction of the rights of foreigners on the high seas.

Henry M. Wheaton was a jurist and diplomat, born in Rhode Island in 1785. His most important work is "Elements of International Law," which has been regarded as a standard authority. He was the first diplomatic agent from the United States to Denmark, and negotiated a treaty with Germany which, although rejected by the United States Senate, was the basis for subsequent treaties.

DECISION IN DAVIES WILL CASE TO BE ANNOUNCED JULY 2

Attorney for Zeitun Gets Continuance—Davis May Be Called in to Produce Wills.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 23.—A decision in the Davies will case which was to have been made Monday by Probate Judge Kirkland at Liberty, will not be announced until Monday, July 2. Hunt C. Moore, attorney for Capt. Harry Lello Zeitun of London, asked for a continuance, saying he would not be able to be in court Monday.

Remarks of Judge Kirkland have been taken to indicate that he will grant the application of Moore for a citation requiring Thomas O. Stokes of St. Louis, attorney for George W. Davies, to produce in court the two alleged wills of Mrs. Julia Woods Davies, in which Zeitun is named as beneficiary. Those wills are reported to have been made after the will in which Davies is named as his wife's beneficiary. If the wills are produced in court it is expected that long litigation over Mrs. Davies' estate will follow. Capt. Zeitun and his atorney will be required to prove the authenticity of the London wills.

Mrs. Davies, a daughter of the late Dr. W. H. Woods, Kansas City banker, left an estate estimated at $500,000.

A review of this case appears in the True Life Section of the Post-Dispatch today.

Will Elect Stoehr's Successor.

The Tenth Ward Improvement and Taxpayers' Association will meet at 2:30 p. m. today at Held Hall, Broadway and Chippewa street, to elect a successor to Arthur Stoehr, who was ousted as president last Sunday. Stoehr, also a member of the Citizens' Supervisory Committee on bond issue expenditures, was ousted because he differed with the association in its demand for completion of the proposed northeast approach to the free bridge, regardless of whether the cost exceeds the $1,500,000 bond issue voted for the approach.

The other conditions put forward by the President—equality in electing Judges, payment of America's share of the upkeep, no changes in the court statute without United States consent, would probably be accepted at Geneva, though some amending would be required

But those who seek thus early to transform the statute in the vital matter of election of Judges—gradual transformation is bound to come—are wasting their time. Possibly they are doing a signal disservice to the cause they have at heart.

WORST OF ERUPTIONS AT MOUNT ETNA BELIEVED OVER

U. S. Consul at Catanian Says Flow of Lava Was From Supplemental Craters on Mountain Side.

By the Associated Press.

CATANIA, June 23.—All indications are that the worst part of the Mount Etna eruption is over. This does not mean that the flow of lava, stone, ashes and cinders will cease immediately, but the flow has lessened considerably from early in the week when the people of the surrounding country fled from the lava stream.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—W. Roderick Dorsey, American Consul at Cantania, Italy, today advised the State Department that published reports concerning the eruption of Mount Etna have been exaggerated. There has been no loss of life but the property loss has been considerable, Consul Dorsey stated.

The flow of lava has not been from the main crater of Mount Etna, he adds, but from two supplemental craters lower down on the northeast side of the mountain and on the opposite side from Catania.

No large towns have been destroyed, although Linguaglossa, with a population of 8000, has been threatened.

FINES OF CHICAGO UNION OFFICIALS UPHELD BY COURT

State Body Rules Illegal Attempts to Enforce Closed Shop in an Open Shop.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 23.—Attempts of labor unions to enforce the closed shop by inducing employes in an open shop to quit work are held illegal by the State Supreme Court in an opinion upholding fines assessed against the Chicago Carpenter's District Council, Thomas F. Church and William Brims.

Fines were assessed against the defendants for violating an injunction to prevent them from interfering with the business of the Anderson & Lind Manufacturing Co. of Chicago. The injunction was the result of a fight on the company to compel it to abandon the open shop.

UNION DOMINATES MINES, SOUTHWEST OPERATORS SAY

"Monopolistic" Policy Must Stop or Industry in Section Will Be Endangered, Coal Commission Told.

CHARGE INTERFERENCE HOLDS DOWN OUTPUT

Report Contends Hampering of Owners Has Increased Cost of Production 25 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Unless Southwestern coal operators obtain relief from the "monopolistic domination" of the United Mine Workers of America, the mines will be compelled to curtail their output and the entire coal industry in the Souhwest will be endangered, the Southwestern Interstate Coal Operators' Association reported to the Federal Coal Commission today.

"Unless active steps are taken," the report declared, "the coal mining industry in the Southwest will soon largely be a thing of the past."

Members of the United Mine Workers of America, it was charged, have stinted coal production by a policy of constant interference with operation and have increased fuel prices by blocking installation of labor-saving devices.

The miners, the report declared, have crippled efficiency and made proper management impossible by wholesale violations of an agreement made in 1903 by union and operators' representatives, giving the owners control of operation methods.

The association, it was stated, represents 300 mines and between 25,000 and 30,000 workers in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, producing 13,000,000 tons of coal annually.

Miners' Policy Assailed.

"The policy and practices of the United Mine Workers of America have become insuperable obstacles to the efficient regulation of coal in the Southwest," the statement alleged.

"This policy has involved wholesale violations of contract, interference with the legitimate functions of management, maintenance of an exorbitantly high wage scale, resistance to the introduction of labor-saving machinery and safety devices, and the use of intimidation and violence to prevent any operator or worker from mining coal except under the combination of this labor monopoly.

"The utter inability of the operator, on account of interference by the United Mine Workers, to exercise free and untrammeled management, from the viewpoint of economics, good judgment and scientific mining, has increased the cost of production at least 25 per cent in this territory."

Charging violations of the agreement with the operators, which vests management control in the employers, forbids local strikes and provides for arbitration of disputes, the operators' report asserts that the mine exerted arbitrary control over working conditions and followed a systematic policy of shutting down work on frivolous pretexts.

1873 Outlaw Strikes, Report Says.

"Between April 16, 1916, and Dec. 21, 1921," the report sets forth, "there were 1873 outlaw strikes in the Kansas district, causing a loss of 1,609,041 man days, with a loss to miners in wages of $10,552,557."

The report concluded with the recommendations that the wage scale in the coal industry be brought in line with those in other industries; that interference with management by the union be stopped; that labor unions be made legally responsible for their acts, and that the southwestern field be granted independence in making wage contracts with its men and not forced to conform its wage scale to that of the central states.

Coal Commission to Report by July 1 on Investigation of Industry.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The Coal Commission is rushing to completion its report on wages, profits and costs in anthracite mining, so that its findings may be brought to bear on a labor situation of increasing intensity now arising in the industry.

Wage contracts will expire Aug. 31, and a strike is threatened unless negotiations for a new scale are successful.

In recent union elections, supporters of John L. Lewis, national head of the United Mine Workers, have been defeated, and it is considered certain that when delegates of anthracite workers meet June 26, to frame new wage demands, the element newly in control in official circles of the unions will attempt to gain substantial wage increases. The commission is required to make a report by July to aid in the wage negotiations.

President Harding was advised of impending danger of the anthracite supply just before departing for the West. He wrote a letter to John Hays Hammond, chairman of the Coal Commission, stressing the necessity of keeping the mines in operation. The commission, in behalf of the Government, is preparing to take an active part as soon as the miners' union representatives meet the committees representing mine operators, and to insist upon a settlement.

Two Reports to Be Made.

While the commission's report as to costs, profits, and operating conditions in the anthracite fields will be only a partial one—since major conclusions as to public policy affecting coal production will be left for its final report on the bituminous branch of the industry next fall—its members hope to have a considerable amount of data on the usual issues in wage negotiations clearly refined so as to be incontrovertible.

In the matter of wages, the commission will show the actual earnings of virtually all the anthracite workers, grouped on a scale running from $300 a year to $3000 and $4000, according to number of days employed and rate of pay. The largest group of anthracite workers, it is expected, will be shown as earing annual incomes of $1700 to $1800, at approximately 270 days of work a year.

When the report comes to finding the costs of anthracite—now somewhere around a base of $8.20 at the mines—commission members expect to face another vexatious problem. Some big anthracite producing companies are inclined to deal with production costs on the assumption that the unmined coal in the ground is worth 10 cents per ton, while a number of independent producers leased landowners and leased land developers value it all the way up to $2.40 a ton.

Plans for Figuring Costs.

Tentatively it has been decided to set up three sets of average cost figures in the report. One will show the cost of producing anthracite at present labor rates plus such capital charges as would arise from the actual investment of mine operators, where these can be ascertained. A second set of cost figures will use the Treasury income tax rulings, where the capital charges will be swelled by the inclusion of allowed depletion charges for the value of anthracite as mined. The third set will show the available cost figures as they would be when governed by Supreme Court decisions as to allowable land values and unmined coal values, and these costs are likely to show the full capital increment of the rising prices of anthracite.

REFEREE FINDS FOR GERALDINE FARRAR IN DIVORCE ACTION

Report States That Decree Is Justified on Evidence Concerning Tellegen and Two Actresses.

CONFIRMATION TO BE SOUGHT NEXT WEEK

'I Am Very Glad the Lady Got Her Divorce; I Wanted Her to Have Her Freedom,' Actor Declares.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Geraldine Farrar is entitled to a divorce from her actor husband, Lou Tellegen, Referee Thomas H. Mahoney said today in a report to be filed next week with the County Clerk.

Introduction of evidence of Tellegen's relations with Kathleen Clifford, musical comedy actress, and with Lorna Ambler, Australian actress, is sufficient proof of Miss Farrar's charges of misconduct, the report holds to justify granting a decree.

The prima donna's divorce suit was brought in answer to Tellegen's suit for separation Aug. 6, 1921, after the couple had been married five years. In his suit, the actor charged Miss Farrar had locked him out of their home on West 74th street for eleven days.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Miss Farrar, said tonight that he would appear before Supreme Court Justice Cohalan next week to move for judicial confirmation of the report and entry of an interlocutory decree in the singer's favor.

"I am very glad the lady got her divorce," Tellegen said tonight. "From the beginning I wanted her to have her freedom, and now that she has it, I wish her all the joy and happiness in the world."

CLOTHING MANUFACTURING CONCERN GIVEN TO EMPLOYES

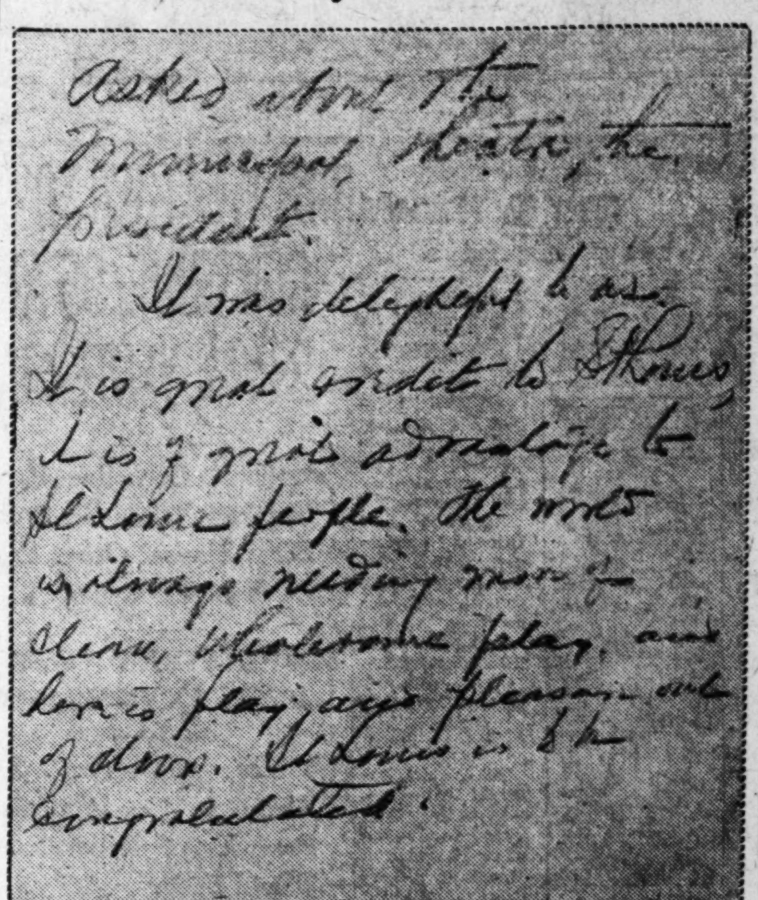
M. Martin & Co., Doing Annual Business Amounting to Millions, Turned Over to 4 Workers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Herbert S. Martin, president and owner of M. Martin & Co., manufacturers of women's wear, which has an international business amounting to millions of dollars a year, has turned over the concern to four employes, who have been with the organization more than 20 years. He declined cash offers from outsiders and arranged to have the employes pay for the business out of their earnings on easy terms.

He will now devote all his time to S. W. Straus & Co., bankers, of which he is vice president, and the Ambassador Hotels Corporation, of which he is treasurer. He will remain as chairman of the board of directors and the finance committee of M. Martin & Co.

Appraisement of the Municipal Theater by President Harding



Asked about the Municipal theatre, the President.

It was delightful to us. It is great credit to St Louis. It is of great advantage to St Louis people. The world is always needing more of clean, wholesome play, and here is play and pleasure out of doors. St Louis is to be congratulated.

"It Was Delightful to Us—It Is a Great Credit to St. Louis," He Writes.

AFTER President Harding had left the Municipal Opera Thursday night and was resting in a suite in Hotel Chase preparatory to going to the hotel roof garden for a dinner, W. B. Weisenburger, who was conducting the Presidential party here, asked him for an expression on the opera and handed him pencil and paper in the hope that he would continue his mood of responding to any request, though it involved the bending of Presidential custom.

Instinctively the newspaper training of the President manifested itself and, in complying, he phrased what he wrote as a newspaper man might write it: "Asked about the Municipal Theater, the President—" "But," he said, "I am sure you will not treat this as a Presidential proclamation and, without signing it, I will just put down what I think."

Accordingly he broke off the indirect quotation he had begun to write and set down the following appraisement of the opera which is reproduced above as he wrote it:

"It was delightful to us. It is a great credit to St. Louis. It is of great advantage to St. Louis people. The world is always needing more of clean, wholesome play and here is play and pleasure out of doors. St. Louis is to be congratulated."

BRITISH SEALS BROKEN, LIQUOR ON SHIP SEIZED BY U. S. AGENTS

certain amount of medicinal liquor—considerably in excess of what the Majestic, a large vessel, carried on her outward voyage.

The surplus liquor was taken from the Baltic, and the Berengaria's seals were broken.

The official statistics on the quantities of liquor brought into port by the two vessels, left and seized, follow:

The Baltic brought: 5736 bottles of beer, ale and stout; 325 bottles of spirits, 119 bottles of wine, 38 bottles of liqueurs, 70½ bottles of brandy, listed as regular medicinal supply.

The Baltic lost: 5159 bottles of beer, ale and stout; 80 bottles of spirits, no wine, 38 bottles of liqueurs.

The Baltic had left: 577 bottles of beer, ale and stout; 245 bottles of spirits, 119 bottles of wine, 70½ bottles of brandy, her regular medicinal supply.

The Berengaria brought: 3888 bottles of beer, 130 gallons of spirits, 47½ gallons of wine.

The Berengaria lost: 3038 bottles of beer, ale and stout; 31 gallons of spirits.

The Berengaria had left 850 bottles of beer, ale and stout, 99 gallons of spirits, 47½ gallons of wine.

No Effort to Prevent Seizure.

Neither the White Star Line nor the Cunard Line instituted any proceedings to prevent removal of the liquor. While the Cunard Line applied for a permit for the Berengaria to carry all her liquor as medicinal supplies, the White Star did nothing except list the Baltic's stock on her manifest.

Explaining the permits which he granted, Dr. Sprague said that the amounts he allowed were required by British law, and declared he would be guided in fixing the medicinal liquor needs of incoming vessels by the laws of the countries from which they came.

Officers of the Baltic, however, said the 70½ bottles of spirits carried regularly in the medical stores fulfilled the requirements of the British law, that there should be a gallon for each hundred passengers and crew. Although French law calls for wine rations for the crew, the British officers said no such provisions were contained in the laws under which they sailed. They laughingly said that the quantity allowed them would answer legally for a passenger list of 25,000.

Washington Officials Persist in Rigid Ship Liquor Rulings.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Disclaiming all responsibility for the delays which complicated seizure of the sealed liquor stores of the Baltic and Berengaria in New York today, Treasury and prohibition officials here persisted in their determination to confiscate all bar liquor brought into American waters. They reiterated their previous announcement that it was for the officials in New York harbor to put this policy promptly into effect.

The only instructions issued from Washington during the day, it was asserted, were intended to strengthen rather than to mitigate the confiscation program.

Assistant Secretary Moss ordered Dr. E. K. Sprague, public health officer at New York, to revoke a permit the Treasury heard he had given for the liner Berengaria to retain all liquor it carried for medicinal purposes. The action Dr. Sprague was reported to have taken officially was the principal reason for a restatement of the Treasury's interpretation of the Supreme Court ruling barring beverage liquor from territorial waters of the United States.

Instructions to U. S. Agents.

The Berengaria's stocks were reported to the Treasury as "out of all proportion to any possible need" the ship could have for medicinal liquor. Moss, in a telegram to Dr. Sprague, Assistant Collector Stuart and Palmer Canfield, prohibition director for New York, said that in the recent letter of Secretary Mellon, dealing with medicinal liquor and crew rations, "it was not intended, and it was expressly so stated by the Secretary, to allow any liquors to be brought into territorial waters of the United States except such as were intended for medicinal purposes."

Moss called attention to the exemption granted liquor for crew rations, but this exemption constitutes a restriction also, in his opinion, so he told the Federal representatives they were obligated to relax the regulations no more for medicinal purposes or rations than required by the laws of the country under whose flag the ship operated.

The telegram concluded with the order that Federal agents "will immediately make seizure" of such liquor stores as do not fall within the exemptions authorized by the regulations and the supplemental letter by Secretary Mellon.

Pertinent British Court Ruling.

Attention has been drawn to a recent decision of the British high court of justice, King's bench division, in London. It resulted in assessment against the German ship Cleopatra of a fine of £500 sterling and costs for having about 90 gallons of spirits concealed in her bunker coal. The evidence indicated there was no intention to land the liquor on British soil.

The Cleopatra had come from Finland, and was en route to Antwerp, where, it was indicated, the hidden liquor was to be sent ashore. The Lord Chief Justice held "that it was immaterial whether the contraband was to have been taken to Antwer or not," and imposed the £500 fi with costs by way of "warning others."

The report on the case showed that the presence of the liquor in British waters constituted "importation" within the meaning of British law.

WASHINGTON U. GETS THE PARSONS ART COLLECTION

Paintings Valued at Several Hundred Thousands Go to University Through Death of Charles Parsons Pettus.

WORKS HAD BEEN IN CUSTODY OF BANKER

Collection Includes 80 Oil Paintings, Many by Masters, and Some 360 Other Art Objects.

Washington University, through the tragic death Friday of Charles Parsons Pettus, vice president of the American Trust Co., comes into possession of one of the finest, if not the finest, private art collections in St. Louis, that of the late Charles Parsons, valued at several hundred thousand dollars.

The collection had been placed in custody of Pettus for the period of his life, the will of Parsons specifying that it should be delivered to the university at the time of Pettus' death. The collection has been housed in a gallery adjoining the Pettus home at 33 Westmoreland place.

As was told in dispatches yesterday from Latrobe, Pa., Pettus was fatally injured when riding horseback alone near a suburb of Pittsburg. It is presumed that he either fell or was thrown from his horse. He died without having regained consciousness.

The Parsons collection contains about 80 oil paintings and about 360 art objects, including valuable collections of Chinese porcelains and Japanese lacquered ware.

Parsons, who was president of the State National Bank, set aside a fund of $75,000, the income from which was to be used in the care of the collection and additions to it. Pettus added seven valuable paintings to the collection from this fund.

Many Works by Great Artists.

More than one-third of the paintings are by great painters whose works now command very high prices and the remainder, though not commanding such great prices, are the works of recognized artists. Among the outstanding pictures of the collection are the following:

French School: Corot, "Path by the Sea;" Cazin, "Path on the Cliffs;" Diaz, "Wood Interior," and group; Jules Dupre, "The River;" Jacque, landscape with sheep; Harpignies, landscape; L'Hermitte, "The Harvest Field" (on exhibition at City Art Museum); Van Marcke, Cattle; Jules Breton, "Monday;" Bonnat, "Peasant Girl;" Brion, "The Invasion;" Calame, "Mountain Landscape;" Monchablon, "Lake Near a Village."

Dutch School—Mauve, sheep; Jacob Maris, "Town in Holland;" Neuhuys, Interior; Israels, "Mother and Children."

American School—Frederick E. Church, "Sierra Nevada;" A. H. Wyant, landscape, and George Inness, "New England Village."

Member of Museum Board.

Pettus was a member of the Board of Directors of the City Art Museum, and a patron of art. He was also a member of several clubs. He was treasurer of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis.

Pettus had left the Rolling Rock Country Club at Ligonier, a suburb of Pittsburg, alone on a horse owned by his brother-in-law, Thurston Wright, of Pittsburg. He was an expert horseman and the horse was not known as an unruly one.

Farmer boys came upon Pettus unconscious beside a road at about the time the horse galloped up to the country club riderless. The farmer boys carried him to a nearby farmhouse and he was then removed to a hospital in Latrobe. He died within an hour while surgeons were working for the relief of skull fracture which he had suffered.

Pettus had been East to attend the graduation of his son, Thomas, from a preparatory school at Lawrenceville, N. J., and was visiting at the country club, which is on the private estate of R. S. Mellon, president of the Mellon bank of Pittsburg, a brother of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

The body of Pettus was to arrive in St. Louis today at 8:30 a. m. Private funeral services will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. from the residence, the Rev. Dr. Edward S. Travers of St. Peter's Episcopal Church officiating. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Pettus was 46 years old and was born in St. Louis. His father, W. H. Pettus, died last year at an advanced age. His wife, who was Miss Georgia Wright, was in St. Louis at the time of her husband's death, with her four other children, Charles P. Jr., Martha, Thurston and Mary.

MISS EDIE O'DWYER.

IT was a great day for the Irish when Jockey Steve Donoghue rode Barney Irish's "Papyrus" to victory in the recent English Derby, and Miss Edie O'Dwyer, a Dublin shopgirl, will add her testimony to that fact. She held the winning ticket in a national betting pool and it paid her 60,000 pounds, normally $300,000. The photograph shows just after she had received the news of her good luck.

HARDING SAYS CREDIT ACT SHOULD REMOVE FARM FINANCE OBSTACLES

banking practice which, being adapted primarily to the needs of the merchant and manufacturer, failed to give the farmer a needed intermediate credit between the short time industrial loan and the long-time mortgage. He believed that Congress had worked out a scientific efficient and well-rounded method of agricultural finance. He described the system and its anticipated effects in detail.

Much of the President's address was taken up with an historical sketch of the emancipation of the farmer from his original serfdom. He told in eloquent fashion of the hardships of the pioneers who went and dug in, "battled with nature and her elements and conquered."

Reads Friendly Lecture.

It was interesting to recall these days of the covered wagon, the tallow dip and the kerosene lamp, he said, because the recollection brought "reminders to quell needless insurgency" and was conducive to the "moderate contentment which will tend to bliss."

Problems as well as liberation, he went on, had come with the emancipation. He brought into the picture the blue-sky stock salesman who could "dissipate a farm surplus with ready facility" and along with the implied warning against his wiles, read the crowd a little friendly lecture. He was sorry, he said, that modern farm life was too often giving way to modern extravagances for "in the rise and fall of nations, the simple-living peoples will make the long survivals and record the notable triumphs."

Finally the President lauded the farmer as "the stalwart defender of the American heritage," and declared he must continue to be "the stabilizer of sentiment and the defender of the fundamentals upon which is builded the republic which wrought his emancipation."

"We All Have Common Devotion to the Republic," Harding Says.

By the Associated Press.

ON BOARD PRESIDENT HARDING'S SPECIAL TRAIN AT DODGE CITY, Kan., June 23.—President Harding, in a rear platform address here tonight declared that "every one concerned with the affairs of Government is refreshed and more consecrated to his duties by coming in contact with those in the great open spaces."

"I have found in my travels," the President added, "that we all have common habits, common customs and a common devotion to the Republic. I am not here campaigning. I just want your help in making our country the greatest in the world."

Harding Shown How Wheat Nets Farmers 10 Cents an Acre.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., June 23.—Before going into the wheat field today the President had a long talk with Chester O'Neal, a farmer of years of experience in the Kansas district, who summed up the farmers' troubles. The explanation was invited by the chief executive when he inquired whether the wheat growers of the Kansas belt were making money. "We won't make any this year," O'Neal said.

Senator Capper added: "They didn't make any last year, either."

"What's the matter?" the President asked.

"Well," O'Neal continued, in response, "I'll give you the figures as near as we can make them out.

"The land investment costs $5 a year in interest on each acre. Plowing costs $1.50 per acre a year; harrowing, 25 cents; drilling, 33 cents; cutting, $2.50 an acre; threshing, $2.25; hauling, 72 cents, and seed, 85 cents an acre." The total cost for the yield per acre was added by the President and found to be $13.40.

Then O'Neal said taxes had not been counted with the other factors and should be taken into account at $1.80 an acre, bringing the total cost to $15.20.

"What is your return?" the President inquired.

"We get 85 cents a bushel now," the farmer replied, adding that 18 bushels was a high estimate for the acre yield this summer.

The net result was tabulated to show that against a cost of $15.20, the farmer received $15.30, or a profit of 10 cents an acre.

"And," O'Neal concluded, "the 10 cents won't feed us."

President to Attend Church and Drive in Mountains.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., June 23.—President Harding will reach this city early Sunday morning. The President and Mrs. Harding will attend services in the morning at the First Baptist Church and in the afternoon they will visit the Fitzsimmons Hospital for disabled war veterans. The rest of the afternoon, it was explained, will be devoted to an automobile ride through nearby mountain parks.

Monday morning Mrs. Harding will receive a large number of members of the Ohio Society at her hotel.

From Denver the presidential party will go to Cheyenne, Wyo., the train crossing into Wyoming late Monday afternoon. The President will spend approximately 40 hours in Colorado.

THE REV. R. C. CAVE, 81, DIES AT HIS HOME

He Formerly Was Pastor of the Old Non-Sectarian Church.

The Rev. Robert C. Cave, 81 years old, former pastor of the old Non-Sectarian Church, which stood at Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, died last night at his home, 4511 McPherson avenue, of heart disease, following an illness of about six months.

He came to St. Louis as pastor of the Central Christian Church, now the Union Avenue Christian Church, 735 Union boulevard. In 1889 he preached a sermon at the old Central Christian Church, at Finney and Grand avenues, which brought a storm of criticism because of liberal views expressed. He withdrew from the church, and had virtually decided to quit the ministry, but members of his former congregation persuaded him to organize a new church, the Non-Sectarian.

Remarks That Caused Storm.

The sermon which resulted in the Rev. Mr. Cave's leaving the Central Christian Church centered on a discussion of the Old Testament stories. He asserted that these old stories did not represent God truly—that the church could not uphold them without antagonizing the moral sense of the present time, and that "the church ought to reject these Old Testament stories and call man to the aceptance of no God other than the infinitely loving Father manifested by Jesus."

A storm of criticism resulted and publication of the sermon caused comment elsewhere in the country. He was declared to have assailed fundamentals of the church. His congregation passed resolutions indorsing him, but he decided to withdraw from the Christian Church.

The Non-Sectarian Church required its members to subscribe to no creed, and submit to no doctrinal tests. Every individual was conceded the right to think for himself, the only requirement being that they endeavor to learn and do what was right. Sermons preached by the Rev. Mr. Cave were widely quoted and attracted a large congregation.

Filled Pulpit 13 Years.

The Rev. Mr. Cave filled the pulpit of this church for 13 years, after which he retired because of failing health. The church edifice at the southewst corner of Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue later was sold to a Methodist congregation and the building was removed.

After 27 years of separation from his former church, he was received into the Union Avenue Christian Church on Feb. 26, 1917.

He was a Confederate veteran, and suffered three wounds in engagements during the Civil War.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed, but the services probably will be held Tuesday. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Fannie S. Cave, 80 years old; four sons, Elmore Cave, E. P. Cave and former Judge Rhodes E. Cave of St. Louis, and W. D. Cave of Springfield, Ill., and one daughter, Mrs. A. O. Rule, living in California.

SHEET METAL CONTRACTORS TO OPEN MEETING TOMORROW

"Fire Prevention" to Be One of Chief Topics of Discussion at Convention.

The National Association of Sheet Metal Contractors will open its 1923 convention at Hotel Statler tomorrow and will continue with daily sessions until Friday night. An extensive program has been arranged. Among the speakers will be former United States Senator Xenaphon Wilfley and F. Paul Anderson, dean of the Research Bureau of the American Steam Heating and Ventilating Engineers' Society.

One of the chief topics of discussion will be "Fire Prevention." A special committee which has investigated this phase of the association's activities will make a report, and an address on the subject will be delivered by George A. Madison, Chief Inspector of the St. Louis Fire Prevention Bureau.

MONUMENTS TO BE UNVEILED

Ceremony Today at Graves of Two Soldiers Killed in Action.

Monuments at the graves of two St. Louisans who were killed in action with the 138th (St. Louis) Infantry in France, during the World War, will be unveiled at Memorial Park Cemetery at 3 p. m. today.

The men were Roy E. Brem of D Company, son of Mrs. Anna M. Brem of 4564 McMillan avenue, and Matthew Charles Klasing of C Company, son of Mrs. George Klasing of 6813 Scanlan avenue. E. J. McMahon, who was commander of the regiment for a time, will deliver the principal address. Mrs. Karl Kimmel will sing. Gold star mothers are invited. There will be a free bus from the Kirkwood-Ferguson cars at Lucas and Hunt roads.

FALL FATAL TO IRONWORKER

Harry D. Knowles, 41 years old, a structural iron worker, living at 1312 Chouteau avenue, was fatally injured at 8:30 a. m. yesterday when he fell 75 feet to the ground from the framework of a building being erected for the new Cahokia plant of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., south of East St. Louis. He died 20 minutes later in an ambulance.

Other employes said Knowles lost his footing on an iron girder. He suffered a fractured skull, internal injuries, and several bones were fractured.

W. B. ROBERTSON HEADS 35TH DIVISION AIR UNITS

110 Men Mustered Into Federal and State Service by Assistant Secretary Davis.

William B. Robertson of 5063 Westminster place, president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation and a former army aviator, was elected Major to command the new air service units of the Thirty-fifth Division of the National Guard at the 138th Regiment Armory last night. One hundred and 10 men were mustered into the Federal and State service by Dwight Davis of St. Louis, Assistant Secretary of War.

The men elected the following officers: Captains—Joseph Head and Charles Ray Wassall; First Lieutenants, Emanuel Hahn, Frank H. Robertson (a brother of the Major), Albert Smith Jr., Clyde H. Smith, Frank E. Vrooman and Russell A. Young; second lieutenants, Eugene McMahan, William Monroe Robertson, Herbert H. Teichman, George Stump and William B. Wimer. These in turn elected the Major. A surgical officer is yet to be chosen.

Col. C. S. Thornton, commander of the 138th Infantry, will have administrative supervision over the units. Many of the enlisted men will be made noncommissioned officers. The units will serve the whole division, which covers Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska. They are: 110th Observation Squadron, the chief unit; 110th Photo Section and 110th Intelligence Section.

Davis Makes Brief Talk.

Assistant Secretary Davis administered the oath to the men in a body and afterward said, during a brief speech:

"We are relying on the National Guard in the national military defense scheme, instead of maintaining a large standing army. I think you men are to be congratulated on being in the air service, for that service is to be the defender of our country. The service is suffering from lack of funds now, but I believe we will get an adequate appropriation next year. I will return to Washington tomorrow and then I will take up with Maj.-Gen. Patrick, chief of the Air Service, the matter of getting the very best equipment for you.

"I hope St. Louis some day will be the great aviation center of the country. There have been some important air meets here and I think the National Air Meet here next October will be the biggest of the world. I am going to follow the doings of this unit with particular interest."

Raupp Addresses Men.

Brigadier General Raupp, of the National Guard of Missouri, who chose St. Louis in preference to other cities of the State for the units, made a short talk, followed by Louis P. Aloe, who headed the committee which induced the Government to locate the units in Missouri rather than one of the other states of the division.

Arthur Birge, general manager of the St. Louis Aeronautic Corporation, told the men that they would have the freedom of St. Louis Field, where their hangars will be. Col. Thornton urged a spirit of co-operation and invited the men to join the 138th in a two weeks' encampment at Nevada, Mo., next month. Maj. John A. Paegelow, commandant of Scott Field, who was a guest, told reporters, as did other officials, that the men were an excellent appearing outfit in his opinion.

TOWBOAT ST. LOUIS 15 MILES AHEAD OF CAIRO IN RACE

Lead Reduced One Mile During Day —Craft About 250 Miles South of Memphis.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 23.—Maintaining her substantial lead, the towboat St. Louis was pushing her 6000 tons of freight against the Mississippi River current 15 miles ahead of her rival, the Cairo, in their unofficial race from New Orleans to St. Louis, according to the wireless operator at the local office of the Federal Barge line, which operates the two vessels.

The St. Louis was rounding Bachelor Bend, 496 miles above New Orleans, according to late reports, while the second tow breasted the stream opposite Sunnyside Light, 254 miles south of Memphis. The Cairo reduced the St. Louis' lead by one mile during the day.

BORAH DECLARES HE WILL NOT BE A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE

Believes Harding Will Be Nominated by Republicans, but Says Democratic Situation Is "Perplexing."

By the Associated Press.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 23.—Unqualified assertion that he "will not be a Presidential candidate," and "will not lead a third party" was made by United States Senator Borah of Idaho here today.

He expressed the opinion that President Harding will be nominated by acclamation in the Republican National convention, but said the Democratic situation was "perplexing." He mentioned William G. McAdoo, Gov. Smith of New York, Henry Ford and Oscar Underwood as possible Democratic nominees.

If there is a third party, Borah said, Ford is the man most likely to head it.

Leviathan Beats Mauretania's Speed Record for 25 Hours

Average of 27.48 Knots an Hour Maintained, Against Rate of 27.07 Knots Recorded by Other Craft in 1911.

By Wireless to the New York World and Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

ON BOARD S. S. LEVIATHAN, June 23.—For the 25-hour period ending at 8:17 a. m. daylight saving time today (Saturday), the Leviathan covered 687 nautical miles. Her average speed was 27.48 knots an hour.

Six hundred and eighty-seven nautical miles is 11 miles more than the record made by the Mauretania for a 25-hour stretch, Jan. 25-26, 1911. The Mauretania's average for the 25 hours was 27.07 knots an hour.

William F. Gibbs, the naval architect who had charge of reconditioning the Leviathan, made a little talk to the voyagers. Gibbs, who was weary but triumphant, remarked:

"If our friends, the enemy, want 'to be shown,' let them send the Majestic against the Leviathan. They will be shown."

Many people aboard drew the inference that the Leviathan has "an ace in the hole," another up her sleeve or in her engines, to be used when needed.

"This is a great accomplishment; a glory to the American flag," said Gibbs. "Every phase of this trial proves that every department of the boat is fit."

Conditions Help Leviathan.

To accomplish her triumph the Leviathan crossed an imaginary line 150 miles east of Cape Henry. A deep fog set in; almost stopped the boat. But the world's record has been won for Uncle Sam. Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board immediately sent a wireless message congratulating President Harding.

The conditions for steaming when the boat started from Jupiter Light, Fla., where the run started, were ideal. There was little wind, the sea was calm, in the brgiht moonlight the passengers stayed on deck late, awaiting eagerly the figures from the bridge, which, when posted, they applauded loudly.

To those who sought sleep instead of basking on the deck, the fact that the Leviathan had made a record day's run was the first appetizer—or was it the second? served before breakfast this morning.

Unless delayed by fog the great boat is due at Ambrose Light late tonight. She will dock on Sunday morning; her course at the finish being a slightly easier one than that originally set.

Record in Wireless Sending.

Beside winning the speed record the Leviathan has also the record of wireless transmission from a ship—the greatest ever—more than 16,000 words daily. The four courageous wireless operators on the vessel took a couple of hours' sleep apiece. Gibbs and his brother, who did most to send along the fastest boat, were most of the time in the engine room. Their overalls were covered with dust and grease, but, grimy as they were, the engineers were grinning.

Lasker is receiving congratulations from various parts of the two continents. He is gracious enough to say that he has no ill feeling toward those who criticised this trip.

Little news from the outside world is being received on the Leviathan, whose wireless is being used to send out news.

General Manager Sarnoff and General Superintendent Porter of the Radio Corporation of America, who are on board, co-operated in getting news through from the ship. They even ordered that the high-power station at Rocky Point be at the Leviathan's service. The ship is now transmitting on two circuits simultaneously; such service is unprecedented from aboard a ship.

Text of Lasker's Message on Record-Breaking Run.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The text of Chairman Lasker's message to President Harding on the record run of the Leviathan follows:

"I have the honor to inform you that the S. S. Leviathan, which was reconditioned and put into service through the constant encouragement you have always given the merchant marine, has within the last 25 hours broken all established world records for sustained speed. She has made 28.04 knots in one hour. She has during the 25-hour period made a distance of 687 nautical miles, the average speed being 27.48 knots per hour.

"The distance run is 11 miles further than the fastest record made by a merchant marine ship.

"Thus through its first big ship in its first trial run, America has the largest, the finest and the fastest ship in the world, an inspiring premier ship to our merchant marine.

"May this performance enthuse our people as it should and be some return to you for your constant interest and enthusiasm for America on the sea. It is an historic tribute to the genius of those who redesigned and built the Leviathan, champion of the seas, her officers and crew."

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., is among the passenger on the Leviathan cruise.

Majestic's Captain Says His Craft Has Made 29.7 Knots.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Capt. Bertram Hayes of thesteamship Majestic, which left New York today, when informed of the Leviathan's record-breaking 25-hour cruise, declared he was confident his craft could duplicate this speed any time. The Majestic, he said, had made 29.7 knots per hour while steaming between Casket and the Cherbourg breakwater last year.

OIL SETTLEMENT PLAN BEFORE OBREGON

Gentlemen's Agreement to Form Guarantees for American Property Rights.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, June 23.—President Obregon is considering the first half of a gentleman's agreement between Mexico and the United States, looking to the settlement of the subsoil and petroleum question. The agreement has been drawn up by the recognition conference.

At today's session of the conference the second half of the agreement, looking to the settlement of the agrarian problem, was discussed and at the conclusion of the deliberations Charles B. Warren and John Barton Payne, the American delegates, declared good progress was made.

Under the agreement, which supersedes the treaty of commerce and amity first suggested, Mexico pledges herself upon her national honor to carry out the guarantees which the United States deems necessary before granting recognition to the Obregon Government.

Knowledge that a gentlemen's agreement had been chosen by the conference as a means of securing guarantees for American property rights in Mexico came as a surprise, since no hint had been given as to the method the United States would consider adequate for the protection of its petroleum and agrarian properties.

It is announced that until the petroleum section of the agreement, which President Obregon has under advisement, and the agrarian clauses, which the conference is framing, are complete and approved, the details of the undertaking will not be made public.

New York Brokerage Firm Bankrupt.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Another Stock Exchange brokerage house, but one that has been inactive for considerable time, went into bankruptcy today. The firm was that of Einstein, Ward & Co. against which three creditors filed a petition in United States District Court. Attorneys for the firm declared the bankruptcy was part of a plan of reorganization.

AMERICAN GYMNASTIC MEETING OPENS HERE

Three Hundred Delegates From All Parts of Country in City; Picnic Today.

The twenty-ninth national convention of the American Gymnastic Union opened yesterday at Concordia Turner Hall, Thirteenth and Arsenal streets, with 300 delegates from all parts of the United States in attendance. The sessions will continue daily through Tuesday.

St. Louis district of the union is the largest in America and several thousand members of various turnvereins in St. Louis and neighboring Illinois towns are expected to attend the meetings.

Today there will be a field day and picnic at Belleville, under auspices of the Belleville society at the fairgrounds. Supper will be served at 6 p. m. The exercises of the day will consist of mass drills and various gymnastics. The delegates will return by automobile to St. Louis for a meeting at Concordia Hall.

Tomorrow evening there will be a dance at St. Louis Turner Hall, 1508 Chouteau avenue. Visiting members of the Phi Epsilon Kappa fraternity will be entertained at the same time at the Century Rowing Club.

Editors of Turner publications will meet Tuesday morning and there will be an automobile tour of the city in the afternoon. The North St. Louis Turnverein will give a supper to the visiting delegates Tuesday evening at their hall, Twentieth and Salisbury streets. This function will close the convention.

JOHN DUFFY IS 103 YEARS OLD TODAY

There Will Be No Birthday Celebration and Few Callers Will Get to See Him.

John Duffy is 103 years old today! His quaint leather chair by the front parlor window in the flat at 3633 Page avenue still faces the street, but he no longer sits and watches the automobiles go by. Since weakness grew on him last September he has had to lie on a couch in a room farther back.

The papers the newsboy brought every morning and evening, the sights he used to see from his little front porch after supper, the old friends who came to chat have been taken away by these last two years. He told a reporter yesterday it was getting harder for him to keep the present and the past together. He looks at the ceiling, day after day, he said, and tries to make the old days fit in with what his daughter, Miss Mary B. Duffy, tells him is going on.

Life Swept by Him.

Life overtook and swept by John Duffy 10 years ago, he has admitted in other birthday interviews—life that moved on rubber tires and French heels and airplane wings. The automobiles, may St. Patrick plague 'em, got so numerous he was afraid to walk on the streets. But he did like to sit up in his front parlor or on his porch and read the newspapers and watch the world go to the dogs.

He can't do that any more. He showed his visitor how his knees shook when he stood up. His eyes blur when he tries to read. Although Miss Mary B. Duffy, his daughter, who takes care of him, still gets the papers and hears a share of gossip, Duffy made it plain that such information was confusing at best.

No sooner had his caller mentioned the Post-Dispatch than a centenarian twinkl estirred feebly in his eyes.

"Get it every evening," he remarked; get it every evening."

"My eyesight is poor and I'm very weak," said Duffy, "but my appetite is good and I enjoy what I eat. I think if I could get into the country and walk around a little each day I would get better."

Broken Noticeably Since 1921.

Duffy has broken noticeably since 1921. Last year he managed to receive guests at his birthday party.

"It came slowly this time," he said. "A man begins to feel his age when he reaches my years."

He has lived in St. Louis 71 years, coming here in 1842. At first he engaged in the grain brokerage business and he later embarked in other enterprises. He was known as a sportsman and in 1876 two of his horses, "Ladis" and "St. [illegible]" were locally famous.

There will be no birthday celebration today and few callers will be permitted to see him.

AUTO VICTIM DIES; DRIVER IS CHARGED WITH MURDER

Joe Stanish, East St. Louis, Arrested When Injuries to W. K. Schremp Prove Fatal.

Joe Stanish, 51 years old, a laborer, of 318 Winstanley avenue, East St. Louis, was arrested last night under a warrant charging murder, in connection with the death of William K. Schremp, 48, at his home, 1334 North Thirty-[illegible] street, East St. Louis, last night, of a fracture of the skull and internal injuries suffered June 13 when he was hit by Stanish's automobile at Fortieth and State streets.

The warrant was obtained by Schremp's widow from Justice of the Peace Driscoll. Stanish could not be seen for a statement after his arrest.

EAST-WEST ROAD COMPLETION NOT LIKELY TILL 1928

State Highway Commission Heeding Desires of the Rural Communities and Scattering Work.

CITIES MUST WAIT FOR THROUGH ARTERY

Three Years Have Elapsed Since Bonds Were Voted—Engineers Say Work Could Be Done in Two Years.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 23.—The St. Louis-Kansas City hard-surfaced highway probably will not be completed before 1928 at the present rate of construction. This prospect exists because the State Highway Commission believes the rural public, to whose desires it pays close heed, favors the pork-barrel plan of road building, by which a mile is built here and another mile there.

The commission, through Chairman Theodore Gary, admits that it could build the great east-west road of Missouri in two years, conceded that the money is available with which to do the work, but indicates that a more leisurely course will be followed. Gary was asked why.

"Because the public has not yet digested the importance of completing one big road as soon as possible," he answered.

"I am fully alive to the importance to Missouri of building at least one road that goes somewhere. But the mass of Missourians has not realized that yet. Illinois has 2000 miles of hard-surfaced highway, Missouri has 4000 miles. Yet Illinois is known throughout the land as a good road State, while our State is anathematized as a region of poor roads. All because Illinois has a few connected high-type highways that go somewhere, while we have patches of hard road marooned all over the State between inferior connections.

"Whenever the public decides it wants to go somewhere the commission will build it and the course of our program, which, under the present plan is to be completed in 1928, the St. Louis-Kansas City road will be finished along with the rest of the 1500-mile high-type system and the 5000-odd miles of other roads."

Cities Must Wait.

And so St. Louis and Kansas City, with more than a third of the State's population, whose automobile owners annually pay nearly half of the motor vehicles license money which is financing the roads being built by the State and whose voters furnished the majorities that enabled success of the $60,000,000 road bond issue in 1920, must wait for their connecting road.

In the meantime the highway department is not idle, however. Between 12,000 and 15,000 men are at work throughout the State in the 419 construction projects now under contract. These contracts aggregate nearly $30,000,000 and one or more is going on in every county in the State. Much of this work is grading and bridging, necessary preliminaries to hard-surfacing. But it's scattered to such an extent that it brings the State only a short step closer to having a road that "goes somewhere."

One of the most potent arguments advanced for the $60,000,000 bond issue was that it would help the construction of a connected system of good roads for the use of the present generation. Since it was voted in November, 1920, St. Louisans have wondered from time to time when they would get the cross-State highway which was their principal interest in the State system. In trusting simplicity they appear to have assumed that by this summer or by fall at least they could climb in the family motor and run over here for the week end and back in time for work Monday. Kansas City folk have felt much the same way and residents of towns along the 256-mile route have patiently waited.

Influence of Legislature.

The Highway Commission, composed of a Kansas Cityan, a St. Louisan, a resident of Southeast Missouri and one from Northwest Missouri apparently has taken a lesson from the strength of the element in the road session of the Legislature in 1921 which demanded that the road money be apportioned to the counties for expenditure. That influence is implanted in the road law in a clause which provided that work under the bond program be begun in every county in the State at as nearly the same time as practicable.

The commission has done that thing, partly because the road law specified such a policy, partly because it was politic. For the commissioners believe that there will be less likelihood of success for attacks on the road law in the Legislature if every representative has a road job going in his county and if no Senator has ground for complaint that his district has been slighted.

The commission could still maintain such policy and proceed, at least next year, to arrange for speedy completion of the St. Louis-Kansas City road if it so chooses.

For of every $10,000,000 of bonds that are sold, approximately $4,000,000 and the corresponding Federal aid, is available for construction of primary roads, leaving about $6,000,000 and Federal aid for the lower type roads. It is estimated that probably $7,000,000 to $8,000,000 will be required to complete the big East-West artery.

Preliminary Work Done.

The bridging, grading and culvert construction campaign mapped for this summer has accomplished so much toward putting into service all of the roads in the State system and making them as passable as they can be without surfacing that close observers say the commission now can begin to center its activities on certain traffice routes if it desires.

Work is under contract now on 115 miles of the 256 of the St. Louis-Kansas City road, much of which, however, is grading, although several stretches of hard surface are being laid at each end of the route. Meantime, work also is being done to about the same extent of several other primary roads out through the state.

Engineers of the State Department frequently have said, however, that with concentration of effort two years would be required to build the road.

And it doubtless will require longer time in the absence of such concentration. Three years already have elapsed since the road bonds were voted and the commission is in no humor yet to concentrate its primary construction on the one road, the lack of which holds Missouri up to so much ridicule by many residents of other States, who would like to visit and motor in Missouri if they dared to take the chance.

RECOUNT IN YORE CONTEST STAYED BY SUPREME COURT

Application for Writ of Prohibition by Kirchner Delays Action.

Circuit Judge McElhinney of St. Louis County yesterday was notified by the Supreme Court of Missouri to take no action in the election contest of Miss Byrd Anne Yore of Clayton, a Democrat, who was backed by the Clean Election League, against Henry C. Kirchner, a Republican, for the office of Circuit Clerk, which Kirchner holds by a 432-vote majority under the official returns, until the court can pass on an application by Kirchner for a writ of prohibition.

Kirchner seeks to prevent the recount, under an order issued Tuesday by Judge McIlhinney, from being conducted by County Clerk Tiffin, a Democrat, and to have it performed by the new Election Board that will take office tomorrow, comprising a Republican and Democrat. Tiffin is now prevented from opening the ballot boxes tomorrow, as he had planned.

HOUSING TRUST LAW REPEAL IS EFFECTIVE MONDAY

Socalled 3 and 4 Per. Cent Loan Companies Will Be Without Legal Status in State.

Repeal of the section of the Missouri law under which housing trusts, or so-called 3 and 4 per cent loan companies were organized, is effective tomorrow, and will leave such companies without legal status for further operation as housing trusts, State Finance Commissioner Millspaugh said yesterday. The repeal bill was passed by the last Legislature and was signed by the Governor March 19.

The fact that the repeal goes into effect tomorrow will make no immediate change in the present condition of the trusts, the Commissioner said, as virtually all of the housing trusts that were actively operating in the State were thrown into receivership by suits filed by Commissioner Millspaugh on May 4, last.

31 Companies Restrained.

Those suits, resulting in the appointment of the Finance Commissioner as temporary receiver, placed 31 companies in the hands of the Finance Commissioner, and rerestrained the housing trusts from removing any assets from the State, or selling any additional contracts.

It became known yesterday that postoffice inspectors have started an investigation of the transactions of some of the housing trusts, to determine whether there have been any irregularities in that part of their business conducted through the mails. Circular letters have been sent out to some of the contract holders, asking for information on the transaction by which they purchased their contracts.

Contract holders have been asked in the circulars to send to the postoffice inspectors here copies of the correspondence received through the mails, it was said. They also were asked what representations were made to induce the contract purchaser to invest his money, and whether such representations were made by mail.

Operation of the companies already has been held to be illegal, Millspaugh said, under a recent decision by the Supreme Court that a housing trust granting loans contingent upon the order in which applications have been filed is a lottery and cannot operate under the laws of the State.

As has been told, Attorney-General Barrett held in an opinion that repeal of the law would force the housing trusts under the provisions of the co-operative companies law, or require them to qualify under the building and loan association law, as alternatives to ceasing business.

The co-operative companies law, requiring bond deposits with the State to cover liabilities, and other strict requirements as to supervision, is so stringent, Commissioner Millspaugh said, that no company has been organized under it, and it offers no haven for the housing trusts. The building and loan association law sets forth a procedure that would require the housing trusts to alter their entire scheme of existence.

Weaker Concerns to Be Liquidated.

The plant of the Department of Finance in the receivership actions is to liquidate the weaker companies, where reorganization is impractical, and make a pro-rata distribution of assets to the contract holders, on the basis of what they have paid in. The housing trusts found in good condition will be given an opportunity to reorganize under the building and loan association law.

Several companies in St. Louis and Kansas City have consented to Commissioner Millspaugh being made permanent receiver, to liquidate the companies. Others are preparing to convert to building and loan associations. In some instances, Millspaugh said, the trustees of smaler companies are co-operating to pay out claims of all contract holders.

Contests of several receiverships are pending in Circuit Court here and in Kansas City, and one company, the Union Home Builders, is opposing the receivership in Federal Court here.

The total assets, liabilities and outstanding contracts of the companies have not ben detrmined, Millspaugh said. During the legislative hearings it was estimated that the housing trusts, of which there formerly were 41 in the State, had collected $20,000,000 in the four years since enactment of the law now repealed.

"Promises Not Kept."

"These trusts were organized on the claim they would enable many people, and particularly returned soldiers, to build homes," Millspaugh stated to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "In many instances this has not been the case. In examination of one large company I do not recall that a single original contract holder got a loan. The money was loaned to other persons or companies, in large sums, on a 'bonus loan' basis after they paid a bonus in buying up suspendid contracts through the 'brokerage department.'"

In selling contracts agents frequently held out the prospect that a loan would be obtained after eight to 15 monthly installments had been paid, Millspaugh said, when in reality some of the persons buying contracts would not have obtained loans for eight to 10 years.

In some instances where liquidation takes place, payment of the claims of contract holders may require several years, as the assets are in low interest rate securities which have six to nine years tor un, Millspaugh said. These cannot be converted at an advantageous price. Where the housing trusts are converted to building and loan associations, these securities will be retained to maturity, he said, and the contract holder will fare better.

Conduct of the receivership by the State, Millspaugh said, will mean less cost in settling affairs of the companies, as no large receivership fees will be paid.

ANGLO-AMERICAN PACT EXTENDED FIVE YEARS

Agreement Makes World Court Final Arbiter if America Participates in Tribunal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The Anglo-American arbitration treaty of 1908 was extended for a period of five years in an agreement signed today by Secretary of State Hughes and Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador. The treaty originally ran for five years. In 1913 it was renewed for a similar period.

In signing the agreement today for a further extension of the treaty, the Secretary of State and the British Ambassador exchanged notes providing that in case the Senate gives its consent to President Harding's proposal for participation by the United States in the Permanent Court of International Justice the two Governments will consider an agreement to submit to the new tribunal disputes of the character described in the arbitral pact.

The arbitration treaty provides that differences that may arise of a legal nature or relating to the interpretation of treaties between the two contracting parties, and which it may not have been possible to settle through diplomatic exchanges, shall be referred to the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague, provided they do not affect the vital interests, the independence, or the honor of the two Powers, and do not concern the interests of third parties.

As usual, in arbitrations treaties to which the United States is a party, provision is made in the treaty that before any question is submitted to arbitration, a special agreement clearly defining the matter in dispute and other details, shall be drafted and approved by the Senate.

Scope of Original Instrument Limited by Senate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The original Anglo-American treaty signed by Elihu Root as Secretary of State and James Bryce as British Ambassador, provided for practically unqualified arbitration of all issues between the United States and Great Britain. Opposition in the Senate, however, resulted in a limitation of the scope of the instrument.

It is regarded as possible that this convention, renewed today for the third time, may become important if the question of ships' liquor develops into a serious issue between the two countries..

A warrant issued yesterday charges Pat Scanlan, a Hogan gangster, with first degree robbery. Complaint was made by Oscar R. Cone, a clerk in a drug store at 2700 St. Louis avenue, who was robbed of $40 and a watch in the store June 16. Cone identified Scanlan as the man who robbed him.

New Code for Aerial Warfare Would Forbid Bombing of Towns Distant From Scene of Fighting

United States Represented on Committee of Jurists That Drafted Rules—Treaty Incorporation to Be Sought.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A far-reaching international code covering aerial warfare has been drafted by the committee of justice appointed by the Powers under an agreement reached at the Washington arms conference. Drafts of the rules have just now been transmitted to the respective Powers.

One of the most important articles of the projected code, which may become the basis of a treaty, would prohibit the bombardment of cities, towns, villages, dwellings or buildings not in the immediate neighborhood of the operation of land forces. This would outlaw such aerial bombardments as those carried out by the Germans against London, Paris and other cities.

Under this proposed regulation aerial bombardment would be legitimate "only when directed exclusively at military forces, military works, military establishments or depots, factories constituting important and well-known centers engaged in the manufacture of arms, ammunition or distinctly military supplies, lines of communication or transportation used for military purposes."

In cases where such objectives are so situated that they could not bombard without the indiscriminate bombardment of the civilian population, aircraft, under the regulations, "must sustain from bombardment."

Belligerents Held Liable.

A belligerent state "would be liable to pay compensation for injuries to person or to property caused by the violation by any of its officers or forces" of these provisions.

Aerial bombardment "for the purpose of terrorizing the civilian population, of destroying or damaging private property not of a military character, or of injuring noncombatents' would be prohibited, as would also aerial bombardment for the purpose of enforcing compliance with requisitions in kind or payment of contributions in money."

In bombardment by aircraft the commander would be required to take "all necessary steps to spare, as far as possible, buildings dedicated to public worship, art, science or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospital ships, hospitals and other places where the sick and wounded are collected, provided such buildings, objects or places are not at the time used for military purposes."

The use of aircraft for the purpose of disseminating propaganda would not be treated as an illegitimate means of warfare, and the members of the crews of such aircraft could not be deprived "of their rights as prisoners of war."

When any aircraft had been disabled the occupants when endeavoring to escape by means of a parachute could not be attacked in the course of their descent.

Private Aircraft Regulations.

Private aircraft would be liable to visit and search and to capture by belligerent military aircraft. However, neutral public non-military aircraft other than private aircraft would be subject only to visit for the purpose of the certification of their papers.

Belligerent aircraft would be bound to respect the rights of neutral powers and to abstain within the jurisdiction of a neutral state from the commission of any act which it would be the duty of that state to prevent. A neutral government would be required to prevent the departure from its jurisdiction of an aircraft in condition to make a hostile attack against a belligerent power or one carrying any member of the combatant forces of a belligerent power.

Regulations governing the operation of the radio in time of war, with particular respect to the rights of neutrals, also have been prepared by the same commission and transmitted to the powers. The governments represented on the commission, which held its meeting at The Hague, were the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and Holland.

Conversations have been going on among these powers as to the next step to be taken.

The principal point under consideration is how the proposed codes shall be incorporated into draft treaties, whether by a general treaty convention or by some one of the "big five" powers circulating a general treaty with a view to obtaining the signature of as many of the powers as possible.

ARCHBISHOP TIKHON SAID TO REGRET ACTS AGAINST SOVIETS

Report Says He Blames Monarchists for Trouble and Is Ready to Swear Allegiance.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, June 23.—It is declared in government circles that Archbishop Tikhon, former patriarch of all Russia, has addressed a letter to the authorities from his prison cell blaming the monarchists for his actions in the past, which he professes to regret, declaring his readiness to swear allegiance to the soviet government and asking that the letter be used at his forthcoming trial.

MEAT for Health Week—June 25th to 30th

Meat animals vary as to breed, age, sex, size and condition. This naturally results in different grades of meat. For example, a cow which has been used for the production of milk will not give as choice meat as a steer raised and fed for meat purposes.

The housewife who may feel that the prices which she pays for certain cuts of meat, such as steaks, chops and roasts, are relatively high, does not always analyze the underlying reasons for such prices. In the first place, a beef animal gives only a little more than half of its live weight in dressed meat. When the dealer divides the meat into retail cuts, he must trim off the surplus fat and remove some of the bone.

Another factor which enters into the selling price is the great demand for the so-called "choice cuts." In beef, these are the sirloin, porterhouse and club steaks, and the prime rib roasts. They average about one-fourth of the total dressed weight, but usually brings as much in price as the other three-fourths of the dressed animal. This means that a number of cuts, namely, the plate, brisket, shin, neck and parts of the shoulder or rump, sometimes may bring less per pound than the average cost at wholesale of the whole side. In general, the same is true of veal, lamb and pork.

In order that the demand for meat may be distributed more evenly over the whole meat animal, thereby avoiding loss from waste, shrinkage, spoilage and slow turnover, it behooves the careful and watchful housewife to plan the family meals so that they frequently include these lower-priced cuts. As has already been stated, the nutritive value of the less known cuts is relatively just as high as that of loin and rib cuts, so that to use them is indeed true economy from every standpoint.

By studying the chart below you will readily see for yourself and make your selection before starting for the big white, sanitary store—the largest of its kind in the United States—The leader in the past and the leader at present—and the future as well.

Rickeymen Score 7 in Fourth Inning, Aided By Passes and Errors

Osborne Loses Control and His Support Collapses, Whereupon Knot Holers Respond With Timely Hits—Stuart Pitches Effectively.

By Joseph F. Holland.

The Cardinal batting slump fled yesterday at exactly the same time that Ernie Osborne's control deserted him and the defense of the Chicago Cubs collapsed. It followed that the Cardinals, known the circuit over as a team of sluggers, enjoyed the sort of an inning they are wont to indulge in when a batting slump is farthest from their thoughts. They scored seven runs in the fourth inning and won the final game of the series without added effort. The score was 9 to 5.

The victory enabled them to pass the Brooklyn Dodgers and regain fifth place on the eve of their four-game series, with the Pittsburg Pirates, which opens this afternoon.

Several things had to occur to assist the Rickeymen to "shake" the slump that dogged their steps through five straight games. First and foremost in that inning they made three hits, one a homer by Jim Bottomley with a man on base. Ernie Osborne, the tall, lank right-hander of the Cubs, tossed in three passes and, finally, the Cubs turned three errors in the field. As the golfers say, it was even threes all around. Ten men batted and seven scored before the final man was retired.

Eliminating that inning the Cardinals were the same slumping outfit that dropped three games to the Giants and two to the Cubs.

It Was Time They Rallied.

It was an inning not easy to forget, especially when you recall that the Rickeymen had scored only eight runs in their last five games. In one inning they had come within a single score of their total for the [illegible] innings which had preceded yesterday's game.

Stock opened the inning with a liner to Grantham. Then Osborne started the first run of three. He passed Toporcer and Blades, whereupon McCurdy singled to drive Toporcer over the plate and send Blades to third. Enter the first of another run of threes. Hollocher fumbled Stuart's roller and Blades scored. Flack walked, filling the bases, and Osborne was through for the day. Cheeves replaced him and on the next play, O'Farrell attempted to pick McCurdy off third. His throw was wide and rolled to left field, McCurdy scoring and Stuart and Flack moving up. Smith singled to center and two more Cardinals flashed across the plate. Hornsby gave Statz a run for his long fly and Bottomley placed one in the right field bleachers for a home run, scoring behind Smith. Stock, up for the second time in the inning, fouled to Elliott, giving him a record of having made two of the three outs.

Stuart Pitches Effectively.

That lead was plenty for Johnny Stuart to work under. He had relieved Toney in the third after Fred's withdrawal from the game and in seven innings gave the Cubs seven hits and four runs, one of them unearned. It was just another exhibition of the excellent relief work Stuart has been doing against all manner of teams in the present home stay. Apparently he has won a regular place as first string relief.

Wildness has always been Stuart's trouble and while he showed flashes of it he was good enough to strike out five Cubs as against four that he walked. Two of his passes led to runs, but in view of the simultaneous collapse of Osborne, the Cubs and the Cardinal batting slump, the scattered scores were not damaging.

It was Johnny's second victory of the season in the relief role. He has not been charged with a defeat. He defeated Boston, June 15, when he relieved Haines and pitched six scoreless innings to win, 5—3. He had pitched 14 2-3 innings without a score when Chicago finally broke through his defense and counted a run in the fourth inning on Miller's single and Elliott's triple with two out. That is a real record, considering that six of those scoreless innings were against the New York Giants.

Has Improved Steadily.

Stuart has come slowly but appears to have arrived. Rickey took him out of Ohio State University a year ago and started him against the Giants at New York two days after he had joined the club. Johnny failed to last out the first inning and slipped steadily until he found himself with Syracuse in the International League. He was not a particularly impressive pitcher this spring but he has improved steadily. He is only 22 years old and has a long career before him.

Another young collegian shared honors with Stuart. Harry McCurdy, former Illinois U. captain, caught because Ainsmith and Clemons were incapacitated. He made three hits in four trips to the plate, drove in two runs and scored a third. The Cubs stole only one base on him. The "pony" battery had an excellent day.

Jim Bottomley came out of his slump with a homer and a double and would have had another extra base hit but for the fact that Calif Heathcote raced to deep right center for a glove hand catch of Jim's long liner in the seventh. Hornsby made only one hit in five attempts, but he sent the outfielders back for his long drives on four occasions. If the game may be taken as an indication of what is to come, the Cardinals have definitely rid themselves of their slump.

Ray Blades was charged with only one official trip to the plate. He walked three times out of the four appearance he made in the area where Bill Klem holds sway.

Hy Myers spent another day in civilian dress in an attempt to give his injured side a chance to regain its strength. His absence from the game is expected to result in the immediate recall of Heine Mueller. Rickey said yesterday that Mueller probably would rejoin the club before it went East Wednesday night.

Jeff Pfeffer will pitch against the Pirates today and probably will be opposed by Johnny Morrison. Play at 3 o'clock.

ATHLETICS WIN FROM WASHINGTON, 10 TO 5

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—The Athletics defeated Washington, 10 to 5, this afternoon. The Mackmen drove Russell off the mound during a batting rally in the third inning and treated Paul Zahniser, former Memphis star, who succeeded him, roughly. The Athletics made 15 hits, including four doubles.

Rube Walberg retired after six innings, during which he allowed five runs and six hits. Rommell allowed one single during the three innings he pitched.

TIGERS DEFEAT CHICAGO IN FIRST GAME 5 TO 3

DETROIT, Mich., June 23.—Detroit opened a four-game series today by defeating the White Sox, 5 to 3. Gorham Leverette was hit opportunely in the early innings and finally was relieved in the fourth by Stubby Mack. When Mack was withdrawn an inning later for a pinch hitter, Thurston, the former Brown pitcher, went to the box.

Rip Collins started for the Tigers, but was removed in the midst of the fifth when he developed a streak of wildness. Bert Cole finished the game.

The White Sox made a spectacular ninth-inning rally. With one down Elsch batted for Falk and walked. Kamm then drove a homer over the left field fence. Schalk fouled out, but Thurston held the crowd with a double, only to see Hooper fly to Manush for the last out.

Yankees Defeat Howard Ehmke

Joe Bush Gives Only Five Hits in Beating Red Sox, 4 to 0.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, June 23.—Howard Ehmke, Red Sox ace, tumbled today and Joe "Bullet" Bush of the Yankees brought him down, steering the Yankee craft to a 4-to-0 win and getting sensational support in the process. It is the first setback for Ehmke in a month. His mates for the first time in weeks failed to hit for him. They made only five hits off Bush. Bush was in trouble in the last three innings but bore down and had excellent support from Scott, Witt and McNally.

In the seventh, Harris opened with a double and then Flagstead got a scratch hit through McNally and took second on McNally's bad peg. Then Scott raced into short left and pulled down McMillan's floater and Bush proceeded to fan Fewster and Pinch Hitter Shanks. McMillan made a mitt-hand catch of Hofmann's drive in the fourth that was particularly rich.

A pass to Pipp, Scott's double and Bush's double gave the Yanks two in the second. Singles by McNally, Ruth and Pipp in the third gave the Yanks their third run. In the eighth Ward [illegible] squeezed home by Scott's bunt.

COLLEGIATE CREWS SHOW GOOD FORM IN PRACTICE

By the Associated Press.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 23.—Smooth water proved inviting today and morning and afternoon drills on the Hudson River saw the whole fleet of crews entered for the intercollegiate regatta of June 28 going over the course.

Not unnaturally Washington and the Navy, whose great combination last year smashed a world's record, attracted much attention, both crews going through impressive workouts. The neat, easy swing of Coach "Rusty" Callow's Westerners and the complete, even pull of the Annapolis oarsmen, established both as fine crews.

Spectators' Jeers Cause Fred Toney To Quit Cardinals

Fred Toney, who has been in the National League for 12 years, although not consecutively, announced yesterday following an altercation with Shortstop George Toporcer on the field, in the second inning of the game with Chicago, that he was "through with baseball." He said that he planned to return to his home in Nashville, Tenn.

Toney was visibly unnerved by the action of the crowd in "boohing" and calling him to be taken out after Toporcer has removed his glasses and appeared to be preparing to hit the pitcher. The crowd immediately assumed that Toney had said something which justly angered Toporcer.

Toney explained later that it resulted from his request to Toporcer to play close to the third base side of the field while Heathcote was at bat. Toney said Heathcote always hit between third and short and that, by playing near third, the shortstop could cut off his hits.

Toney Guessed Right.

"I asked Toporcer to play over there and he did not move to the position I indicated," Toney said. "Then when Heathcote hit through that very spot I walked over and told him that he should have done as I directed and that if he had Chicago would not have scored.

"He told me that he could play short and that I had better get in there and pitch instead of telling him what to do. One word led to another and finally he took off his glasses and the crowd was on me.

"My only interest was to win that game. I like St. Louis and Rickey has been fine to me. But when the crowd "boohed" me without knowing the facts it hurt so bad that I couldn't go on. I told Rickey that I just had to quit. I am going to leave the Cardinals. I've tried hard to win for them, but when a man who has been pitching in the major leagues for 12 years can't tell a young fellow where to play for a batter it's time for him to leave.

"I'm sorry it happened, because I wanted to convince everyone that Rickey made no mistake when he took me with his club. I had hoped to win a lot of games for the Cardinals and I always tried hard. Then just because a hasty action occurred on the field the crowd immediately turned against me.

"I don't have to play any more, fortunately. I haven't been playing 17 years for nothing."

Toporcer Is Silent.

Toporcer declined to discuss the case except to say that he was sorry the incident occurred. "It was just a case of two tempers worn to an edge by a losing streak," George said. "I'm terribly sorry it happened and I hope Fred will stay with the club. He is a great pitcher and the Cardinals need him."

Toporcer was cheered when he went to the plate after the incident and Toney was on the bench at the time. The approval for Toporcer and the disapproval expressed toward him in the "boohing" of the crowd was apparently the last straw.

He turned slowly, left the dugout and dressed although, at Rickey's request he waited until after the game before leaving the clubhouse.

The same incident happened once before but Toney made no complaint about it. Toney signaled a young player on the team to play in a spot he designated for a batter. The player declined to accept the suggestion and a hit cost Toney the game.

Rickey said after the game that he deeply regretted the incident and would attempt to have Toney reconsider.

In 12 years in the National League Toney has won 133 games and lost 95. In his prime with Cincinnati he won 17 and lost 6 one year and then came back with 24 victories and 16 defeats with an ordinary ball team another season. He had won five and lost five this season.

MASCART KNOCKS OUT M'ADAM IN FIRST ROUND

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 23.—Mascart, the French featherweight, tonight knocked out the Irishman, Mike McAdam, in the first round.

The Frenchman delivered two right hooks, which made a speedy ending to the fight. The first sent McAdam to the mat for 7 seconds and the other floored him for more than 30 seconds.

Mascart says he intends to issue a challenge to Eugene Criqui for the championship.

Shocker Hits Stride After First Inning; McManus Gets Homer

Fohlmen Pound Edwards After Coveleskie Is Driven From Box By the Heat—Bedgood Finishes Brilliantly for Speaker's Club.

By Ed Bang,
Sports Editor, the Cleveland News.

CLEVELAND, O., June 23.—An undershirt, one of those heavy affairs commonly known as a woolen sweat shirt to the baseball fraternity, stood forth as a menace to the St. Louis Browns this afternoon. None seemed to realize it more than the man who wore it, Urban Shocker, the pitching ace of the Browns. It must have been Shocker did not figure it was quite as warm as it proved to be, for when he started on the slab against the Indians, it was to look like the veriest busher. The Indians scored only two runs off him on a triple, fielder's choice, an error and two passes simply because Summa and Myatt were too eager to deliver and helped Urban down to earth by hitting at bad balls, the former fouling out and Myatt fanning.

After he took his turn at bat in the second and struck out vociferously, Shocker hustled to the clubhouse, removed the heavy, sticky undergear and returned to the mound a new man. He was the Shocker of old, the sort of deceiver Cleveland fans have always figured him to be. He had practically perfect control of his spitter, his fast offering, whenever he used it, his slow ball which he employed overtime, and his curve, which he worked now and then. To use a time-worn expression Shocker was "master of the situation" and there could be but the one result. The Browns won, 8 to 2.

Stanley Coveleskie was Shocker's opponent at the start of proceedings, but a combination of intense heat and a crook in the shoulder of his pitching arm forced him into retirement after the first. Jim Joe Edwards and Phil Bedgood finished. Had Manager Speaker been gifted with insight and used the right-hander instead of the southpaw as first relief to Covey there's no telling how long the game would have lasted, for Bedgood was even more effective than Shocker during his regime on the firing line. In six and one-third innings the former Chattanooga mainstay held the Browns to three widely scattered hits, two of them infield bunts and one a fly ball to right that took a bad hop for a triple. Despite the fact it was Bedgood's first work of the season, his control was good. He issued only one pass and struck out four, Marty McManus being his victim on two occasions—quite a feather in the youngster's cap when you consider it was McManus' terrific wallop for a home run in the third that spelled defeat for the home hopes.

Jim Joe Edwards Fails.

Inasmuch as Speaker had no means of knowing Bedgood was going to be as good as he proved himself or that Edwards was going to be soft pickings for the opposition he delegated the south-paw to hold the Browns in check. Jim Joe got by famously in the second, fanning Schliebner and Shocker, while Tobin fouled to Summa, but McManus took all the joy out of life in the third with two of his buddies on the runways with one of his copyrighted drives to the outlying precincts that meant the Indians' doom.

When Bedgood took up the slab duties the contest resolved itself into a real pitching duel, but Shocker was equal to each and every opportunity the Indians had to add to the two runs they scored in the opening chapter. So good was Urban that only one man got as far as third and two others to second in the remaining eight innings of play. The victory put the Brows on an even basis with the Indians in the inter-club contests for the season, each winning four. Elam Vangilder will endeavor to give his buddies the edge tomorrow, while Sherrod Smith will hurl for Cleveland.

Speaker Muffs One.

It isn't often Tris Speaker muffs a fly ball, but he did in the first inning and the foozle paved the way for two runs. After Coveleskie had fairly sparkled in fielding Tobin's swinging bunt down the first base line to Brower, Robertson drove a fly to right center. Speaker not only caught up with the ball, but he had it in both hands only to drop it, Roby pulling up at second. Jacobson's daisy cutter singed between Lutzke and Sewell to left, scoring Robertson. Williams had sent a long fly to Speaker. McManus drew a pass and then Gerber duplicated Jacobson's single, scoring the "Baby Doll."

The Indians got a few breaks on their own hook in their turn at the plate. With one gone Wamby drove to the bleachers in left for a triple and scored on Speaker's roller to Schliebner, the latter making a belated throw to the plate. McManus fumbled Brower's bounder, and after

GIANTS HAVE ONE BIG INNING. DEFEAT BRAVES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, June 23.—The Giants won the second game of the series from the Braves this afternoon. The score was 9 to 5, the same as Friday's score. The outfielding of Nixon was the feature.

The Giants had one big inning, the fourth, when they sent 10 men to bat, and scored six runs. Felix for the losers made his second home run in two days with a drive into the left field stands in the first. Bagwell, a pinch hitter, made another in the ninth. Rain fell in the third and fourth innings, and threatening weather held the attendance to 18,000. The score follows:

American Tennis Stars Favored in Wimbledon Event

Johnston or Richards Picked to Win World's Singles Championship.

200 PLAYERS ENTERED

Mrs. Mallory Faces Keen Competition in Women's Title Tournament.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 23.—More than 200 lawn tennis experts, representing a dozen countries will participate in the tournament beginning Monday at Wimbledon, at which the world title will be decided for the last time.

The grass court championships have been awarded at Wimbledon under the auspices of the International Federation since 1913, but the federation at its last meeting, under pressure largely from the United States, abrogated this privilege.

Americans are entered for all the events—the men's singles, women's singles, the doubles for each sex, and the mixed doubles. Great Britain and France will also try for each title, but the other nations are confining their quest to more limited spheres.

Eight Americans Entered.

Altogether there are eight Americans entered, including the national woman champion, Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, and William M. Johnston and Vincent Richards, second and third, respectively in the male ranking. Johnston, incidentally, also is ranked only second to William T. Tilden in the world. The others are Fracis T. Hunter, ranking number nine, and Misses Elenora Sears, Leslie Bancroft, Eleanor Goss and Isabella Mumford.

Either Johnston or Richards will, in the opinion of most critics, win the men's singles title, now held by Gerald T. Patterson of Australia.

A good many factors are thought to stand between Mrs. Mallory and her goal, but the biggest of all is Suzanne Lenglen. This French whirlwind of the courts is looked upon as almost certain to repeat her victories of 1921 and 1922, "unless her playing is affected by one of these emotional storms that sometimes mark her appearance against a strong competitor.

Miss Kathleen McKane, first ranking British woman, has a good opportunity to meet Mlle. Lenglen in the final, as they are in the opposite side of the draw. Mlle. Lenglen and Mrs. Mallory, if they meet again, will face each other in the semifinal, as both are in the upper half of the draw, but in separate quarters.

Johnston to Play Richards Early.

Had the draw been seeded, as in America and France, Johnston and Richards might have met in the final, but as it is they are both in the uppermost quarter and one or the other must fall early next week. Hunter, who reached the semi-finals at Wimbledon two years ago, is in the lower half, so there is still a possibility of an all-American final.

There are no dashing Australians entered this year such as the Wimbledon galleries have come to admire so much in the past, but nearly every other tennis-playing land has sent its best racquet wielders.

There are Davis Cup players from India, Spain and Argentina. Bic Norton of South Africa; La Coste, the dazzling 1s-year-old French youth; Gentien, the schoolboy champion of France, who took a set off Johnston in Paris, and also Jean Borotra of French Davis Cup fame.

Belgian Champion to Play.

There are Larson of Denmark and Jean Washer, the Belgian champions; Mlle. Vlasco, the new Greek star, who is partnering with Mlle. Lenglen in the doubles, and all of the old English veterans, both men and women, with the cream of the younger British talent, such as J. B. Gilbert, W. C. Crawley, F. G. Lowe and Max Woosnam.

The Wimbledon tournament is scheduled to stretch through two weeks, but if the weather is as bad as it was last year the event may last longer. Already, and for weeks past, every reserved seat had been claimed, and those who cannot afford the high prices demanded must seek places in the unreserved section.

Some of those who got small allotments of reservations at two guineas a ticket weeks ago when the sale started now are taking much advertising space in newspapers, offering to dispose of the pasteboards at sums ranging as high as £25 each. The tickets for sale, however, are relatively few.

BRITISH POLO TEAM TO PLAY IN 3 TOURNEYS IN ADDITION TO MATCH

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The British army polo team coming to the United States to play an American army outfit on the international field at Meadowbrook the week of Sept. 3 will compete in three other important tournaments before returning home, the polo association announced today.

After the engagement with the American army four, the British team will go to Philadelphia for a tournament at the Philadelphia Country Club Sept. 1 to 15. Then they will play in the American open championship and the Monty Waterbury cup event at Meadowbrook, Sept. 17 to Oct. 1.

Richards Wins English Tourney

London Championship Goes to Young American Tennis Player.

By Herbert L. Bourke.

(Copyright, 1923.)

LONDON, June 23.—Vincent Richards won the London championship at the Queens Club today without extending himself. In beating S. M. Jacob, the Indian Davis cup player, who beat Francis T. Hunter in the semi-finals, the young American duplicated Wm. M. Johnston's performance in 1920.

It looked as if Richards were merely experimenting and he won easily, 6-2, 6-2. His game was subdued, but he was immensely clever at placements and at laying traps for Jacob. His volleying was good and his ground strokes had plenty of spin and were kept low.

Miss Ryan won the women's championship, beating Mrs. Beamish, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2, but cleverly exploiting her drop stroke and cut volleys. Some surprise is expressed that Miss Ryan is not included in the English women's team to visit America. I understand the question of her qualification is being considered as if eventually there should be women's competition on Davis cup lines, America could claim her as a Californian, although she has a long residential qualification for England.

SHOCKER SETTLES DOWN AND BROWNIES DEFEAT CLEVELAND INDIANS, 8-2

Summa fouled to Robertson, Sewell and Lutzke worked Shocker for passes, Speaker scoring. With the bases still loaded, Myatt fanned.

Edwards blew the works in the third, aided and abetted by a couple of fielding misplays. Lutzke started the fireworks by fumbling Ezzell's easy bounder. Williams pickled the first ball to right for a single, Ezzell racing to third. Jacobson hit a solid bounder to Lutzke, who, despite a fumble, handed the ball to Myatt at the plate in the most approved fashion imaginable and in ample time to retire Ezzell. But Myatt muffed the ball, Ezzell scoring and Williams reaching third. McManus connected for a mighty wallop, a drive high over Jamieson's head into the open pavilion in left for a home run, scoring Williams and big Jake. Sewell made a leaping catch of Gerber's liner and Edwards then suffered a lapse of control issuing passes to Severeid and Schliebner. Shocker sacrificed them on and Tobin scored them with a popped single back of short. Johnnie endeavored to pull away from a near wild pitch, his bat connecting for the lucky hit.

FIRPO TO START WORK FOR WILLARD CONTEST

NEW YORK, June 23.—Louis Firpo arrived here today, a bit fatigued from the long ride from Mexico City. He was met by Jimmy De Forest and several friends and paid a visit to Rickard at the Garden.

Firpo said he weighed 235 pounds and would reduce only a few pounds during his training for his bout with Jess Willard having been in active training since leaving here for Havana.

The South American will train on the Garden roof beginning Monday.

Efficient Use of Mashie Will Cut Score 9 Strokes Per Round

Gene Sarazen, American Open Champion, Outlines Use of Club and Its Value in Dropping Ball Dead to the Pin—Must Hit Through the Ball.

By Gene Sarazen,

(Copyright, 1923.)

(World's Champion Golfer.)

If you want to cut strokes from your score in a surprisingly quick time learn to handle the mashie. Driving and long iron play are important, of course, in compiling any good card. But the point is this: it is possible to recover from a miss with these clubs while an error on the approach is likely to go down on the card at least in eight cases out of ten. On the other hand if you can handle the mashie efficiently you have a fine opportunity of getting close enough for one putt.

Suppose you were sticking your mashie approaches so close to the pin you were taking only one putt on one-half of the greens in a round. That would give you a saving of nine strokes, a total that would be gladly accepted by the worst duffer or the greatest star. Efficient use of the mashie is what makes great golfers and the thing that enables you to score well.

I think it is generally admitted that as a class the professional handles his irons and his mashie particularly better than the amateur. And the reason for this as I see it is because the amateur as a rule is prone to over-swing. Why he should I can't say unless it is because the professional having followed the game most of his life has had a better opportunity of developing his swing and because he practices more.

Moderate Swing.

Now, over-swinging is a serious fault in mashie play. You can't take this club back over your head and hope to hit the ball firmly with a compact stroke. And mashie play to be successful and effective must be in every respect firm.

But let us discuss the use of this stroke from the beginning. First select a mashie that has a fairly heavy head and a good stiff shaft. You want no whip or give in this kind of club. I think it is also well to get a club that has wide blade without, however, too much loft in the face.

With the mashie you will probably have the option of playing two different kinds of shot on most hole—the high pitch or the pitch and run. The latter is easier to play and safer where the green is wide open. But the former is a right useful shot when you've got to get a little distance and accuracy as well. The stroke, however, is practically the same for both except it is a little longer for the high pitch.

I advocate the open stance for all mashie shots, even if you use the square stance in driving and in playing your irons. In this position you are less likely to top the ball. Play the ball about mid-way between the feet, a little nearer the right foot, if anything.

The club should be gripped very tightly with the hands well on top of the shaft and the right forefinger and thumb predominating. Have the left arm in practically a straight line with the club and keep the hands well down below the waist and in close to the body—not out—so that the heel of the club is on the ground and the toe slightly raised. See that the head of the club is laid back and not turned over against the ball in which case you will be certain to smother the shot.

The Entire Operation.

In taking the club back it is best to allow the wrists and forearms do most of the work. The club should be taken back with an upright swing rather than a flat stroke because the ball is to be struck with a direct hit instead of a sweep.

No matter how much distance I want to get I never allow the hands to get back further than the right shoulder. The moment they go beyond this point all control is lost. And you must always be rid of the idea of pressing or forcing the shot. The easier you execute the stroke the more firmly and harder you will hit the ball. If the shot looks longer than a mashie, take another club. But dont under and circumstances force the shot.

On the back-swing you want to be sure to keep the right elbow down and in close to the body. The reason so many players slice their mashie shots is because in jerking back the club hurriedly the right arm flies out and they come into the ball from the outside.

One of the reasons so many golfers flub their mashie shots is because they quit on the downstroke. By that I mean they fail to hit through and of course all force and firmness is immediately dissipated. Some players take a full back-swing and a half down-stroke. That is entirely wrong.

Don't Look Up.

The distance you will get with a mashie depends on the back-swing and practice will enable you to judge how long a ball you can get with the club. But in every case—even on the chip or short pitch and run—you've got to hit through the ball, firmly and without any slacking.

Finally I would caution you about shifting the feet on this shot. Except for transferring the weight from the right to the left leg as you hit the ball—which you will or shoulshould do automatically and rythmically—there is no shifting of feet and the right side of the body is turned in but slightly as you hit the ball.

In finishing the down-stroke the hands should be well out in front with the club pointing the direction of the flight of the ball. It is best in playing the mashie to take a little turf. This will help to keep the shot firm, but remember to allow the club-head to lift the ball and don't try to do this with the arms.

Of course, after all I have said about the head being kept in fixed position it is hardly necessary for me to say that you must always keep your eye on the ball.

Perry Adair Is Golf Champion

Atlanta Man Defeats Godchaux, Nashville, in Southern Final.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 23.—Perry Adair of Atlanta again won the Southern amateur golf championship when he defeated Frank Godchaux of Nashville, Tenn, 6 up and 5.

Adair, who won the title the first time in 1921, gained the honor today by one of the most spectacular comebacks ever seen in Southern golf when he went out and won eight of the first nine holes played in the afternoon round. His performance equaled the record for the outward nine, a 33 shot by Charlie Hall, pro of the Birmingham Country Club.

DODGERS AND PHILS SPLIT DOUBLEHEADER

BROOKLYN, June 23.—Brooklyn smothered the Phillies by 11 to 2 in the first game today before 18,000 fans, but the Phillies won the second game by 5 to 2. The Phillies had a lead of 5 to 2 on Reuther in the first seven innings of the first game. The Dodgers rallied in the seventh for three hits and three runs off Glazner with none out, and then got three hits and two runs off Ring in two-thirds of the same inning. Fopr were added off Hubbell in the eighth. Ring came right back in the second game and won handily, holding the Dodgers to six hits, three of which went to Andy High, who had two triples, a double and a pass in four times up.

Kammann and Brown Triple A Net Champions

Win Doubles Tennis Title by Defeating Schwarz and Heuermann.

By Davison Obear.

Wray Brown and Karl Kammann won the doubles championship of the Triple A Club yesterday afternoon by defeating Elmer Schwarz and Ted Heuermann in the final. The contest required four sets, Brown and Kammann winning by scores of 6—2, 8—6, 3—6, 6—2.

As a result of their victory Brown and Kammann replaced Josties and Drewes as Triple A doubles tennis champions. The winners reached the final round by defeating Bernet and Broeker in the semifinals, while Schwarz and Heuermann caused an upset by winning from Josties and Drewes in the other semifinal match.

Brown and Kammann opened the first set by excellent playing and threatened to win three straight. However, Schwarz and Heuermann steadied themselves in the second set and forced their opponents to a total of 14 games before a decision was reached.

As the third set started it appeared that Schwarz and Heuermann might make the contest a five-set affair. They won this set at 6—3, due to erratic playing by their opponents. The fourth set went to Brown and Kammann, however, and the match was ended.

Josties Defeats Drewes.

Fred Josties furnished the second upset in two days by defeating Ted Drewes in the fifth set of their semifinal round singles encounter. On Thursday each player won two sets when darkness stopped the play.

While Drewes owns the majority of victories over Josties about once every season Josties wins from his teammates. In yesterday's contest Josties played careful tennis and lost only three games in the set. Drewes seemed to have trouble finding the base line, sending many balls out of court while Josties was accurate on placement strokes.

3 p. m.—Wray Browns vs. Fred Josties, Court No. 1.

Doubles.

3 p. m.—Vance and Barnes vs. Fraizer and Kupferle.

Both matches best three out of five sets.

The singles event in Class C was completed yesterday when L. E. Cooper defeated W. F. Davis in the final round. The score was 6—2, 8—6, 6—0. Davis worked his way to the deciding round by some excellent tennis during the week. However, Cooper proved his superior in the final match, winning two of the three sets without difficulty.

Good Matches Today.

George F. Broeker defeated Fritz Clausen and reached the final round of the Class A singles event. He will oppose W. C. Hixon for the individual honors in this class.

Weather permitting, nearly all of the matches in the Triple A Club tournament will be completed today. A number of final round contests are scheduled in the different classes and some good tennis is expected.

The tournament opened on June 16 and will be completed in 10 days, a record for the event. When the first round opened there were 76 players in the singles and 24 teams of doubles. The draw was based on the ranking of the various players in the club's list.

RISKS ALL FOR CHANCE

Surprising Confidence of St. Paul Fighter His Principal Recommendation.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The Great Shelby mystery continues to mystify and fascinate the public. No pugilistic extravaganza in the world's history has had so many fantastic features to it. None has involved such daring finance, under such seemingly hopeless conditions.

Even today there is lingering doubt that the affair is real, that it will take place as scheduled, July 4, and that the $200,000 iron men supposed to have been turned over to Dempsey as part of a $300,000 advance guarantee are real, hard dollars and not mere propagandist dreams.

The names and standing of the men who have now put their shoulders behind the financial wheel ought to make it certain that the affair will go through. Too much is at stake for the event to fall through. The arena has been completed at a cost of $75,000, the fighters are conditioned at a considerable expense; tickets have been distributed and sold to the total of many thousands; Shelby has built a mushroom city of cracker box hotels and tent accommodations for visitors and the promotion has now achieved such a momentum that it is bound to proceed to the finish.

Glacier Park Near By.

Yet how it is to come through financially, none at this long range, can see. Granted that the nearby lure of Glacier Park, and the international rodeo which will precede the bout a few days and will bring many persons to Shelby; but these can hardly number the 30,000 or so required to put the bout over financially.

In the heart of this maze of puzzling features we note the rather forlorn figure of Thomas Gibbons, challenger, who will not get one cent unless the gate runs over $450,000; and who, to get any fistic repute out of the show, must overcome the greatest fighter of the age.

Herein is one of the principal mysteries of the affair—what does Gibbons think of it all and what chance has he?

Surely, risking a beating without a cent of money in return implies a wonderful confidence on the part of Gibbons. If he could defeat Dempsey it would repay him for all. And yet 99 out of 100 persons who guess fight results in advance already are on record in favor of Dempsey.

Everything Favors Dempsey.

There is not one fistic argument that seems to favor Gibbons. He is handicapped in each of the following particulars:

AGE—By six years.
WEIGHT—By 15 or more pounds.
PUNCH—With either hand.
REACH—By 3½ inches.
BICEPS—By 2¾ inches in circumference.
FOREARM—By 1¾ inches.
RECORD—Has been beaten by a smaller man.

Gibbons was formeryl a middleweight. He weighs about 185 pounds today, but it not necessarily a help to him. During his career he was not a knockerout, except in one year when he ran through a long list of names and down-and-outers. Only two good men were on the list of victims—Hugh Walker and Chuck Wiggins—and they are men of no standinf in a championship sense.

All the odds are against Gibbons, but he carries on hopefully and he must have something up his sleeve more encouraging than the chance of making a losing fight for no money reward.

As for Dempsey the future glitters like a rainbow for him—but rainbows are of brief duration.

After his bout with Gibbons he has an offer from Tex Rickard for a fight July 30 in Boyle's Thirty Acres the winner of the Firpo-Willard fight to oppose him. Following that it is proposed to put Dempsey against Harry Wills on Labor Day. After that—well, if he wins Dempsey will be in the position of being all alone in a class, by himself with none worthy to oppose him.

All these battles should aggregate $1,000,000 receipts for Dempsey and wealth and ease for the rest of his life. It will probably see an end to his ring career. For few can quit the blandishments of ease to take up ring hardships, when the ambition and necessity no longer drive.

Ehmke, Traded to Red Sox by Cobb, Has Won 10 of 15 Games

Right Hander Has Held Opposition to 2.88 Runs a Contest in 146 1-3 Innings — Has Been Batted Out of Box Only Three Times.

By Herman Wecke.

Howard Ehmke, a big right-hander, was not much of a success with the Tigers under Ty Cobb. He could not win, and for some reason or other, he could not get along with the Detroit manager. So last winter, when Cobb saw a chance to make a pennant contender out of his club by obtaining an experienced second sacker, he traded Ehmke to Boston.

Now Ehmke, the only player Boston has to show for the trade, which sent Derrill Pratt and Rip Collins to the Tigers, is the winning pitcher for the Boston hose. Carl Holling, another pitcher sent to Boston by Detroit, did not report, while Herman, a young first sacker, was sent to the Southern League. Pratt is getting into the Detroit batting order only occasionally, while Collins has not been a winning pitcher.

Not only is Ehmke the leading pitcher for Frank Chance—he has won 10 and lost only five, but the man who could not win for Tyrus Raymond Cobb has a better winning percentage than any of the Detroit pitchers. Just another indication of what a change of scenery will do for a baseball athlete.

Permits 2.88 Runs a Game.

Pitching for the Red Sox, a seventh place aggregation, Ehmke has yielded an average of only 2.88 runs a game. He has labored in 146 1-3 innings and in that time only 47 runs have been scored by the opposition. The hits off him total 133. He has struck out 48 batters and walked but 36.

And Ehmke, an erratic performer with the Detroit club, has been able to finish what he has started in the 1923 campaign. The right-hander, who has about as much "stuff" as any twirler in the American League, has opened 16 games for the Chancemen and on 13 occasions he has been in there at the finish. That means he has been taken out only three times. Only twice this season he has been called upon to replace a faltering mate.

Add Ehmke to the list of those pitchers who like to beat their former mates. Twice this season, Howard has faced the Detroit sluggers and twice he has come through with a victory. Cobb's band of maulers has been able to score only three runs in 19 innings against the right-hander. He has permitted the Tigers but 13 safeties. Holding a club for which he could not win to 1½ runs a game is quite a record.

Won Six Games in a Row.

The Philadelphia Athletics, the surprises of the 1923 pennant race, have been easy for Ehmke. He has faced them three times, and on each occasion he has come through with a victory. New York, the Browns, Cleveland and Washington have handed the right-hander his defeats for the season.

Until beaten by the Yankees yesterday Ehmke had won six in a row.

Maybe a difference in the handling of players has something to do with Ehmke's success. As a member of the Tigers he had to take orders for almost every pitched ball. Chance, on the other hand, does not mix in unless he wants a swatter purposely passed.

But whatever it is, Ehmke, who proved a failure with a hard-hitting club behind him, has proved a consistent winner with a weak club supporting him.

French Davis Cup Team Beats Ireland

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, June 23.—The fast pace set by Jean Borotra in his match against E. D. McCrea, of the Irish team today, gave France the right to enter the semi-finals for the Davis Cup in the European zone competion. Borotra's tennis was of a high quality; he won al his service games, but was not able to manage McCrea's clever overhead shots.

The Frenchman was very quick on his feet and usually left his opponent standing. The score was 7-5, 1-6, 5-7, 6-0, 6-2.

France had previously won the singles on Thursday and the doubles Friday and in the second singles of today Henri Cochet defeated the Honorable Cecil Campbell, 0-6, 7-5, 4-6, 10-8, 8-6. This was a brilliant display of tennis, and Cochet won the final set by clever cross court volleys, making aces from seemingly impossible returns.

France will now meet Switzerland.

COOPER WEAKENS IN NINTH, REDS WIN, 5-4

PITTSBURG, June 23.—After having the game sewed up, Cooper weakened in the ninth and the Reds scored three runs which gave them the game over the Phillies, 5 to 4. The Rhinelanders touched Cooper for five hits in this inning, Pinelli's single with two out sending Daubert across with the winning tally. Benton, who finished the game after Rixey gave way for a pinch hitter, held the Corsairs in check in the ninth inning. Barnhart had four hits including a triple in as many trips to the plate. The Reds fielded sensationally behind Rixey.

FOILS CHAMPION WILL NOT BE ABLE TO MAKE TRIP WITH U. S. TEAM

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Rene Peroy, of the New York Fencers Club, holder of the National foils championship will be unable to accompany the American team when it sails for London next month to defend the Robert M. Thompson trophy against a British team in a series of international matches.

Peroy's withdrawal, which was regarded as a severe blow to the Yankee team's chances, was revealed by the Amateur Fencers League of America in announcing final selection of the team of 1 swordsmen that will make the trip. It was said that he was unable to arrange his affairs so as to accompany the internationalists.

Miss Filkay Sets New Hurdle Mark

CHICAGO, June 23.—Helen Filkay, Chicago girl athlete, established a new world's record for women when she ran the 60-yard low hurdles this afternoon in 8 2-5 seconds, in the annual Illinois Athletic Club games here today. The former record was 8 4-5 seconds, established last September at the national A. A. U. meet at Newark.

Munro Wins Ohio Title.

TOLEDO, June 23.—Jack Munro, of Zanesvile who does his golfing over a nine-hole course today became amateur golf champion of Ohio when he defeated Frank Southard, of the Inverness Club, Toledo, 4 up and 3 to play in the 36-hole finals of the State tournament.

Gibbons to Cut Down on Training Stunts This Week

Challenger Has Reached Top of Physical Condition — Punishes Sparring Mates.

SHELBY, Mont., June 23.—"Electric shocks" are warning Tom Gibbons that it is time to put on the brakes in his training for his championship contest with Jack Dempsey here July 4. The challenger said that he had begun to experience the darting sensations in his back, which indicated to him that he had reached the top of his form.

Gibbons will not work Tuesday or Thursday of next week, and he will close his conditioning grind a week from Monday.

There was no evidence of any decision to lighten his work in the workout the challenger went through this afternoon, however. Another rainstorm kept him indoors, but it did not dampen his hitting ardor.

He danced and feinted about five sparring partners, in 10 rounds of punishing punch swapping that was the liveliest and most ruthless Gibbons has indulged in since he started training.

The challenger rocked Tillie "Kid" Herman to his shoe-strings, with a left smash in the second round of their melee. A moment later he jolted Herman with a right cross that bent him backwards.

Gibbons did not draw his punches but hammered in lefts, right crosses and uppercuts and body blows with the speed of a trip-hammer.

Jimmy Delaney forced Gibbons to the utmost today. He weathered a storm of bolws by virtue of his speed and footwork. Several times Gibbons feinted him into leads, which left him open and Delaney caught hooks and uppercuts flush on the jaw.

Gibbons breathed easily and danced about the ring at the conclusion of the workout, attesting the improved condition of his wind.

Great Falls, Mont., June 24.—Just one more week and promoters of the Dempsey-Gibbons championship bout, scheduled at Shelby for July 4, must pay the champion the third and final $100,000 of his guarantee for the fracas.

After the difficulty met in making the second $100,000 payment on June 16, the promoters promised to make the final handover several days in advance of the date due to put a damper on rumers that the bout might be called off.

No announcement of ticket sales has been made.

The promoters said, however, the money will be paid Monday or Tuesday; there is small chance of a fluke The men behind the bout are now in $210,000 paid Dempsey, $70,000 for the arena and an estimated general promotion expense of $50,000. In this deep water there appears little likelihood of the bout being calded off because of a smal ladvance seat sale.

Wray in Hospital.

"Big Ben" Wray of Sayre, Ok., with his 7 feet 2 inches of pugilistic ambition, will do his eating through a tube, takng liquids only as a result of the disastrous 28 seconds he was in the ring with Dempsey yesterday.

Wray, whose right jaw was broken just at the edge of the mouth from the force of a crashing left hook, that knocked him out, was removed to a hospital today under instructions of the physician attending him. The broken jaw was placed in a plaster cast and two teeth were removed to allow for the insertion of a tube through which Wray must be fed.

The Oklahoma giant, propped up in bed, accepted his fate with a smile, joking with callers by words he was forced to mumble because of the cast which held his jaw in place.

Mehlhorn Three Under 4's for 108 Holes in Practice for U. S. Open

Bill Mehlhorn continues his clever shooting in preparation for the National open golf championship, to be played next month at Inwood. Bill stroked Glen Echo in 72 on Friday and 73 yesterday which gives him a record of two under 4s for six rounds. His last six 18-role rounds follow: 72, 70, 69, 74, 72 and 73. The 74 was made over the St. Louis Country Club course and the others at Glen Echo.

"Glen Echo is near to my own ranch—North Hills—and then the greens are the most nearly perfect in the district," Hehlhorn explained. "The putting surfaces there are as true as can be found and that means much in preparing for a tournament. I want to make a good record in the National open. I want to win it. And I made up my mind that I would be ready. Nobody knows, of course, when a poor round is going to come along and ruin you, but I'll at least have the satisfaction of feeling that I'm fit and on my game."

Mehlhorn will depart for the East Thursday to practice over the tournament course.

Manion a Favorite in T.-M. Tourney

Held, Bockenkamp and Anderson Also Will Represent St. Louis at Minneapolis.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 23.—Four St. Louis golf stars will be among the starters Monday in the qualifying round of the trans-Mississippi golf tournament to be held over the 18-hole course of the Minikahda Club and one of them, Jimmy Manion, will be among the favorites. Manion recently won the St. Louis District and Missouri State championships and is playing the best golf of his career.

Other St. Louisans who will shoot at the title are Dick Bockenkamp of Midland Valley, Donald Anderson of Normandie and Eddie Held, national public links champion who is representing the Algonquin Golf Club.

The St. Louis quartet constitutes one of the strongest teams in the tournament, though golf enthusiasts expressed regret when it was learned that Clarence Wolff, the brilliant stylist from Sunset Hill, had decided not to compete for the T.-M. title.

Dempsey to Celebrate Twenty-Eighth Birthday

GREAT FALLS, Mont., June 23.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, after a strenuous workout tomorrow, his twenty-eighth birthday, plans to enjoy a full day of rest Monday and then begin the process of tapering off for the defense of his title against Tommy Gibbons at Shelby July 4.

Dempsey told his manager, Jack Kearns, he did not want to work with gloves tomorrow. It was announced that unless a large crowd of fans visited his camp in the afternoon Dempsey would only do light training. If he works tomorrow, Dempsey will rest Monday, launching into tapering off of his training Tuesday.

Dempsey will box every day in the week, Kearns said, unless he finds himself going stale.

Today before a big crowd, the champion proved that he does not know what it means to stall in the ring. Working with George Godfrey, Philadelphia negro giant; Jack Burke, Pittsburg heavyweight, and Harry Drake, big British punch absorber, all of whom Dempsey has knocked cuckoo in previous workout tangles, Dempsey gave a sorry exhibition. Only when he became disgusted with being under wraps and opened up at the finish of six slow rounds, did he show anything pleasing.

18 Forest Park Golfers to Play In Junior Event

Forty-Nine Entries Received for Tournament to Start Tuesday at Country Club.

MEDART TO DEFEND TITLE

Paul Kiebler, 14 Years Old, Is Youngest Player Entered in Competition.

Forty-nine youthful golfers have entered the junior district golf championship which will open at the St. Louis Country Club Tuesday with an 18-hole qualifying round and others are expected to register for the competition between now and the starting time. Entries will be received until 2 p. m. of the day of the qualifying round.

William Medart of Sunset, 1922 champion, will defend his title in the competition at the Country Club. Among others who will strive to win the Gardner trophy will be Dozier Gardner, son of the donor, former Gov. Gardner. The trophy will remain in the possession of the winner for one year, being restored to competition each season. In addition to the cup the winner and runner-up and the class winners and medalist will receive medals suitable inscribed.

Eighteen young golfers from the Forest Park Golf Club will be in the title competition. It was proposed to enter 12, as is done in the men's district event, but there was such a demand for places that 18 representatives of the park links were admitted.

Qualifying play will start at 9 o'clock Tuesday and the best 32 scores will qualify for match play in the championship class. The next 16 scores will form class A. Match play will be at 18 holes until the final of the title flight when the distance will be increased to 36 holes.

The finals will be played Friday. Play will be governed by rules of the United States Golf Association, except when modified by ground rules of the Country Club.

Paul Kiebler Jr., 14 years old, of 7801 Kingsbury boulevard, is the youngest golfer entered in the tournament.

Pairings for the qualifying round follow:

9—Homer Herpel, Forest Park, and Ralph A. Cash, Sunset.
9:10—John S. McMillan, Country Club, and Joseph Foley, Forest Park.
9:20—Edward Haverstick, Midland Valley, and Fred Schombach, Forest Park.
9:30—Paul Kiebler Jr., Kirkwood, and James Emert, Bellerive.
9:40—John Montague, Glen Echo, and Russel Tuedtman, Forest Park.
9:50—Edgard Skinner, Normandy, and Robert Orthwein, Sunset.
10—D. McGirk Mitchell, Kirkwood, and Harold Chappell, Forest Park.
10:10—Ronald Foulis, Forest Park, and Edwin Wagner Jr., Algonquin.
10:20—Marion Smith, Forest Park, and Judson Erwin, Bellerive.
10:30—John Isaacs Jr., Westwood, and Meredith Beckman, Forest Park.
10:40—John C. Lee, Forest Park, and Gordon Strassberger, Algonquin.
10:50—Bentley Schulz, Forest Park, and Robert Bartlett, Country Club.
11—Charles O'Connor, Forest Park, and C. B. Temple Jr., Sunset.
11:10—William Medart, Sunset, and J. Hale Searcy, Glen Echo.
11:20—Edmund Goedde Jr., St. Clair, and Luther Schambach, Forest Park.
11:30—Bruce Campbell, St. Clair, and Stephen Williams, Forest Park.
11:40—Howard Williams, Country Club, and Dozier Gardner, Bellerive.
11:50—Robert Williamson, Kirkwood, and Walter Condon, Forest Park.
12—H. M. Montieth, Forest Park, and Dale Morton, Triple A.
1—Franklin Beck, Algonquin, and Graves Gladney, Forest Park.
1:10—Charles Lorenz, Sunset, and Walter Murray, Forest Park.
1:20—Charles T. Jones, St. Clair, and James E. Mullin, Forest Park.
1:30—James Allen Jr., Sunset, and Harmon Green, Kirkwood.
1:40—Herbert A. Lorenz, Sunset, and Stockton Sommers, Triple A.
1:50—Arthur Feuerbacher, Sunset.

DEPOSITIONS IN COAST LEAGUE ROW TAKEN

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 23.—Taking of depositions was practically completed today in behalf of the defense in the suit of Charles L. Lockard, against William H. McCarthy, president of the Pacific Coast League, to compel McCarthy to recognize Lockard as a league director representing the Seattle club.

Two witnesses were examined in an effort to substantiate McCarthy's contention that Lockard is not entitled to recognition because William Wrigley Jr., is part owner of the Los Angeles club, was financially interested in the Seattle club. James O. Moore, vice president of a Los Angeles bank from which Lockard and Wade Killefer borrowed $125,000 to buy control in the Seattle organization said the money was loaned on a note endorsed by Wrigley, for which another note was substituted later, endorsed by Robert Killefer, cousin of Wade, and W. D. Hubbard. He said he was satisfied of the financial responsibility of the latter two.

The second note was marked paid April 16 last, and a third note made out by Lockard and Wade Killefer on May 11 secured by the Seattle stock held by them. Moore said he could not explain why there was apparently no security for the loan in the intervening time.

PEARSON WINS TENNIS TITLE OF DELAWARE

WILMINGTON, Del., June 23.—Stanley Pearson of Philadelphia won the Delaware State tennis championship today, defeating Lewis White of the University of Texas in the final round, 3—6, 6—3, 6—1, 6—4.

LEWIS THRICE ARRESTED, MISTAKEN FOR SLAYER

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 23.—Ed (Strangler) Lewis was arrested three times when motoring through Cleveland yesterday, it was disclosed here today when the wrestling champion arrived to complete his training before sailing for Europe. Lewis was suspected of being a man who is alleged to have shot and killed a Cleveland policeman.

Cleveland police had been notified to be on the watch for a motorist with a red automobile with a Missouri license, and Lewis' description fitted. He was taken to three different station houses, but was released when he proved his identity. He was six hours going through Cleveland.

Lewis will sail for Europe with his manager, Billy Sandow, on July 4 from New York. It will be a pleasure trip primarily, but Lewis says he may engage in exhibition bouts.

Grahams Capture Double-Header From Bell Team

Blech Yields but Two Hits in Winning Second Game, 10-3.

The Graham team advanced to a tie for first place in the Commercial League yesterday afternoon when they took both ends of a double-header from the Bell Telephones. The first contest proved an easy victory, 11 to 2. In the second game Blech, pitching for Grahams, yielded only two hits and won, 10 to 3.

The Union Electrics, league leaders, suffered their second defeat of the season, when Tower Camp nosed them out, 9 to 8.

Zev Wins Feature Race at Aqueduct

Rancocas Stable Star Adds $8100 to Prize Money Taking Queens Handicap.

NEW YORK, June 23. — The Rancocas Stable's Zev, just as he runs his races, has opened up a big gap on all the other horses in training for the leading money-winning honors of the season. By his victory in the Queens County Handicap at Aqueduct today he increased his total for 1923 to $125,900.

The stakes and the purses he has won this year include: The Paumonok Handicap, $4650; the Rainbow Handicap, $3250; the Kentucky Derby, $53,600; the Withers, $18,300; the Belmont Stakes, $38,000, and the Queens County Handicap, $8100.

As a 2-year-old he won the Grand Union Hotel Stakes and the Albany Handicap and three overnight Hopeful Stakes.

Good jumpers come in all shapes and sizes, but J. S. Cosden's Faskadale, winner of the Phantom Steeplechase Handicap, is just about the smallest horse that ever raced through the field in this country.

The other morning Woods Garth, his trainer, was preparing to school him when something went wrong with the girth strap. Woods, who does not girth quite as much as his father and who has a good eye for measurement, was unwilling to waste time sending over to the barn for another strap, so he took of his belt and tried it around Faskadale. The belt was too big.

HARVARD AND YALE ADD SEVEN MEN TO THE TEAM TO COMPETE IN ENGLAND

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 23.—Harvard added four members and Yale three to the combined team which will meet the Oxford-Cambridge track team in England on July 21, as a result of special trials held in the stadium today. Seventeen place winners in the recent Harvard-Yale meet had already been chosen.

Tibbetts, a Harvard freshman, won a place in the two-mile race, making the trial run this afternoon in 9 minutes 34 2-5 seconds, better time than that made in the varsity dual meet. Gerould of Harvard place by beating Thayer of Harwith a leap of 5 feet 10 inches. Dunker of Harvard defeated Jordon of Yale by winning today's shot put competition with a heave of 42 feet 3⅞ inches. Martingale became another Harvard representative by winning the pole vault, just grazing the bar at 11 feet 7 inches. Cole, a Yale freshman, won his place by beating Hhayer of Harvard by an eyelash in the 220-yard low hurdles. Cheney of Yale took a place in the broad jump, clearing 22 feet 4½ inches, a bare quarter of an inch in front of his teammate, Weinecke. Milliken of Yale defeated Hauers, former Harvard intercollegiate, 120-yard high hurdles champion.

Dr. John Kniordysd
Rx
2 tablets Nuxated Iron after meals
John Kniaugs

"Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron?"

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine.

Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Careworn, Haggard-Looking Women in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without plenty of iron in their blood," said a prominent New York physician and medical author recently. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more of the iron for their nervous, rundown, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks. They become weak, irritable, and nervous because food for the nerves can only be supplied through the blood and when the blood is thin and anaemic the nerves are improperly nourished. The nervous mother or housekeeper is highly irritable, forgets where she puts things, and often cannot remember what she started to do. At night she often has a "good cry" and excuses it by saying it is a relief for her nerves, when it means a high state of nerve force exhaustion. Often her nervousness and irritability are a strain on her children and may help to wreck their delicate nervous systems."

Medical science and chemistry has proven that NERVE FORCE IS A DISTINCT SUBSTANCE SIMILAR TO YOUR BLOOD. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, trifling things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back one woman thinks she has kidney trouble, another may think her spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull, heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck leads another to think she is going to have paresis. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. When you lack nerve force, there is only one thing that is going to help you, and that is more nerve force. IN SUCH CASES IT IS WORSE THAN FOOLISH TO WASTE YOUR TIME TAKING MERE STIMULATING MEDICINES OR NARCOTIC DRUGS. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force, the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituents of active living nerve force, in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable ingredients under the name of "Nuxated Iron," so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force, the moment it enters the body, may now easily be had, simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day, with or after your meals. ORGANIC IRON CONTAINED IN NUXATED IRON IS LIKE THE IRON IN YOUR BLOOD, and like the iron in spinach, carrots, lentils and apples. It not only quickly enriches the blood, but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve force directly to the nerve and brain cells, but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Over 4,000,000 people are using Nuxated Iron annually. If you are weak, nervous or run down, get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

MEIKLEJOHN FAILED BECAUSE HE "WAS LOTS OF WOODROW WILSON," BUT "WAS NONE OF LLOYD GEORGE"

Writer, in Reviewing Incidents Which Led to Voting Out of President of Amherst College, Tells of Certain Required Conventionalities He Would Not Adapt Himself To.

Declined to Be Social Leader, Something His Position Demanded, and Was Not of "Back Slapping" Type; Trustees Called Upon to Straighten Out Household Finances.

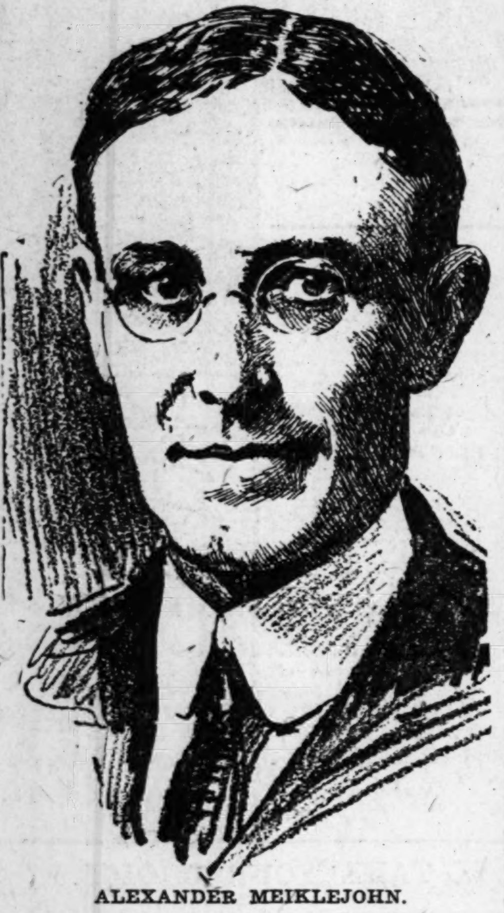
By WALTER LIPPMAN.

(The author, who is a member of the New York World editorial staff, spent two days in Amherst this week and this article is the record of his investigation.)

NEW YORK, June 23.

WHEN he fell, Alexander Meiklejohn had lost the support of all his trustees, of two-thirds of his faculty, and probably of most of the alumni who had never studied under him. Of those who had been graduated during the 10 years of his leadership of Amherst College the overwhelming majority are his thick and thin supporters. From the present student body he elicits a kind of devotion which I have never seen before among college men.

I have been with Amherst seniors, leaders of their class, fellows who, in an ordinary college, would be ashamed of their seriousness, and they talk of Meiklejohn as only the greatest of teachers are talked about. I have seen juniors who felt that with the dismissal of Meiklejohn the gates of life had been slammed in their faces. I have talked to professors, trustees and leaders of the alumni. They have a case, a pretty strong case, against Meiklejohn by the ordinary standards of this world, but they were dealing and in their hearts they know they were dealing, with an exceptional. They dealt according to the rules of the rather common sense with a very uncommon man.



ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN.

The story of Meiklejohn at Amherst can be told quite simply and frankly. He was born in Rochdale, England, in 1872, and came to America in 1880. His earliest memories are not of New England. He was educated not at Amherst, but at Brown and Cornell. He is married to Nannie A. Lavilla, the daughter of an Italian father, and, I believe an English mother. The Meiklejohn household is not a Puritan household.

Eleven years ago it was transplanted into the midst of a very small, deeply rooted New England community. It never took root. It remained exotic and unusually conspicuous. For the president of a New England college is no mere president of a college. He is, by tradition, a lay bishop and a social leader and a first citizen. The Meiklejohns' tastes did not run to that kind of thing. They had no natural local patriotism, no particular taste for the companionship of some of the local dignitaries; they had an inclination to be bored, and small powers of hiding what they felt.

These aliens came into a community rather more than well content with a fine tradition, used to comfortable living and settled ways. There had been feuds before. At least two other Amherst presidents within a generation have been ousted. But President Meiklejohn came as a reformer. He came, an alien, openly intending, with the backing of the trustees, to modernize Amherst. That meant changing the curriculum and changing the faculty.

Had Enemies From Start.

He therefore had irreconcilable enemies from the start. About five professors, it is said, had from the beginning a violent dislike for President Meiklejohn. There is no use attempting to go into the details of this early antagonism. It involved appointments and promotions and brought upon him, I am told, the hostility of one powerful fraternity and the strong support of an equally powerful neighbor. The important point is that Meiklejohn was building a new faculty and that this meant the shelving and diminution of the old faculty.

It means that the president backed the new faculty. It meant a loss of influence, a loss of students, a loss of courses for the old faculty.

An idea of what this meant may be had from the following very rough calculation: In 1922-23 there were in the departments of biology, chemistry, economics, English, Greek, history, philosophy and political science about 27 teachers. Thirteen of these would be rated as new faculty and 14 as old. There were about 1700 student enrollments. The new faculty taught about 1100 and the old faculty about 600.

This preponderating influence of the Meiklejohn faculty seems to have been reached five years ago. But the figures do not tell the whole truth. The intellectual life of the Amherst student body was under the control of the new men. The elite of the student body followed their leadership. Not only in quantity of students, but far more in quality, the Meiklejohn professors had won the students.

Such a change is revolutionary in the life of a small college town. It brings tragedy and jealousy in its train. The tragedy lies in the older men, who had given their lives to Amherst, and now had to watch year by year the students leaving them and giving their devotion to newcomers. The jealousy arose out of this tragedy. Mr. Meiklejohn, I believe, never really faced either the tragedy or the jealousy. He ignored them and tried to muddle through. He failed and that is why he is not now president of Amherst College.

There were two policies open to him. One was to demand at the very start full power to dismiss the faculty. He never asked this power. Probably he could not have had it even when the trustees were still solidly back of him. If he had had it he probably would have been slow to exercise it, because you cannot turn a large number of old and loyal professors into the street. As one trustee said to me: "Meiklejohn might have built his own faculty had there been a sensible pension system and a plucking board. But without a pension system the ineffective members of the old faculty could not be eliminated without violating the Fifth Commandment."

Was Not Tactician.

They could not be eliminated without "cause," except as they passed the retiring age, and some of the oldest of the old faculty are not only personally upright and attractive men, but are physiologically fairly young men.

The only other course open to Meiklejohn was to manage the transition from the old to the new faculty delicately and skillfully. He was not skillful, nor wholly delicate, and some of his supporters were wholly clumsy and very indelicate. The fact that the old were old was, I am afraid, rubbed into them. The fact that they were on the shelf was pointed out to them. Differences of educational theory and differences of opinion were identified with the tragedy of the older men and the assertiveness of the younger men. Bitter things were said and repeated. The older faculty thought their back was to the wall. The defense of the old Amherst spirit became inextricably entangled with the defense of their own position.

What this old Amherst feeling is like and how it reacted to President Meiklejohn is well illustrated by the following letter by Robert Frost, one of the leading American poets and at the time of this letter professor of English at Amherst. Mr. Frost, as it happens, was a Meiklejohn appointee. But his letter expresses what is in the hearts of the old faculty and the older alumni:

Amherst, Mass., Feb. 2, 1920.

Dear Mr. Breed:

I am forced after all to give up the idea of speaking at the Amherst dinner, and I owe you something more than a telegram in explanation. I have decided to leave teaching and go back to farming and writing. Strangely enough, I was helped to this decision by your invitation. It was in turning over in my mind my subject chosen for the dinner that I came to the conclusion that I was too much out of sympathy with what the present administration seems bent on doing with this old New England college. I suppose I might say that I am too much outraged in the historical sense for loyalty. I can't complain that I haven't enjoyed the "academic freedom" to be entirely myself under Mr. Meiklejohn. While he detests my dangerously rationalistic and anti-intellectualistic philosophy, he thinks he is willing to have it represented here. But probably it will be better represented by someone who can take it a little less seriously than I.

There are regrets that I mustn't go into here. The main thing is that I am out of Amherst and it won't be fitting that I should speak for Amherst at the dinner.

Believe me deeply sensible of the friendly treatment I have had from Amherst men, and,

Most sincerely yours,
ROBERT FROST.

Mr. Meiklejohn, absorbed in his task and putting aside what to him would have been a mild hypocrisy, did few of the conventional things which often mean so much. He did not succeed—I think he did not try very hard—in making the old men personally comfortable. He is not a glad-hander, nor, in the college sense, a jolly good fellow. He is personally austere, kindly, humble and diffident.

Religious but Not Churchly.

He is religious but not churchly; he is a patriot, but not by Calvin Coolidge standards a 100 percenter. He did not go to town meeting; he neglected to vote. He did not send his boys to the public schools, but engaged tutors for them. He did not always read the Bible in the college church; he is in favor of athletics, but not too deeply concerned about winning teams. He brought a spirit into Amherst such as few American colleges have known, but it wasn't, of course, the old Amherst spirit. He was an outsider, and except as to the souls of his students, he remained an outsider. And this outsider was striking and allowing his appointees to strike at the ego of older, deeply-planted Amherst men.

Then there entered into the situation which has not been written about, although it is common gossip at Amherst and fundamental to an understanding of what happened. The Meiklejohn household did not live within the President's income for a good many years. Accumulated debts had to be made good by individual trustees, and finally two years ago the trustees read the riot act to him about the management of personal finances. These finances were adjusted two years ago, and since then no further difficulties have arisen. But this episode broke the moral unity between the president and the board of trustees. They did not all put the same weight upon the facts, but it is correct to say, I think, that the trustees believed that from that time on their confidence was shaken. Their minds were now open to the Meiklejohn opposition of the faculty. The natural conservatism of many of the trustees had a specific charge to work on, which made it plausible to believe and emphasize the prejudice against Meiklejohn.

This change in the attitude of the trustees was reflected, I believe, in the faculty. It is reasonable to believe that the opposition became stronger when it was known that the president's support from the trustees was in doubt. It became very strong in the last year. Where formerly there had been three evenly divided groups in the faculty, one pro-Meiklejohn, one anti, and one on the fence, there were now two factions only and most of the neutral group were in the anti-Meiklejohn faction. The president was outvoted two to one in his own faculty. He won none of the older men. He retained a majority, but not all of his own appointees. How much this was due to convinced differences about educational policy, how much to judgment about administrative ability, how much to belief that the anti-Meiklejohn faction was going to win, I do not know, and it would be invidious to guess.

In any event, during the last winter the faculty of Amherst has been divided into two irreconcilable factions. These factions ceased to vote, it appears, on the merits of a case. They usually were for the president or against him. There was no middle ground and the deadlock was hopeless. Mr. Meiklejohn was unable to break it alone.

Could Not Manage Faculty.

It was on this deadlock that the trustees demanded his resignation. There were, as I understand it, two determining elements in their action. There were some trustees who regarded Meiklejohn as unfit to be president of Amherst, either because of his personal financial mismanagement or because of his break with the conservative Amherst tradition.

Hints 'Interests' Caused Prosecutions

Pierce C. Wetter, One of Men Sent to Leavenworth From Chicago, Declares Industrial Workers Did Not Interfere With Prosecution of War.

Recalls Incidents in Connection With Arrest and Trial; Says Men Were Hanged in Cook County Jail in Hearing Distance of Other Prisoners.

By Pierce C. Wetter,

An I. W. W. Prisoner, Released After Serving a Five-Year Sentence.

IT was a bright, sunshiny day in September, 1917, when, while driving a lumber wagon on the border of Canada, I first heard of the raids made upon I. W. W. offices and halls by Federal and local officers. The raids were the first move of the Government that ended in the imprisonment of myself and hundreds of other I. W. W.'s on a charge of conspiracy to interfere with the prosecution of the war. The facts of the cases and the opinions of many prominent people on our convictions and the continued imprisonment of my fellow members have been well told in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. There remains to be told the story of our imprisonment as seen by us through our arrest, trial and imprisonment.

As one who was a defendant in the Chicago I. W. W. case and who received and served his five-year sentence, I can tell the events of our imprisonment as we, the defendants, saw it. Probably it is well to add that in spite of my five years' imprisonment I am still a member and firm believer in the Industrial Workers of the World—because I believe it to be a constructive, scientific organization that if allowed to work out its program can bring about a change in our present social system without chaos and bloodshed, thereby establishing a society worthy the intelligence of human beings, where the evils of our present system, including war, are eliminated.

This view of our program no doubt will startle readers who have become used to considering I. W. W.'s to be wild-eyed, long-haired, unwashed fanatics. To the average newspaper reader we are a rather terrifying moving-picture villain and a kind of national goat upon which to blame everything from a sore toe to a cyclone.

Returning to my experiences, I was driving a lumber wagon delivering lumber from a yard in Canada across the imaginary line to customers in Northern Montana, a drive of a few hundred yards, when I was suddenly hailed by a man in work clothes whom I recognized as a fellow member. Halting my horse, I waited for him to approach, noticing that the horse was in Canada and the wagon and I were in the United States. As my friend approached I noticed he was excited and was holding a newspaper which he gave me at once with the exclamation: "Why on earth did they do it?"

Held Lease to Hall.

On glancing at the Great Falls (Mont.) newspaper, I read in big headlines of raids on I. W. W. halls all over the country. They had raided the Great Falls hall, and had seized quantities of I. W. W. literature and supplies, but had made no arrests. I read this with deep regret, as it would hinder the work we had been doing in that locality. I had been working for about a year in that locality in mining and construction work, giving any leisure time to the organization in an attempt to better working conditions.

I answered my friend rather grimly: "What can you expect? Have not the lumber and copper companies been charging us with every conceivable crime under the sun in an attempt to break our strikes? Have they not declared our strikes were in behalf of the Kaiser to interfere with the war? Have they not declared us to be receivers of German gold and to be German spies?"

"But the Government knows that those statements are not true," answered my friend, and asked, "What do you think will come of it?"

This ended our conversation, and a week later I was up in Canada helping harvest its wheat crop. One day in November, 1917, threshing having been completed around Medicine Hat, Canada, I came into that city and received my mail. One letter, from the secretary at Great Falls, told me that Federal officers were looking for me in regard to the investigation of the I. W. W. I immediately wired the Sheriff at Great Falls asking him if I was wanted and if so I would be only too glad to return.

My telegram was never answered, but about five days later I was stopped by a policeman, who inquired of my name was Pierce Wetter. On answering in the affirmative, I was told that the Chief of Police had a telegram about me and wished to see me.

I went with him to see the Chief and was informed that the Federal authorities had telegraphed him asking for my arrest and that I be held until they sent someone for me.

A week later saw me on my way to Chicago in the charge of a Medicine Hat officer, the Government having been so desirous to secure me that they had sent several hundred dollars to Canada to pay the expenses of my return. On arrival at Chicago I was taken to Cook County jail.

SALTED PHOTO

PIERCE C. WETTER

All who had been arrested were placed in the old wing of the Cook County jail on Dearborn street in Chicago. There were nearly 90 members there on my arrival and I was informed that the Government had indicted 106 of us, including myself, charging us with conspiracy to interfere with the prosecution of the war. A few of the 166 had been dead a couple of years, others we had never heard of, while very few of us knew more than a half-dozen of those indicted with us.

Placed Three in Cell.

The conditions in Cook County jail were intolerable. We were placed three in a cell. The cells were about four and one-half feet wide, 10 feet high and nine feet long, with three narrow bunks one above another; at the rear was a wash basin and an open toilet caked with dirt that had accumulated during the several decades since it was first installed. The cells were dark, as the electric light was outside. The light streaked in through the steel lattice work above the cell door and through the steel door. We were constantly trying to eliminate the vermin in our cells, but found it a hopeless job.

We occupied our cells for 20 hours a day, being allowed out two hours in the morning and two in the afternoon to walk in a corridor around the cell block. The corridor was about 10 feet wide and 150 feet long, with some 400 prisoners trying to take advantage of the opportunity to stretch their legs. No sunlight ever reached the floor upon which we walked, fresh air was unknown, but still we welcomed being turned out from the cells.

It did not take long for such conditions to gradually undermine our health. Poor food, bad air, poor light soon began to take their toll, although many of us were sturdy from outdoor work. Eyesight began to fail from trying to read during the long hours in the cell by the poor light. We watched two of our number gradually go insane, besides a number of other prisoners that went insane. Two contracted tuberculosis and others were ill from fever.

To add to all this we twice heard prisoners hanged. On the morning of a hanging in Cook County jail the prisoners celling near the gallows (which is constructed quickly the night before) are transferred over to the other side of the cell house, packing the other cells, where they cannot see the hanging, but can hear it. The prisoners are transferred to the other cells, and then there is a dead silence. All know that the gallows is in perfect condition to do its duty by society, for did not we strain our hearing the evening before and hear them test the gallows with a sandbag?

The silence continues. You are straining to hear in spite of your attempt not to. Then you hear something. What is it? You feel queer. Suddenly shouts burst forth from hundreds of prisoners' throats. You choke and wish to shout and curse as the rest are doing. Why shout? you ask yourself; probably the man deserved it. But you still want to shout your protest against it.

Two Propositions Offered.

After we had endured such conditions for about six months, one of our attorneys, George Vanderveer, got permission to speak to us. We were all called together in the jail. Attorney Vanderveer offered us a choice of two propositions—one to fight our case to the higher court on the technicality of the illegality of the search warrant and in this way postpone trial for a couple of years, and the other to go at once to trial.

The first proposal seemed the wisest, as there would be a chance of a fair trial when the war hysteria was over. But our patience was exhausted. We knew it was impossible to secure bonds and the two years would have to be spent in Cook County jail. We had already learned that anyone who was brave enough to come forward in spite of the hysteria to put up our bonds would be pestered by Federal agents and war fanatics who were denouncing everyone who did not agree with them as pro-German. So we preferred to go to trial, with the odds heavy against us, rather than to endure two years more of the county jail. We had, of course, the optimistic belief in our own innocence and that in spite of the hysteria we could win our case.

Our trial before Judge Kenesaw M. Landis commenced the first part of April, 1918, and dragged on for nearly five months. There were over 100 of us on trial and it seemed to us more as if we were merely spectators at a drama than a part of it. The trial was a battle of ideas, with the Government trying to prove an anti-war conspiracy by twisting words and laying special emphasis on some phrase or paragraph in a pamphlet or newspaper article years old.

We were on trial for conspiracy to interfere with the prosecution of the war on four counts:

1. Under the espionage act by the circulation of certain pamphlets and newspapers (it is only under this that the men are now serving sentence).
2. To get 10,000 of our members not to register.
3. To interfere with the prosecution of the war by strikes and force.
4. To interfere with rights of employers to fulfill contracts with the Government.

Under the last two counts the Government tried to prove that the strikes in the lumber camps and copper mines in 1917 were for the purpose of interfering with the war.

We contended that the object of our actions during the war period was to better industrial conditions, and, although we were against wars in general on principle, we had not conspired to interfere with the prosecution of the war. We produced evidence to show our strikes were for better working conditions and not for the object of interfering with the war; that the circulation of pamphlets and newspapers was to improve working conditions, and although they might contain an occasional expression on war it was incidental and not the object for which they were circulated. The charge that we tried to get our members not to register was disproved by the fact that 20 of those on trial were of registration age and of this number 19 had registered; besides, we brought our members from army camps to testify in our behalf.

Before and during the trial our defense was constantly hampered by raids in which Federal authorities seized defense material, including funds and even blank paper bought to issue an appeal for help. The Postoffice held up our defense mail and the express companies, under orders from the Government, refused to accept anything from us. Finally, in a desperate attempt to reach our friends and prospective witnesses our defense committee had to use an automobile to travel around the surrounding towns in hopes that mail sent from there would be allowed to reach its destination.

Although we were forced to put up with such interference in our defense, we still introduced what we considered evidence of our innocence of the charges. The case after nearly five months of trial went to the jury in the latter part of August, 1918. A verdict of "guilty" was returned for all, about 100 men, the jury taking only 55 minutes.

Tells of Trip to Prison.

We were soon on our way to Leavenworth Penitentiary, carrying sentences varying from 20 years to one year and a day. To us there seemed to be neither rhyme nor reason to our sentences. I was given five years, while other men who were scarcely mentioned in the trial received 10 and 20 year sentences.

We arrived in Leavenworth in a special train of three coaches, having been en route for 18 hours from Chicago. Our reception by the other prisoners was pleasant, there being no hostility shown towards us. Other prisoners collected tobacco to give to us until we were able to secure our own, which was usually a

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Farmer on the I. W. W.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

FOR more than a year I have been a reader of your Sunday issue. I assure you that I admire and approve your editorial policies on all public questions and issues. Especially am I delighted with the stand you have taken in the two last issues of the Sunday paper in behalf of the "political" prisoners now confined in the Federal prison at Leavenworth. You are absolutely right—have no fear that your patriotic stand will be successfully combated by the enemies of free speech—like the fellow down at Mena, Ark. The I. W. Ws. are in prison for exercising their constitutional rights. They were smart enough to know in whose interests the World War was being fought—the bondholders of both countries. Our boys, who were conscripted, know in whose interests the war was being fought.

In my honest judgment we were forced to get into the World War by the American bondholders, who held the allies' bonds, to send our boys overseas to assist the allied capitalists, so the American capitalists could collect from them.

The war was a gigantic failure. All wars are destructive of both life and property, and the I. W. W. knew that the loss of life would have to come from the laboring classes, of which they are a part, and for exercising their political rights they are now in prison—martyrs to free speech and thought.

Our Wall street government is now looking quietly on, hoping that France will succeed in stealing enough from Germany to pay the American bondholders what they claim she owes them. No, we have not got the real criminals in prison. Suppose we turn our political prisoners out and put our war lords and war profiteers in.

If the I. W. W. were all rich men they could buy out of prison, but these I. W. W. are all poor laboring men, and were not convicted of a crime, but are held as political prisoners for political reasons only. Mr. Frederick of Mena, Ark., talks a great deal about his patriotism, and yet says he wants a bonus to pay him for his patriotism.

I have had lots of I. W. W. work for me on my farms, and I never had a more decent, self-respecting set of men about me. They at no time talked "destruction of property or of government," but they were against the political principles advanced by both old parties, and they are not alone in this respect.

Topeka, Kan. J. W. KENNEDY.

"A Barbarous Disgrace."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MAY I add my word of commendation and gratitude to you for the splendid series of articles and editorials in the Post-Dispatch on the subject of the political prisoners?

The lot of these men is a barbarous disgrace in any country that calls itself civilized, but now that your powerful papers are calling attention to their righteous cause I feel sure that the release of all will soon be effected, and that you will not stop your appeal in their behalf until it is effected.

Mr. Paul Y. Anderson's description of Leavenworth Prison and sketches of the prisoners and the warden seemed to me a journalistic masterpiece.

What Has the Anglo-Saxon Done?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT was agreeable to read the letter, "Analysis of the Decay of Free Speech," signed Holston Haynes, in the Post-Dispatch issue June 18, save wherein he states that recent tendencies towards suppressions of free speech are "simply the Latin espionage of Europe directed against the old Anglo-Saxon tradition of free thought and discussion."

I have heard a lot of inexact speech about the contribution of the so-called Anglo-Saxon race to civilization, liberty, etc. I have tried to ascertain these things for myself, but diligent study of Green and other historians has failed to reveal to me any notable contributions made by the so-called Anglo-Saxon race to art, letters, government, civilization, and humanity.

Question: What has been the contribution of the so-called, much-vaunted Anglo-Saxon race to human well-being and human progress? I will challenge quotation of authorities wherein I may find desired information.

SINCERITAS.

Low-Cost Homes.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN other cities public officials have been working steadily to encourage the building of homes. It is about time St. Louis officials did likewise. It is well enough to encourage the real estate agents, and the landlords, but some consideration should be shown the common people. Housing is a necessity.

The cities of Detroit and Cleveland passed St. Louis in population. The public officials encourage the building of homes during the war. Pittsburg did likewise. Public officials secured the location of 35 concrete building block plants in the city. These plants made blocks for the construction of over 5000 low-cost dwellings in and about Pittsburg, that are let at a reasonable rental, and broke the house shortage. Why don't public officials here do likewise?

BOOST ST. LOUIS.

REVIVING INDEPENDENCE DAY.

An Illinois post of the American Legion, in a letter appearing on this page recently, announces its intention of reviving the true significance and spirit of Independence Day, which, it rightly thinks, is falling into decay. The post asks for suggestions. We commend the post's attitude and cheerfully comply with the request.

The Declaration of Independence was an explosion resulting from a long period of tyranny. Under that tyranny men were forced to support and obey laws which outraged all the instincts of liberty. They were forbidden to express opinions distasteful to their rulers, and were punished when they did express them. They were permitted to live only such lives, enjoy only such liberties, and seek happiness only in such ways as pleased those above them. In the document which they signed, they pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor to an attempt to throw off this oppression, and to make themselves free men, setting up their own institutions and giving voice to their own ideals and aspirations. The document was signed by the boldest radicals in the 13 colonies.

Today, unhappily, that restless, rebellious spirit has fallen into disrepute. In peace the Tories have regained what they could not hold by war. It has become indecent to protest against the established order. It has become treason to rebel against unjust and tyrannical laws. Once more men are imprisoned for expressing opinions that are obnoxious to those in power. The manner of living, the character of liberty, the methods of pursuing happiness, and even the processes of acquiring knowledge, are again the subjects of laws and decrees.

The sad business of undermining independence in this country is carried on by persons who are moved by various motives—misguided and narrow patriotism, fanatical moral zeal and a natural resistance to new ideas. It is unfortunate that those persons have been able to derive considerable support from the public acts and utterances of certain officials of the American Legion—acts and utterances with which the membership of that organization cannot possibly be in sympathy. In removing this false impression of intolerance which has thus been created, the Legion can serve its own best aims, and do much to revive the spirit of freedom.

History repeats itself invariably in the fact that the rebels of one age are the gods to which the rebels of a subsequent age are sacrificed. Today all the forces of suppression, regimentation and bigotry are united under the pretense of preserving the political, social and economic forms set up by men who had a price upon their heads. In the name of Washington and Jefferson they persecute those who are making the fight that Jefferson and Washington once made. Under the guise of protecting the ideals inherited from the boldest band of rebels that ever headed a revolt, they harry and condemn every man or woman who differs from them in opinion.

The Legion post's announcement is timely. The spirit of Independence Day is in bad repair, and much of that day's good work has been undone. If there is not a reawakening to its true meaning, a new declaration will be, in time, inevitable.

Of all those sitting in the sweltering heat about the President as he pleaded for the World Court the hottest must have been Arthur M. Hyde, who wired Senator Lodge a few weeks ago that 500,000 Missourians were ready to support him in beating the President's plan.

ROADS OF THE FUTURE.

There is a 60-mile stretch of road connecting Atlantic City with Camden, N. J., that is said to suffer from the worst Sunday traffic jam in the East. It is known as the White Horse Pike, but if any horse, white or colored, tries to travel it, especially on Sunday, he is to be pitied. The New York Herald reporter who fared forth recently upon this road found that there are 50 automobile crashes a day on this 60-mile highway. And he remarks:

> The Highways Board that built this narrow strip of concrete trouble included an undertaker, a Justice of the Peace, a doctor and several men who were not convinced that the automobile had come to stay.
> It's about three-quarters as wide as the Merrick road and is covered with more rules than Mah Jong. They call it the road to the cemetery, and they didn't so name it in haste.

This road is a little more than just wide enough to permit two cars to pass. Two thousand motor cars, on a Sunday evening, traveling no less than 30 miles an hour, all with headlights blazing, present a spectacle of modern traffic conditions that is bound to be found all over the country within a few years, making the road problem increasingly difficult.

The narrowest strip of concrete possible to accommodate two lines of automobiles is evidently not the solution. Much wider roads, or perhaps one-way roads, will have to be considered. And the man without a motor car, or the use of one, might as well migrate to some other planet.

AMHERST AND BIG BUSINESS.

Alumni influences have succeeded in securing what amounts to a dismissal of President Meiklejohn of Amherst College. The movement did not come from the trustees nor from the student body. The majority of the students are enthusiastically for their leader. Twelve candidates declined their degrees because of the Meiklejohn action, and an equally bellicose group of juniors have vowed to finish their course in some other institution.

The curious fact of the controversy is that it defies definition. There are individual definitions in abundance, but they do not agree. A local alumnus is quoted as saying that Dr. Meiklejohn was opposed to college athletics and objected to the hiring of a professional athletic coach. "We used to beat Harvard frequently in football," he said, "but since he became president we've hardly won a game." Quite another version is that of Dr. William Ladd of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, who asserts that Meiklejohn's "liberal views and his athletic program have put Amherst on the college map."

It is quite to be expected, we presume, that if the objection to Meiklejohn were his liberalism the objectors, who are described as "smartly dressed, gray-haired men of business," would not be willing to admit it. The supporters of the executive, however, do energetically charge that this is the issue. They insist "a bit passionately" that the chief reason for the drive on the president is that he has popularized political economy, sociology and kindred subjects to the detriment of the classics, and has replaced the dogmatic spirit of older men with a scientific spirit of detached inquiry. "No one denies," says a New York Tribune staff correspondent, "that the 550 students in Amherst have been aroused to a quickened regard for truth and investigative study and that he has inspired the intellectual curiosity of the men to a high degree."

From the guarded utterances of President Meiklejohn himself—guarded out of loyalty to the college and college harmony—there can be no doubt that this is the real issue. Is the scientific attitude on social questions in our colleges to be suppressed by big business men graduates as early scientific inquiry was condemned as heresy by the powers of that time? That is a question bigger than Amherst.

AIR FLIVVER COMPETITION.

Georges Barbot, the enterprising French aviator whose 600-pound plane flew across the British Channel and back, but came to grief in New Jersey, crashing into a tree, says he is not discouraged by the accident. We hope that the news of the wonderful flight of the "houpizene" at Kansas City will not give him cold feet. It appears that the "houpizene," which is said to have "hopped off" from a Kansas City boulevard and disappeared in the clouds, is lighter and smaller than Barbot's Dewoitine, having a wing expanse of only 20 feet and being propelled by a 1913 Ford motor car engine.

Barbot has also to compete with a British machine called the Wren, which weighs only 207 pounds, has made several successful flights, and has a cruising speed of 40 miles an hour, with an engine of motor cycle design of only three and one-half horsepower. Dewoitine, the French manufacturer who built Barbot's machine, should by all means supply him with another. He deserves it, and we should have a contest between all three of these air flivvers, and as many others as can be built, at the air meet next October.

MISSOURI HARVEST SONG.

HAVE you seen Missouri at the harvest—
  A rolling of sea green and golden wheat?
Have you heard the music of the binders—
  A song the summers as they come repeat?
The quail still whistles from the fence post,
  The elder bush is blooming snowy white—
If you haven't seen Missouri at the harvest
  You have missed a part of this old earth's delight.

Have you seen the river when it's brimming—
  The gleam of water through the trees?
The driftwood going down the current,
  And seen the little playful, scudding breeze?
It's a river when the summer rains are falling
  And its sweep is wide and wild and free;
If you haven't seen the river when it's brimming
  You don't know what a river it can be.

Have you heard the catbird sing at even—
  Its ecstasy upflinging at the skies?
Or would you think of happiness possessing
  So far a little creature of its size?
If you have not seen Missouri at the harvest,
  Or seen the river brimming when it's high,
Nor heard the catbird singing here at even—
  Then you won't know much of Heaven till you die.

AN OLD ILLUSION DISPELLED.

(Monroe County, Mo., Appeal.)

Nearly any man who owns a 9-room house will tell you he wishes he could sell it and build a cozy 3-room place, so his wife would have time for something other than sweeping, dusting and dragging furniture around. Men who have made such a change say it didn't help a bit. Instead of doing just as much work per room as she used to do, Friend Wife proceeds to do three times as much work per room, which goes to prove that women would rather work themselves into untimely graves than enjoy an occasional period of rest.

"HOLLYHOCKS."

SWAYING, graceful hollyhocks
  In a tailored row,
Brilliant staffs of festive bells
  Tinkling vague and low.
Do you when the night is still
  Wander gayly up and down
Taking toll from all your kin
  To dazzle us at breakfast morn?

Are you vain and are you proud?
  Are you shy or are you bold?
Do you steer or do you serve?
  Do you woo or are you cold?
Do you judge or do you bless?
  Do you laugh or do you weep?
I have asked the poppies

THE DHRAME IV ALF SMITH.

(With Apologies.)

SAYS Tooley to Finnessy, says he: "Did ye see thi dhrame iv Alf Smith?" "Pigs can see the warld," answers Finnessy, "but who cud see thi drhame drhamed by another?" "Plain enough, frind Finnessy, if ye have eyes in yir head. Naples is in New Yarrk, a million av thi poor divils. Thim poor divils is like oursilves, Finnessy, whin we furrst come; there wus two things in thi wurrld, the rich that had thi guvermint, and oursilves; we shtuck tigether, oursilves and our friends; we voted tigether. Votin' wuz thi big business; we worrked only when there wuz nothing' doin' out from thi City Hall. Thi Amurrikins had things on hand more important than votin'. Not so wid us. Our big frind in politics always carried our vote in his vest pocket and used it ti make a riputation for us, Finnessy; and a brown shtone front forr himself.

"Well, New Yarrk was Galway thin; it is Naples now and two Warsaws. Thi Socialists has the Jews of Warsaw in New Yarrk; but Christian Warsaw, Finnessy, is ours.

"Well, Alf goes ti Frinch Lick ti offer New Yaark ti the Dimmycratic paarty. And what is thi Dimmycratic paarty to get in exchange forr Alf's fistful of thrumps? Finnessy, the Dimmycratic paarty has not had much to do wid this guvermint since 1856; and because of a fairy sthory like Alf's they listened to at that time. All say now the opposition to the Dimmycratic paarty for twinty years after that wuz right; in thi blackest hour of that time, Finnessy, New Yarrk, thi sedoocer av thi Dimmycratic leaders, thried ti paralyze the governmint, be blockin' thi dhraft; be blockin' the dhraft wid riots in New Yarrk intinded to spread over the counthry; afther that, Finnessy, ti be a Dimmycrat wuz ti be a copperhead; that is the name some of our leadhers would win for us agen; from that time the min who cud win rispect for us and do good worrk for us has been too shy av us. It is afther sivinty yearrs, Finnessy, we Oirish are beginnin' to see oursilves as ithers sees us. We swallowed the bait and the huke wid it, and our digestion has been bad. Amerriky, too busy ti vote, too contra-ry ti be united, has a way of wakin' up whin Galway or Warsaw gets too dangerous. Thi Rippublikin paarty, Finnnessy, has turned many a dirty thrick; all the ixcuse they have, Finnessy, and all they need, is the Dimmycratic paarty."

"Well, ti Frinch Lick wint Alf, not with a hive, but a pitcher av one; and thi bees that live aff the hunney hived by the labor av other bees did not go to meet Alf. George Brennan who wuz to be the godfather of Alf on the nixt stage of the thrip, which was to be Tche-caa-go, instead of waitin' for Alf, seein' it was kind o' lonely at Taggartville, kem down. The daylight began to shine through that dhrame iv Alf's. At lasht Tom Taggart of Taggartville, with the sweet smile the proprietor always has for the loser in a gambling palace, tould Alf whin the Pope of Rome would take a job from the Prisby-taarian Church he could hope ti carry Injeanny. Alf is back home; whether wakin' arr still dhramin' toime will tell." "Well, Tooley, phat in the divil did Smith want goin' anyway?" "If Alf did wake up," says Tooley, "that is what he has been askin' hissilf iver since."

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

UNION OF CHURCHES IN CANADA.

From the New York Evening Post.

TALK of church union is common enough, but union itself is so rare as occurrence as to provoke comment. In this country churches which split over slavery seventy years ago are still trying to get together, while the various kinds of Baptists, Presbyterians, and so on have found it as difficult to reunite as to form a union with an entirely different domination. All the more striking, therefore, is the amalgamation of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Congregational churches of Canada. This union follows precedent in being the reverse of sudden. Twenty-five years of hope and effort lie behind the achievement, which brings 400,000 Methodists, 360,000 Presbyterians, and 30,000 Congregationalists into one fold. There need be nothing surprising in the slow progress of church union. With churches, as with everything else, it is usually easier to break than to mend. So long as disagreement does not reach the point of disruption there is hope for some solution that will enable those of differing views to go on working together, but when a formal division occurs the very existence of a rival organization accentuates the differences and places an artificial handicap upon harmony. In a little while men and women of the two organizations have drifted hopelessly apart. Gratifying from every point of view, therefore, is the bridging of a gap thus opened. It would be worth its cost in the mere economy of effort and money which it makes possible, but this is its least valuable result. Much more important is the enhanced spiritual power that results from union and in particular the example it gives of a great body of people forgetting their individual preferences in their desire to serve a cause they regard as sacred.

IMMIGRATION LAW CRUELTY.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE present immigration law has never appeared in more ridiculous light than in the recent detention of Baby Marguerite Perrin, aged 1 year, whose misfortune it was to have been born in Italy. Her mother, her father, her brothers are American citizens, but that makes no difference. The child was born in Italy and the Italian quota is full, so the door to the United States is closed and she is held at Ellis Island. There is nothing to do about it, say the immigration authorities. It's the law, and the child must be held until the end of the present immigration year, June 30. Of course, a special board of inquiry may be called, and, after all the facts are reviewed, after going through endless red tape, after delay, inconvenience, expense, some means of relief may be found. A law that can separate mother and baby is undoubtedly material for the scrap heap.

LIBERALISM IN THE CHURCH.

From The Nation.

A TRADITION, if it is of the right sort, has value. The rank and file Baptist is quite as conservative as his Presbyterian brother, but he has a tradition against a rigid creed and for the independence of the local church. That fact, aided perhaps by a general dislike of the manners of certain fundamentalist leaders, gave the liberals a decided victory in the recent Baptist convention. Even more significant of liberalism than the convention's refusal to interfere in the Fosdick case was its positive action in releasing the University of Chicago from the obligation to choose a Baptist as president and reducing the required proportion of Baptist trustees. It is worth notice that victories for liberalism are confined to Northern denominations. Southern Baptists would not countenance Dr. Fosdick, and Southern Presbyterians look with suspicion even on the presbytery of Philadelphia. It is this suspicion of doctrinal heterodoxy which has perpetuated among Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians the division of the Civil War.

MEMBER OF I. W. W. TELLS OF 5 YEARS IMPRISONMENT

couple of days, when we had passed through the usual prison examinations.

Although we were given a good reception by the prisoners, we soon were made to realize that we had a hard time ahead of us, due to the hostility of the prison officials. We were soon segregated on one work gang and most of my prison sentence was spent on this gang, breaking rock in an open shed in the prison yard. In spite of this monotonous work, the poor food, long hours in our cells and petty discriminations and severe discipline, the men kept up their spirits and refused to renounce their principles to gain freedom.

About five months after our arrival the prison gates opened to receive another large consignment of our members. They were tried in Sacramento, Cal., under practically the same charges, but, unlike us, they put in no defense.

We were curious to learn of their experiences and why they made the silent defense, refusing to speak during the entire trial.

I knew none of the new arrivals and on inquiring we found that many were new members and none were officials in the organization. It was to a white-haired, sweet-faced old man, nearly 60, that I addressed my question as to their experiences and the reason for the silent defense.

His name was George O'Connell, a construction worker, who had spent the greater part of his life building tunnels, railroads and irrigation projects in the West. His sentence was for 10 years, I was amazed, as he had never done any writing or speaking for the organization. He had a very quiet, pleasing disposition.

I shall give his answer as he gave it to me, for it has imbedded itself in my memory: "We saw you men in Chicago whom we knew were innocent quickly railroaded to prison after months of defense. We saw the war hysteria wielding a tremendous power to convict us regardless of evidence.

"We had lain nearly 18 months in jail awaiting trial, denied permission to see our friends, our mail interfered with, our defense secretary arrested time after time just to interfere with defense work. For two months over 40 of us were kept in a cell room 22 feet by 24 feet, with not enough room for all to sleep at one time, so we had to take turns. The food was very poor, so we gave the jail guards money to buy us something decent to eat and they did—but placed it outside of the bars where we could not reach it and allowed it to rot in our sight. Quite a number of us were taken ill with the flu and we were denied medical attention and medicine and only received it when friends on hearing of our predicament paid for medical attention. As a consequence five of our number died in our midst. Do you wonder we decided we could not get justice and sat silent?"

Another Group Arrives.

Later our groups were added to by still another consignment from Wichita, Kan., whose treatment in jail before trial was similar to our own. Two of the defendants went insane and tried to commit suicide because of the conditions they were enduring.

Our contact with other prisoners was a source of rich experience. We found three other groups of prisoners, besides the political. The group we liked best were the soldiers. They had been imprisoned owing to some misstep in the army. Many of them were no doubt as unjustly imprisoned as we were. Some of these, often mere boys, were becoming embittered by their experience and we always tried to keep them from becoming habitual criminals. We would try to stop the influence of the habitual criminals who would be continually filling these young fellows with the great steals they had "pulled off" and the immense amount of easy money they had been able to make.

To cancel these glowing tales we would, in our conversations, point out that the criminal was a lone individual playing against a society well organized to protect itself. The criminal might occasionally win but in the end prison was his lot. That conditions were not right, we knew this, but that the way to change them was not to prey on society but to organize and educate the workers to change these conditions. We often succeeded in changing a prisoner's view from a narrow selfish one of preying on society to a social one of striving for a better world.

The other two groups were the civilian criminal group—postoffice robbers, interstate commerce thieves and counterfeiters—and those sent up as drug users and peddlers. They are many among the first group that are only first offenders and even among habitual criminals it is possible to change their views to social ones. On the last group—although I have met some good chaps among them—the grip of the drug habit seemed to be too great to make any worthwhile change possible, especially as many of them were actually getting drugs while in prison.

Many times during my stay in prison we have, by ways known only to prisoners, given some young fellow a little extra money as he was released to help him get another start. What chance has the best-meaning fellow in the world got on leaving Leavenworth, if he only has the $5 the Government gives him and is wearing a cheap outfit of release clothes? So we tried to help any promising fellow prisoner although we, politicals, only had the little money sent in by our friends.

My five-year sentence expired last year and since then I have been trying to interest people in these men still in prison under the Espionage Act. I have been delighted with the response and the desire most people have to put the war behind them and release these men.

Often of late I have been asked, "What is the reason for these men's continued imprisonment so long after the war?"

I can answer only the opinion of myself and those still in prison. "We were imprisoned because of our labor views, our opinions on the war being the pretext to imprison us, and we continue to be imprisoned because we refuse to renounce our beliefs."

Cites Borah's Speech.

Senator Borah, in his speech in Lexington Theater, New York City, on March 11, this year, bears out our contention, as he said:

"What, therefore, is the real, the controlling reason for denying these political prisoners their freedom? It is not, in my opinion, the offense for which they were convicted. It is not because the court record condemns them. It is for another offense—unknown to the criminal code and undisclosed in the sentences under which they are serving. These men, it is claimed, are members of an organization known as the Industrial Workers of the World."

These men have been in jail and prison nearly six years. Must they serve out 10 and 20 year sentences because they hold labor views they will not renounce?

SCHOONER, 104 FEET LONG, NOW ON VOYAGE ACROSS PACIFIC

Boat Owned by Portland, Ore., Man Depends Mainly on Its Sails.

Special wireless to the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1923.)

TOKIO, June 23.—After covering the 2000-mile voyage from Hong Kong to Yokohama in 17 days, despite two severe storms encountered off the coast of Japan, the 87-ton schooner Dywn Wen, bearing its owner, Dr. Robert Ellis of Portland, Ore., and 10 others, has set sail for the United States. The vessel, which is only 104 feet long, depends mainly on her sails to carry her across the Pacific, although a powerful kerosene burning engine can be relied on in an emergency.

Shortly before sailing Dr. Ellis said he expected to cross the Pacific in 35 days. Steering a straight course for Portland, but in order to avoid risks, provisions sufficient to last 60 days were taken along. When the schooner ties up in Portland harbor she will have covered 4600 miles on her present cruise.

The Dywn Wen was built 17 years ago at Dartmouth, England, for the Royal Thames Yacht Club. She was sailed from England to Hong Kong last year where her new owner took charge. Dr. Ellis is a member of the Portland Motorboat Club and the Portland Marine Club and this is the sixth sailing vessel he has owned.

UP TO $60,000 BOND REQUIRED IN MAIL HOLDUP CASE

Federal Judge Faris Continues His Practice of Fixing High Bonds for Mail Robbery Suspects.

Federal Judge Faris, yesterday in requiring large bonds for men accused of mail robbery, in keeping with his recent practice, announced that this would continue to be his policy.

"I have come to the conclusion," he said, "that if those men want to rob the United States mails and stay out of jail they will have to put up big bonds."

The bond question came up yesterday on the application for the removal to Springfield, Ill., of Joseph Friedman, Roy R. Madison, Joseph Bauman, Claude Smith and Frank Stagner, arrested here and indicted at Springfield in connection with a mail robbery there on April 1. The Judge fixed Friedman's and Madison's bonds at $60,000, and Bauman's, Smith and Stagner's at $40,000 and announced they could either give bond by Thursday and stay here, or he would then order their removal.

The big bond practice was instituted three weeks ago and in that period about $500,000 have been required from St. Louis gangsters and alleged mail robbers.

The bond of William F. "Whitey" Doering, William Williamson and David Weisman, indicted for the armored truck robbery at Third and Locust streets April 6, were fixed at $60,000 for Doering and $50,000 for each of the others.

In the case of the men charged with the Pocahontas, Ill., robbery, Ray Renard was held in $35,000 bond, Louis C. Smith and Frank Epelsheimer $50,000 each and Lee Turner and Frank Morley $20,000 each.

Morley, Weisman and Williamson are still held. The others, after considerable difficulty, have given bonds. The difficulty is increased by Commissioner Atkins carefully scrutinizing the qualifications of bondsmen.

In cases of this kind the bonds heretofore have been from $5000 to $15,000.

FIVE DOCTORS INVOLVED IN WHISKY PRESCRIPTION INQUIRY

Twenty-Three Uncanceled Liquor Forms Found in Drug Store on Grand Avenue.

An investigation of the whisky prescription stubs and records of five St. Louis physicians has been ordered from the Federal prohibition enforcement office in St. Louis as a result of the finding of 23 uncanceled prescriptions in the Enderle drug store at Grand boulevard and Olive street Friday afternoon by general prohibition agents.

The prescriptions had been filled out and bore the physicians' signatures, but had not been canceled, indicating to the enforcement officers that they had not been filled, but could have been filled by employes of the store at any time.

Frank C. M. Parisel, assistant manager, and Saul Torgove, a clerk, were arrested. Each gave a $1000 bond and was released.

MEILSELJOHN 'LOTS OF WILSON,' 'NONE OF LLOYD GEORGE'

There were other trustees, and they were the decisive ones, who voted against Meiklejohn because, for good reasons or bad, he was unable to manage his faculty. The test for them was his capacity to keep peace at Amherst. He could not keep the peace. He could not command a majority of the faculty, and so they say what else could they do but ask him to go. They point as justification to his final speech, where he said: "I expect to be in the minority, and institutions must inevitably be in the hands of majorities." For they ask how they could have left the institution of Amherst in the hands of one who always expects to be in a minority?

At the end, neutrality on the part of the trustees would not have saved Meiklejohn. One thing only could have saved him. That was the decisive vote of confidence by the trustees. Meiklejohn asked for such a vote, believing that with it he could overcome the opposition, which was then over two-thirds of the faculty. But the majority of the trustees had lost confidence in him, the decisive minority had not enough confidence to vote unreservedly in his favor. Without a vote of confidence from the trustees the opposition in the faculty was bound to fight harder. There would be no peace. The only alternatives left were active support by all the trustees against two-thirds of the faculty, or the resignation of Mr. Meiklejohn.

Amherst has lost a fine educator and a great spiritual leader of youth because he was an unsuccessful leader of men. He did magnificently with the students. He failed lamentably with the grown-ups. He could inspire, but he could not manage. He was lots of Woodrow Wilson and none of Lloyd George.

Meiklejohn's Amherst was a machine that simply would not work. But inefficient as it was, it produced as remarkable a student body as I have ever encountered. Hopeless as it was, it made Amherst one of the most distinguished small colleges in America.

Meiklejohn led grown men badly. Grown men are sometimes a little blind.

Instant Foot Relief!

You can have absolute relief from your Foot Troubles such as burning, painful callouses, fallen arches, leaning ankles and the like. Yes, indeed you can!

No Metal Plates—No Odd-Shaped Shoes

Furthermore, you do not have to wear heavy, cumbersome metal plates. You do not have to wear odd-shaped shoes. You can have relief in any shoe that fits you—evening slipper, dress Oxford or otherwise.

The new-day method of adjusting small feather-light leather devices, which fit comfortably in the shoe, aligns the 26-bone structure of the foot and holds it in normal position. That corrects the cause of your foot trouble. Relief is instant even in the most fashionable footwear.

No Inconvenience—Advice Free

Consult our foot relief expert, and learn how easy it is to have comfortable feet. No removal of Hose—merely an examination of the stockinged foot. No discomfort—no inconvenience—just complete relief from aching, hurting feet.

Broadcasting President's Speech by Post-Dispatch Radio Made History for Such Transmission

Letters of Appreciation From Several States Tell of Large Parties Which Gathered and Heard Address Distinctly.

Letters are beginning to come in to Post-Dispatch Radio Station K S D from many who listened in last Thursday night on the broadcasting of President Harding's speech in St. Louis. This was a history-making event for radio transmission, as it was the first time a President of the United States addressed the people over the radio on a great public question. It had additional interest in that it was the first speech made by President Harding in a large city on his tour to Alaska, and had for its subject that much discussed issue, the World Court.

Naturally the first letters were from comparatively nearby points, a majority of those thus far received being from Missouri and neighboring states, though early returns have come from states as far away as Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kansas and Wisconsin.

Sidelights on Reactions.

In many instances the writers of the letters tell of large parties which gathered to hear the speech over the radio and all express their appreciation of K S D service in making it possible for so many persons to sit in their homes and hear the President's voice. Not a few of the letters also afford interesting sidelights on the reactions of the listeners to the President's political views.

A. W. Spaht, writing from Christopher, Ill., says: "I placed my loud speaker on the front porch and some 50 people listened in with me. Every word was clear and distinct. The sentiment of this small audience was with the President. We hope he will be able to persuade Uncle Sam to participate in the World Court."

From a more distant point, Daggett, Mich., Mrs. H. R. Andrews writes: "We have just listened to President Harding. We live in a little mill town in Northern Michigan."

Enjoyed Speech, He Writes.

This comes from Harry D. Bellis, of Delphos, Ohio: "I listened in on President Harding's speech and enjoyed it very much. Your station is very popular and you are to be complimented."

One of the largest groups gathered at the home of E. W. Pfeffer at Lebanon, Ill. He writes: "President Harding's address was enjoyed by an outdoor audience of at least 100 persons. K S D came in strong enough to be heard distinctly a block away. The President's address was received with enthusiasm. Your station made this opportunity possible of hearing our President."

L. I. Snodgrass of Effingham, Ill., sends this appreciation: "The radio program of President Harding's speech at the Coliseum last night came in almost perfect. Certainly it was the best so far during the summer and better than most of the winter reception. Every single word was distinct. There seemed to be no echo. Before the change in wave length, K S D was not so good at times, because of interference. It also seems to be about twice as loud on the new wave length."

Heard by Audience of 300.

One of the large audiences was at the Jacksonville, Ill. State Hospital. Grant L. Hughes writes from there: "We used a power amplifier and loud speaker which enabled an audience of possibly 300 people to hear the address very distinctly and satisfactorily." Earl C. Wasson writes that a large crowd listened to perfect transmission of the speech at Lincoln, Ill.

The Vandalia, Ill. Chamber of Commerce, through its secretary, V. R. Hamilton writes: "We heard President Harding's speech as plainly and distinctly as if he had been in our assembly hall speaking."

A party gathered at the home of N. Cowen, postmaster of Sorento, Ill. Mr. Cowen writes: "We heard, clear and distinct, the remarks of Mr. Vesper, the talks of Mayor Kiel and Gov. Hyde and the address of Mr. Harding. We enjoyed it all." The names of 25 persons who listened in are appended to this letter. Almost as large a gathering heard the speech at the home of the Rev. J. L. Voll at Dahlgren, Ill.

Had Two Radio Sets Going.

A. H. Cain of Roodhouse, Ill., writes this of his remarkable achievement in helping to pass the President's speech along:

"I had two radio sets going, one in my office and one in my radio station 9MC. At the radio station we had a three-stage power amplifier going which could be heard for a distance of about one mile. We had the streets blocked with cars and there were hundreds of persons who listened to the wonderful address, which was highly appreciated."

After telling how about 50 persons listened in his office, W. M. Close of Illiopolis, Ill., says: "It all came in wonderfully clear, loud and satisfactory. We did not miss a single word in the entire program. It was without exception the best job of broadcasting we have ever listened to. In a word it was perfect."

On behalf of 20 persons who listened to the speech at his home, J. T. Kretzinger of Chestnut, Ill., writes: "The entire party as well as ourselves desire to thank Station KSD for its service in this wonderful event."

Heard in South Chicago.

Charles R. Young of Chicago writes: "I beg to state that I live on the South Side of this city and that the address came through splendidly. It certainly was a far greater pleasure to listen to the speech as it

VICTIM THINKS HE SHOT ONE OF PAYROLL ROBBERS

George Pomeroy, Paymaster for Building Company, Held Up and Relieved of $1200 in West End.

THREE MEN ESCAPE IN FORD SEDAN

He Emptied Revolver at Them and Saw One Grab His Shoulder as Though Wounded.

George Pomeroy of 1354 Goodfellow avenue, superintendent of construction and paymaster for the Ada Building & Investment Co., 808 Chestnut street, in reporting that he was held up and robbed of a $1200 payroll yesterday, told the police he believed he shot one of the robbers as they were escaping.

Pomeroy, after drawing $2900 from the Hodiamont Bank at 6145 Bartmer avenue, to meet the company's payroll account at various points where the company had apartment buildings under construction, drove to Clara and Page avenues and then to Ridge and Hodiamont avenues, paying off $674.10 at the former place and $1024.50 at the latter place.

Getting into hisautomobile after leaving the building at Hodiamont and Ridge avenues, he was confronted by three men who drove alongside of him in a dilapidated Ford sedan. Two of the men jumped on his running board and, drawing pistols, ordered him to "stick 'em up."

Pomeroy complied and the robbers took the remaining $1200 from his coat pocked, but in searching him failed to find a revolver which he carried in the waistband of his trousers.

As the robers were getting into their own car, Pomeroy emptied his revolver at them and saw one of the robers put his hand to his shoulder as though he had been wounded. This rober was jerked into the automobile by his two companions, who drove south to Wells avenue and then east.

The license tag on the robers' auto was upside down, so that Pomeroy was unable to get the number. After reporting the robbery to the police Pomeroy went to his home, obtained a check book and then resumed his mission, paying off men at other buildings with chacks drawn on the company's account.

Lumber Company Treasurer Reports $180 Robbery.

Two men, one armed with a revolver, entered the ofice of the Trio Lumber Co., Hall and Buchanan streets, at 11:45 a. m. yesterday and held up the treasurer, William Dommermuth. The latter told the police that $180, representing the company's weekly payroll, was taken from a table.

Demermuth said he had just returned to the office after drawing the money from a bank and after placing the money on a table stepped outside. The robbers, he said, ordered him to put up his hands and return to the office. After taking the money they ran out and drove away in an automobile.

DE WITT N. ROGERS FUNERAL TO BE HELD TOMORROW

Employe for American Railway Express for More Than 40 Years Died Thursday.

De Witt Noble Rogers, 61 years old, of 3936 Delmar boulevard, for more than 40 years an employe of the American Railway Express, died Thursday. He had never fully recovered his health after a railroad accident in 1917, and in September, 1922, he was retired on a pension.

He came to St. Louis 30 years ago and worked as an express messenger between St. Louis and Mobile. In 1882 Rogers entered the service of the Southern Express, and when this company consolidated with the American Railway Express he was retained until poor health forced his retirement a year ago.

The funeral will be tomorrow at 2 p. m. from funeral parlors at Twenty-eighth and Olive streets to the Valhalla Cemetery.

BROADCASTING OF PRESIDENT'S SPEECH AN HISTORIC EVENT

fell from the lips of the President than to read it in cold type."

I. V. Skipper of Alton says: "Received your broadcast of President Harding's speech in fine shape. Placed our loud speaker on the porch and the whole neighborhood listened in. I think we heard it just as good, if not better than those at the Coliseum, and it was not 96 degrees here."

John H. Hallmann of Emden, Ill., arranged a lawn party. He writes that 36 guests at his party as well as neighbors across the street, heard the speech.

Entertained Lawn Party.

C. B. Heise of Decatur, Ill., writes: "President Harding's speech came in fine. I think it was louder than where it was broadcast. We have a three-stage outfit, homemade, with loud speaker. We set it on the bench and go out in the yard. Last night we had an audience of about 40 or 50. We hear your program about every night and it certainly comes out fine. Since you have raised the wave length on the sending outfit it comes in 200 per cent better."

These are extracts from only a few of the letters received. In yesterday's mail there were letters from 350 towns in Illinois alone, to say nothing of those from other States.

Sufficient time has not elapsed for the receipt of letters from more distant points. Expert observers who noted the quality of reception at various points have reported that at many places distant from St. Louis the conditions were unfavorable for perfect radio reception.

Summer Season Not Favorable.

It is well known to radio users that the summer season is most unfavorable for perfect distance transmission. It is to be noted that President Harding's address was made on the night of the longest day in the year after 15 hours of sunshine had been at work to destroy the carrying qualities which make radio transmission so greatly superior in the winter months. For this reason it is not to be expected that results were as good at great distances as in the neighboring States.

U. R. VALUATION $27,474,467 TOO HIGH, CITY HOLDS

Rehearing of Decision of State Public Service Commission Fixing Value at $52,838,110 Sought.

The City of St. Louis yesterday filed motion for a rehearing by the Missouri Public Service Commission of its recent decision in which it placed the valuation of the United Railways for rate-making purposes at $52,838,110.

The city declares that the valuation is $27,474,767 too high. The company also has filed a motion for a re-hearing declaring that the valuation fixed is so low as to be "confiscatory."

The items attacked by the city and the grounds cited follow:

Construction Overhead Costs—No deduction for depreciation of this item was made and it hence is at least $2,179,585 too high. The item itself should be cut $5,252,013.

Depreciation of Physical Property—The deduction for this item was at least $6,039,815 too low.

Pricing of Physical Inventory—The Commission made a "grossly excessive" allowance for increase of prices to reflect present value and this item should be reduced $8,753,355.

Going Concern Value—The Commission allowed $2,500,000. The city asserts no allowance should have been made.

Promoting, Financing and Consolidation—The entire allowance of $2,700,000 should be deducted.

Working Capital — This item should be reduced $49,999.

Catholic Orphans to Picnic July 24.

The annual charity picnic of the Catholic Orphans' Picnic Association will be held July 4. The South Side branch of the association will have its picnic at St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum grounds, Grand boulevard and Itaska street. The North Side branch will have its picnic at the same time at St. Mary's Orphan Home grounds, Harney and Emerson avenues. The proceeds will go to Catholic charities designated by Archbishop Glennon.

WORK OF E. C. POTTER, SCULPTOR WHO IS DEAD, IN MUSEUM HERE

Was Awarded Gold Medal for His Equestrian Statue at Louisiana Exposition.

Edward Clark Potter, sculptor, who died at his summer home in New London, Conn., Thursday night, aged 65, designed for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, held in St. Louis in 1904, a large equestrian statue of the explorer De Soto. It was in plaster and stood in the fair grounds. He was awarded a gold medal for sculpture at the fair.

Two plaster replicas of his work are in the City Art Museum. One is an equestrian statue of George Washington, half again as large as life, of which he designed the horse and Daniel Chester French the figure. The original was presented to France by the D. A. R. The other replica is of "Sleeping Pan With Rabbits," representing bunnies munching food from the hand of the sleeping god. The Chicago Art Institute has the original.

Potter, who studied in Paris, made a specialty of animal sculpture. Some of his notable works were equestrian statues of Grant at Philadelphia, Hooker at Boston, Devens at Worcester, Mass., and Slocum at Gettysburg; two animal groups in the library of J. P. Morgan and a statue of Gov. Blair in the Michigan State House.

The LURE of the OPEN ROAD

ON the crest of a vaulting hill, with a flower-scented breeze fanning your face, your eyes sweep across the vista of blue sky and plush-green woods in the distance.

You seem to be on the top o' the world. You have come away from the dust and hubbub of the city, from its clatter and heat, to this pinnacle of cool, green country—and your motor car has brought you here.

So many city dwellers consider an automobile a creature of the boulevards. They forget the tireless energy stored in the powerful motor under the hood; forget that this steed of steel stands ready to take them up hill and down dale, through quaint villages and along the shady lanes of the cool countryside.

The automobile today is a wishing-ring, a magic carpet that will put all the beautiful country surrounding St. Louis within your reach. The joys of touring are one of the genuine pleasures of life. Within a hundred miles of St. Louis there are any number of charted tours where you can be sure of good roads and good inns; and a trip across country will bring you back feeling like new.

The automobile is no longer a luxury. The purchase of a good automobile is an investment on which every member of the family will "realize." Better automobiles are selling for less money than ever before, and the garage and service facilities are greatly improved.

If you buy an automobile now—and you should, for your own and your family's sake—your vacation will be all the year long.

Why not decide Today—It's the last Big Opportunity of Used Car Week. Dealers are making it especially worthwhile by listing today their best values at the lowest possible prices.

Read the Automobile advertising carefully. Make a list of the cars that interest you and go early in the morning to see the Automobile dealers—in order to take advantage of the sale prices, which will be in force this week on many of the cars advertised in the Post-Dispatch Today.

Reading the advertising columns closely and constantly will lead to satisfied car ownership.

FIRM TONE SHOWN ON STOCK MARKET AT CLOSE OF WEEK

Prices React in Latter Part of Week Following Break After Second Exchange House Receivership.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"With traders still awaiting indications as to the imminence of new industrial buying movements, and with the normally quiet season of the year at hand, the markets have continued sensitive to the minor currents of speculative sentiment. Such signs as to the industrial trend as have been available are rather encouraging. Railroad traffic and steel operations are maintained at an extraordinarily high rate, and improved forward buying of steel is reported. This revival of demand is still comparatively slender, as is that in copper; but both have made their appearance at a natural time and may presage better things. Meanwhile it is clear that the failure of two sizable international financial houses offered the shorts an excellent opportunity for circulating all kinds of ridiculous rumors and for making sharp drives on securities and commodities. It is equally clear that these failures had little if any relation to the domestic situation and that the shorts were quick to run to cover when a moderate amount of buying power appeared.

"Although these two failures bore but a trifling relation to the domestic, commercial or speculative position, they are not without broader significance. The houses in question for decades carried on a business in foreign exchanges and securities, with domestic banking and securities as something of a side line. Their failures emphasize the extreme difficulties which now attend the maintenance of this kind of foreign business and, in a broader sense, the havoc which has been played with the whole international economic fabric. In the one case inability to carry on old lines of activity led to attempts to enter fresh fields, with unhappy results; in the other, assets were frozen by the chaotic condition of German finances and by the continuation of what amounts, from an economic standpoint, to a continuance of a state of war. These failures are, in other words, but a fresh manifestation of the forces which have been working so much injury to the shipping industry and other branches of foreign trade.

Wheat Price Situation.

"Other repercussions of the foreign situation upon our own markets are to be seen in the grain and livestock trades. With foreign buying greatly curtailed on account of the Ruhr occupation July wheat has been flirting with $1 a bushel. Since the price which the farmer receives is some 15 or 20 cents less, his frame of mind readily can be imagined. Hogs, furthermore, have been selling at the lowest prices since 1912. A conference of Governors of wheat-growing states has met in Chicago and dissolved, disillusioned as to the possibilities of price-fixing. Government regulation of trading plainly has been barren of beneficial results, if, in fact, it has not worked actual injury. Establishment of additional and elaborate farm credit machinery has failed to stem the decline. How long will it be before the farmer realizes that his real remedy lies in the restoration of his foreign markets? Even in industry, which has enjoyed so extraordinary a recovery, the country will soon reach the stage where foreign buying will be needed to supplement a diminishing domestic demand. The key of the maintenance of our prosperity lies in our foreign policy.

"Symptoms of serious German weakness have featured the week in the European situation."

"Dullness typical of a sultry midsummer Saturday morning marked dealings on the Stock Exchange during today's two-hour session. The trend of prices was in general towards higher levels with rather sharp upturns in some of the issues which suffered most during the break earlier in the week. Very much the same conditions prevailed in the bond market. The general tone was one of quiet firmness with one or two of the speculative issues responding to better demand.

German Mark Improves.

"In the face of the amazing increase of over a trillion and a half marks in the note circulation of the German Reichsbank, during the week of June 15, the market for the currency both here and in London was decidedly firmer. Local dealers this morning quoted the exchange at .0010 of a cent as against a closing yesterday of .007¾. Other leading European exchanges, with the exception of Italian lire were fairly steady. Sterling was unchanged at $4.61 3-8 and French francs advanced 1-4 to 6.19¾ cents. Lire sold 1-4 lower at 4.49½ cents, which price establishes a new low for the year. Canadian dollars recovered moderately from the year's low reached yesterday. Business in all currencies was small.

"Trading in the leading commodity markets was of the usual week-end character. While both cotton and wheat markets continue to be largely weather affairs they moved this morning in opposite directions. Cotton, after a firm opening, responded to some covering and local commission house buying and the July future moved up to 28 cents, with a subsequent reaction, and recovery. At a late price of 27.98 the gain amounted to 30 points. Buying was stimulated by bullish crop estimates and expectation of a low Government estimate, to be published July 2. Although certain large operators in wheat are reported to have switched to the bull side, for the greater part of the morning profit-taking sales depressed prices. July contracts opened unchanged at $1.06, slumped over a cent and then recovered part of the early loss.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House shows a decrease of $16,819,000 in surplus reserve, that item standing at $511,274,000. Important changes in the statement include an increase of $5,564,000 in loans and discounts, the total now amounting to $4,626,000,000, and a decrease of $11,981,000 in net demand deposits. Time deposits also show a decrease of $5,000,000.

EVENING UP TRADE MARKS SESSION ON THE CURB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The curb market ended the week with few net changes of consequence. Traders were evening up their position over the week-end and this involved a series of varying price movements without any important results anyway.

After Friday's rally Prairie Oil and Gas had a drop and this was one of the few features of the two hours of trading.

No material change occurred in the rest of the oils. In the industrials Dubilier Radio was active, moving up from 7¾ well across 8. Eaton Axle was strong above 25.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows an excess in reserve of $7,548,950. This is a decrease of $16,819,580.

NEW YORK CURB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Following is a list of sales, highest, lowest and closing prices of securities traded in on the New York Curb Market today. Sales of stocks are in 100-share lots (except in the case of Standard Oil issues, sales of which are in full), and sales of bonds represent $1000 face value each.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Today's price movement in the stock market was very much mixed but with an underlying note of firmness throughout.

One of the incidents today was the reported confirmation of the sale late Friday of raw sugar at 6 cents a pound as against Tuesday's low of 5 cents. Sugar stocks had rallied on Thursday and Friday as readily as the average. They today held most of their gains.

Railway shares did little in the market of the day. It would have been hard to read into their action any expression of judgment regarding the President's recommendations on the railway problem, made at Kansas City yesterday.

In the wake of Friday's declaration by the Corn Products refining directors of an extra dividend of $1.50 on the common in addition to the regular $1.50 distribution, the stock sold down today. The news came out just before the close Friday and was regarded as one of the things responsible for the better tone in the general market. Realizing sales made themselves felt, however, this morning.

Formal announcement that control of the Pittsburg & West Virginia Railroad Co. has passed to the Tuttle-Harriman interests had been expected and the stock had discounted the news in its 5 point rise of Friday. Standard Oil of California ran up a point and ended at the top.

The market closed firm with prices generally around the previous day's final.

The Bond Market.

The bond market was firm today and in some cases even strong. Probably this condition was due to the same influences prevailing in the stock market.

Among railroad bonds to sell higher were Missouri-Kansas-Texas adjustment 5s, Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 4s, Seaboard Air Line 6s and Seaboard Air Line adjustments. While there were no great changes in quotations Erie bonds were well taken today. Liberty 3½s were slightly higher and other United States Government bonds about the same. Nor was much interest shown in the "legal" rails.

Foreign bonds were still irregular. The new Austrian loan held around yesterday's high. Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean 6s advanced fractionally, so did Argentine. Heaviness was still manifest in the Czecho-Slovak and Jugo-Slav 8s and in the Bolivia 8s.

A little more interest was shown in the utilities. Hudson and Manhattan incomes were substantially higher while the refunding 5s were about the same. Third Avenue adjustments were fairly active and slightly higher. American Water Works and Electrical collateral trust 5s sold off fractionally.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From hte New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review says:

"Many foreign exchange rates drifted to lower levels during the past week and on some days trading was active and fluctuations covered a wide range. Selling of French exchange by local bankers closely associated with leading French interests was the most important feature of the trading throughout the week, but after checks on Paris dropped to 6.12 on Monday a good general demand caused a rally to 6.24 when there was another decline. This move was followed by a reaction yesterday. Italian Government agents were in the market as buyers of lire and as a result Italian exchange moved within a moderate range, although it made a new low record for the year. German made a new low record on Monday, when marks dropped to .0008¼, attributed to liquidation by the banking firm which suspended on Saturday, but German exchange also rallied on the following days. Polish marks dropped to the new low of .0007 from which there was a rally to above .0010, and Hungarian crowns yielded to the new low of .0100.

"Sterling moved independently of the continental rates and showed little change as a result of the week's operations when French exchange declined on Monday. Sterling was strong and then sold at the highest level of the week, the understanding being that the trading consisted of selling of francs and buying of sterling in connection with a settlement of French debts to England. Later in the week heavy export purchases of wheat were followed by a supply of grain bills, causing a reaction in sterling. Exchange on Holland showed strength for a time, but in the later dealings guilders lost their gains. Canadian exchange was under steady pressure and yesterday made a new low record for the year.

Following are Saturday's quotations:

ENGLAND—Sterling (D) $4.61⅝; (C) $4.61 9-16; 60-day bills on banks, $4.59⅝.

LESS FAVORABLE MONTHS SEEN FOR BRITISH ISSUES

Autumn Bank Rate of 4 Per Cent Anticipated in One Quarter, According to Reviewer — New Capital Issues.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, June 23.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post in review today says:

"A general impression prevails that the second half of the year will be less favorable to securities than the first half. This view is based on the belief that the climax in monetary ease has been reached and that the markets indifference to exernal influences like the Ruhr crisis and the unsettlement in home politics cannot be maintained indefinitely.

"The main hindrance to a speedy settlement of the reparation problem and the Ruhr crisis is twofold. First comes domestic politics in France, which interpreted means a lack of courage on the part of the Government to face the situation and to impose the necessary economies and taxation instead of relying on reparations. Second is the apparent inability to find a formula for giving France adequate security. This is partly owing to lack of American co-operation.

"Following an important article by Lord Inchcape, the Journal Des Debats has an important editorial article advocating the formation in France of a strong investigation by an Economy Committee, similar to our Geddes Committee, in order to secure drastic economies in French national outlays. Meanwhile the danger of the situation lies in the fact that while France is slowly feeling her way to internal financial reforms and you gradually are realizing the connection between European chaos and sound prosperity in America, the German position is becoming desperate.

"If and when the reparation problem is settled, currency reforms in Germany are attempted, it is now considered that the mark will be valueless.

"The monetary outlook is obscure but the best quarters anticipate a 4-per-cent autumn bank rate, believing that in spite of the absence of our free gold market, the great discrepancy between our rate and those in foreign countries should be reduced. Unfortunately, we still are handicapped by the Government's debt funding operations, for which cheap money doubtless will be desired.

"Nor should our uncertain political position be ignored. Social problems threaten to become acute, partly because in spite of a lack of employment, bad trade and cheap money the cost of living is much above the pre-war level.

"Although quiet markets are expected until autumn, the next few weeks will be busy with new capital issues, afer which a general lull is anticipated."

TO DECLARE EXTRA DIVIDEND

The National Bank of Commerce has announced its intention of declaring an extra 10 per cent dividend and is sending a letter to its 230 stockholders asking them to invest the extra dividend in a new $1,000,000 corporation to be known as the Commerce Co., which the bank is organizing to handle investment loans such as first mortgage real estate loans, industrial bonds and similar securities. The sum of the dividend is $1,000,000.

Quarters for the new company will be on the Pine street side of the Federal Reserve Building, formerly occupied by the Mortgage Trust Co. The space will be ready for occupancy when the Federal Reserve Bank moves into its new building now being erected.

The new company is the fifth financial facility added to the National Bank of Commerce since 1919, when John G. Lonsdale became president. The other departments are savings, bond, trust and assumption of management of the bank's own safety deposit boxes.

WHEAT STARTS FIRM BUT CLOSE IS SHARPLY LOWER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Wheat started firm, but prices failed to hold their advance today. A sharp downward trend developed after the first hour of trading. There was a little commission-house demand in evidence at the start and in the absence of selling pressure prices moved up quickly. Resting orders to sell filled up the demand and then prices seemed to sink under their own weight. Longs became frightened and unloaded additional pressure on the market. The weather map showed the drouth in the Northwest broken and further good rains over Canada, some over the province complaining of dry weather recently. A very moderate export business was reported at the seaboard, indicating that foreigners are not following the advance. Official estimate of the North African wheat crop is 104,000,000 bushels, against 67,000,000 bushels last year. Harvest is nearly completed and new wheat is moving toward Marseilles. Milling demand is quiet. Market closed 1¼@1⅜c lower, July $1.04⅛@1.04¼; September, $1.04⅛@1.04¼; December, $1.06⅝@1.06¾.

Corn followed the trend of wheat. There was heavy selling by leading long interests, principally September and July, and the buying was not broad enough to absorb the offerings. Active local traders bid up prices early. Southwest markets reported increased offers from the country. Shipping demand moderate. Market was ¾@1½c lower, July 82½@82⅝c; September, 79⅛@79¼c; December, 67¼@67⅜c.

Oats were firm. Light offerings and buying of July by cash houses and of deferred futures by commission houses were features. Market was unchanged to ⅛c higher, July 41c, September, 37¾@37⅞c, December 39¼c.

Provisions were neglected. Tone was easy with corn. Lard and ribs closed unchanged to 2½c lower.

GRAIN PRICES DOWN ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, June 23.—Grain futures closed lower, wheat leading, at the final session of the week.

In the local cash grain market Saturday there was limited demand for wheat. Receipts were light but some good soft wheat was on the market. No. 2 red was steady with good No. 3 red 1c stronger, while No. 4s were lower. Hard wheat was 1c off. Elevator people took the light offerings. Cash corn was ½ to 2c lower. White corn showing widest decline. Receipts were heavy for week-end. There was only a fair demand. Local industries, shippers and elevator people bought. Cash oats ruled steady to ¼c lower. Offerings were moderate, with demand fair. Local trade and shippers bought.

The market opened generally slightly better, but soon sold off under leadership of wheat. Rain was reported in spring wheat belt and improving harvesting weather in the Southwest was reported. These tended to offset unfavorable foreign crop news and ½d higher Liverpool close. There were realizing sales. Corn was affected by wheat.

July wheat opened at $1.04½; September wheat, $1.03⅝; December wheat, $1.06½; July corn, 85⅝c; September corn, 79⅝c, and December corn, 67c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 672 cars of wheat, compared with 620 a week ago and 346 last year, Minneapolis receiving 176 cars, Duluth 127 and Winnipeg 369.

Local wheat receipts, which were 40,800, compared with 82,800 a week ago and 40,800 last year, included 25 cars local and nine through. Corn receipts, which were 96,200 bushels, compared with 111,800 a week ago and 33,800 last year, included 70 cars local and 4 through. Oats receipts, which were 98,000 bushels, compared with 134,000 a week ago and 56,000 last year, included 30 cars local and 19 through. Hay receipts were 29 cars local and 2 through.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators were 113,149 bushels of wheat, 103,239 bushels of corn, 80,999 bushels of oats. Grain stocks comprised 30,245 bushels of No. 2 red winter wheat, 10,409 bushels of No. 2 hard winter wheat, 21,134 bushels of No. 2 corn, 37,479 bushels of No. 2 yellow corn, 20,580 bushels of No. 2 white corn, 48,738 bushels of No. 2 white oats, 16,998 bushels of No. 3 white oats, 5855 bushels of No. 2 rye, 26,566 bushels of Kaffir corn.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 608,000 bushels. Corn receipts were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 538,000 bushels. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 744,000 bushels.

Primary shipments of wheat were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 938,000 bushels. Corn shipments were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 360,000 bushels. Oats shipments were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 595,000 bushels.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago
Cattle & calves	19,630	23,421	27,163
Hogs	74,895	76,531	63,228
Sheep	31,888	24,754	22,638
Totals	126,413	124,706	113,029

The most pronounced change in the live stock trade at the St. Louis National Stockyards for the week just ended was a $1.00 depreciation in the market for lambs. Receipts were the largest of the year. Sheep held to steady level, the hog market again ruled higher, while cattle closed on various price levels with the average steady to 25c higher. Combined receipts of live stock were an average, arrivals approximating 126,000 head in the three departments. Cattle receipts alone were moderate and quality was about an average. Native beef steers closed 25c higher, spots showing as much as 40c gain. The bulk of arrivals cashed at $7.75 to $10 per cwt. with $10.25 paid for 1651-lb. beeves representing the top for matured offerings. Several cars of yearling steers scored $11. There were approximately 125 cars of South Texas steers available in native and quarantine alleys. The market for these advanced 25c, sales ranging largely from $4.25 to $6.65 and four cars that were fat making $7.35. Light yearlings closed steady to 25c higher, with a spread of $7.50 to $9.50 taking most. Steers and heifers topped at $10 and the price was also paid for straight heifers. The better end of the butcher cow offerings reflected strength at times, but the close was little better than steady. Canners and cutters declined 25c, spots more. On the close, cows of butcher flesh were most numerous at $4.50 to $6, while cutters varied from $2.50 to $3.75 and canners from $1.75 to $2.25. The practical top for beef cows was $7.25 and the low end $4 or $3.75. No material change was indicated in the market for bulls. Beef animals with weight continued at $4.75 to $5.50, followed by bolognas of the various classes at $4 to $5.25. Stocker and feeder steers were in light supply and the bulk sold steady, with some of the more desirable kinds probably showing a stronger trend. Sales were most evident at $5.50 to $7.50. Veal calf prices for the week varied all the way from $9.50 to $10.25. The high time was mid-week and market closed about 25c lower than a week ago, top Friday, $9.25

Hog Prices Rise.

Receipts of hogs past week have been fairly liberal, total arrivals aggregating 75,000 head, as against 76,000 a week ago. This past week's offering was some 10,000 head in excess of the run here the corresponding week, 1922. Early days of week found prices advancing and at the high time was a flat 50 cents higher than a week ago, but big killers made a desperate effort to bring St. Louis down in line with other markets and broke prices 15c to 25c from the high time. The decline, however, was sympathetic, as other centers likewise showed price deflations. At the close of Saturday's market which was a stronger affair the general hog trade was 15c to 20c higher than last Saturday. Best demand came for lightweight kinds, and good light shipping weights were ready sale. Closing top was $7.60 for 160 to 180 pound kinds, while the bulk of sales were in a spread of $7.50 to $7.55, with $7.45 getting the heavyweight butcher kinds. Trading in pigs were very unruly and generally showed sharp advances. Values averaged $1 to $1.50 higher. Good lightweight pigs were selling up to $7.50 in spots, but the bulk of shipping kinds moved from $7.25 to $7.40. Lights weighing 110 to 130 sold from $7 to $7.25, with kinds weighing 110 and under upwards of $6.75. Roughs were strong to quarter higher, selling from $6 to $6.10 mainly. Stags sold around $4.50 to $5, according to quality and weight. It was a good market on which to do business all week.

Sheep Supply Liberal.

A good, liberal supply was received, the total receipts amounting to around 32,000 head, against 24,754 head received the previous week, and something like 22,000 head this week during last year. The market was quite active, with prices on a full, steady basis the fore part of the week, but later, on account of the continued heavy runs, prices broke and, at the close of the week, showed a loss on lambs of fully $1 from the close of the previous week. The fore part of the week best lambs sold at $15.75@16, but at the close of the week were going at $14.75@15, and none higher, with fair to medium grades at $13@14.50, and the culls and poor kinds at $8@10. Sheep of all kinds remained steady throughout the entire week, with strictly good breeding ewes showing some strength. Most of the mutton sheep went at $5.50, heavy plain ewes $3.50, best breeding ewes $7.50@8, fair ones $6.50@7.25, choppers and bucks $2.50@3 and canners $1@1.50.

Horses and Mules.

Light receipts of horses here this week enabled sellers to regain some of the previous week's loss on the good big offerings and chunks. Market ruled active for these and an early clearance was made. Other horses, including Southerners continued slow at unchanged prices. Commission receipts approximated 100 head, most of which cleared at auction.

With receipts also figuring around 100 head in this department, mules reflected no material change. The market ruled slow, with the only demand of consequence appearing on big mules and good miners.

COTTON CLOSE HIGHER THOUGH IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, June 23.—The cotton market showed renewed firmness during today's early trading. Apprehensions that the approaching Government report would point to a lint crop of less than 11,000,000 bales, were evidently increased by the publication of another private set of condition figures. This was issued by a Southwestern authority who placed the condition of the crop at 69.7, the increase in acreage at 7.21 per cent and the indicated yield at 10,850,000 bales. Early weather advices were favorable, but the influence of these private crop figures were reflected by an opening advance of 7 to 11 points in the market and prices soon showed net gains of 17 to 34 points with July selling at 27.99c and October at 25.39c. Further trade calling was reported, while there was scattered covering for over the week-end and a moderate commission house demand.

Realizing became more active at 28c for July and 25.50c for October, and there were reactions of 8 to 24 points with the close irregular at a net advance of 10 to 25 points.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Cotton spot steady; middling, 29.10.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.—There was still no noticeable effect of a stronger cotton market on print cloths today. Prices for 64 by 60s and 68 by 72s remained unchanged and inactive at 9⅛c to 11⅛c. There was some little business done in sheetings and sateens, but generally the market was dull. Silks were active and prices held at Friday's levels, reflecting the market in Japan.

Weekly Butter Review.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Only slight price changes were recorded in the butter market during the week ending June 23. Trading was marked by nervousness and unsettled conditions. Dealers generally were free sellers, while jobbers as a rule bought only for their current needs. Wholesale prices for 92 score butter on the principal markets were unchanged except at Chicago, where a 1c loss was registered.

Closing prices were as follows: Chicago, 38½c; New York, 39c; Boston, 40c; Philadelphia, 40c.

51 ST. LOUISANS SAIL ON LEVIATHAN JULY 4

827 Applications for Passports Have Been Made Here Since Jan. 1.

Fifty-one St. Louisans have engaged passage on the maiden trans-Atlantic voyage of the giant government liner Leviathan, which will sail July 4 from New York City. Of these 19 will be first class passengers, as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Vrooman, Howard, Jr., and Miss Frances Vrooman; Saul Lebenson, L. G. Kregal, Edward Holtgrewe, Mr. and Mrs. Ben A. Langan, Mr. and Mrs. Winchester Kelso, Mrs. C. L. Martin and daughters, Frances and Jessie; F. D. Michael, and Mrs. C. G. Evans and children, Mary and Charles.

The Leviathan, as is known, formerly was the Vaterland of the German marine. It was seized during the war and used as an American troop transport. Now it has been remodeled and will be the finest passenger ship in the government's large fleet of trans-Atlantic vessels.

A number of St. Louisans, who have or will go aboard on other ships, have made reservations to return on the Leviathan.

Wedding of Helen Gratz Tuesday to Be Conspicuous Event in St. Louis Society

St. Louisan Will Become Bride of Godfrey Stillman Rockefeller of New York, in Home Ceremony — Pre-Wedding Parties Tonight and Tomorrow Evening — Newlyweds to Spend Honeymoon Abroad.

CONSPICUOUS among important weddings in the history of St. Louis society is that of Miss Helen Gratz, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Gratz of 5155 Lindell boulevard and Godfrey Stillman Rockefeller, son of Mrs. William Goodsell Rockefeller, of New York, to take place Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the drawing room of the Gratz home.

The Rev. Dr. J. Boyd Coxe of the Trinity Episcopal Church, who confirmed Miss Gratz, will perform the ceremony and the guests will include only about 50 relatives, of which 30 will come from New York. Several hundred additional guests have been invited for the reception to follow. The bridal table seating 20 guests will be laid in the sunroom, while in a flower bedecked marquise built in the garden at the back of the house, there will be a supper, prepared and served by the St. Louis Country Club. Miss Benedict, famous for her wedding appointments, will come from Louisville bringing with her the wedding cake, the ices and baskets filled with dainty marones glace, and the individual cakes. The New York guests, including Mrs. Rockefeller, mother of the bridegroom; his sister, Miss Almira Rockefeller; his uncle, Percy A. Rockefeller and the latter's daughter, Miss Isabel Rockefeller; his brothers, J. Stillman and William A. Rockefeller, and others, will arrive tomorrow morning, and will depart Wednesday. The personnel of the bridal party, which already has been announced, will remain intact with the exception o Mrs. Prescott Bush of Columbus, O., who will be prevented from coming because of a death in the family. Miss Mary Magennis of Irvington, N. Y., will be maid of honor, and Miss Gratz has chosen Mrs. Hanson Thomas of Sewickley, Pa., as matron of honor.

Because of the short time Mr. Rockefeller and his guests are to be here, pre-wedding parties have been curtailed. This evening, Mrs. John Dwight Filley will entertain Mr. Gratz's house guests at the St. Louis Country Club, and tomorrow evening Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott and her daughter, Miss Alice Scott, will give a dinner at the Country Club for Miss Gratz, her fiance and the bridal party

At the same time, Mr. Gratz will give a similar party at the club for the older guests. Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long have lent their home, next door to the Gratz residence, for as many guests as it will accommodate, and others will go to Hotel Chase.

Mr. Rockefeller and his bride will sail Saturday from New York for Europe and will make their home in New York.

Another interesting wedding of Tuesday will be that of Miss Miriam McMahon, daughter of Mrs. John Francis McMahon of 4317 Lindell boulevard, and John Richardson Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Thomas of 4509 Laclede avenue, which will take place in the morning at the New Cathedral. Mgr. J. J. Tannrath will officiate and guests both at the church and house will include only members of the immediate families. Miss Catherine McMahon will be her sister's maid of honor, and B. F. Thomas will serve his brother as best man. The bride is a graduate of the Sacred Heart convent and Mr. Thomas served as a Lieutenant in the 9th and 354th Infantries of the 89th Division overseas during the war. After a honeymoon trip, Mr. Thomas and his bride will make their home at 4401 Forest Park boulvard.

The Jessie L. Gaynor Choral Club had a called meeting at the residence of Mrs. James F. Cook on Wednesday morning, June 15, to make some changes in the constitution, necessary to admitting the men's section into the club. Plans for next season's work also were discussed.

A farewell dinner was given last eve at the Chase Hotel by Mr. John A. Quinn of 7053 Forsythe boulevard in honor of his son, Earl G. Smith, who leaves next fall for Marquette University. The class of 1923 of the St. Louis University High School was invited and William Korfmacker acted as toastmaster. Other speakers were as follows: Mr. Quinn, Mr. B. Geiger, and Mr. S. O'Rourke. The main achievement of the evening was the organization of an alumni association. The following officers were elected: Leo T. Bruce, president; August A. Peters, vice president; William Kelley, secretary, and Earl G. Smith, treasurer

Mrs. F. C. Jaensch of 3630 Liermann avenue has return from a several weeks' visit with her daughter, Mrs. W. D. Reeve, in Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Reeve will depart soon for New York, where Mr. Reeve has taken a position at Columbia University.

Mrs. J. C. Shotwell of Denver, Colo., is visiting her sisters, Mrs. J. H. Risk and Mrs. F. Strebeck of 51[illegible] Westminster place.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES OF MISSOURIANS IN CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Mr. and Mrs. James Hagerman, formerly of St. Louis, have closed their house in Cleveland Park and have gone to the north shore for the summer. With them are their daughters, Misses Annalee and Peggy. Mrs. Hagerman was formerly Miss Myrtle Buckley.

One of the largest official weddings here in some months was that of Miss Louisa Hoar, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Gillett, wife of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to Christopher La Farge of New York. The ceremony took place at the Cathedral on Monday. Young La Farge is the grandson of the late John La Farge, one of America's most celebrated painters and a great-grandson of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, the naval hero of the War of 1812. The Right Rev. Thomas E. Davies, Bishop of Western Massachusetts, performed the ceremony.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert E. Coontz, who will leave Washington soon, were entertained at dinner Friday night at the Army and Navy Club by a group of fellow officers of the Admiral. Many other entertainments will be given before the Admiral leaves for the West coast, where he will be in command of the Pacific fleet. Mrs. Coontz and Miss Bertha Coontz will spend some time in Missouri this summer before returning here to reopen their apartment.

Many hand the palm of popularity among officials in Washington to Dwight W. Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, who has been welcomed to the little coterie of officials who play tennis together and go on hikes through Rock Creek Park. Secretary Davis is from St. Louis. Another leader among these is Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who is following in the footsteps of his father not only in Washington's political life but in the enjoyment of the country surrounding the national capital.

While many of the officials and their wives have already left for summer, Col. Davis and Col. Roosevelt are among those who will spend many weeks yet working over the budget for their departments to be submitted through the Budget Bureau to Congress.

After hours of work on figures and estimates, conferences with bureau chiefs and budget officials, Col. Roosevelt and Col. Davis are among the first to arrive at the Dumbarton Club tennis courts to test their skill with the recquet. This is one of the oldest clubs in Washington, dating back to Colonial days and although there are newer and more up-to-date clubs, its situation overlooking Washington and the fine condition of the tennis courts has made its roster seem like a blue book of social and official Washington.

Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Roosevelt frequently motor out to see the contests and in the morning the Roosevelt children, the Davis children and other juvenile members of Washington society, debutantes and young matrons use the famous golf course.

Mrs. Joseph Folk has arrived in Washington from Missouri and Tennessee, but because of her heavy mourning for the late former Governor of Missouri, she remains in retirement. She is doubtful as to whether she will keep the home in the heart of Rock Creek Park in which she and the late Governor resided and which was always a mecca for not only the Missouri contingent of society but the members of the famous administration dancing class composed of officials during the Wilson administration.

Mrs. Gertrude J. Fisher of Indianapolis, Ind., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Emory L. Murray and their small daughter, Betty Louise Murray, at the Murray home, 4826 Cupples place.

WEDDINGS OF INTEREST DURING THE PAST WEEK

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Poertner, daughter of Mrs. L. Poertner of 7403 Commonwealth avenue, Maplewood, and George Dewey Edson, son of Mr. Edson of South Dakota, took place recently at the Poertner home, the Rev. Nash of the Maplewood Baptist Church officiating. The only attendants were Miss Helen Poertner, maid of honor, and Ray Edson, best man. The music was given by Miss Elva Brown, soloist, accompanied by Miss Edith Welch. Mr. and Mrs. Edson have departed on their honeymoon trip, after which they will reside in Minneapolis. They are both graduates of the University of Wisconsin, where Mrs. Edson became a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority and Mr. Edson of the Lambda Chi fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dwyer of 6059 McPherson avenue have sent out invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Marion Louise Dwyer, and Dr. Ernest M. McGrath, at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, at St. Roch's Church. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Father Charles Harrison, a cousin of the bride-elect, and will be followed by a breakfast for the immediate families at the Dwyer home.

Miss Regen Dwyer will be her sister's only attendant, and Frank McGrath will serve his brother as best man. Dr. Vincent Schoppe and Dr. Schmidt will be groomsmen. After a honeymoon trip in the North, Dr. McGrath and his bride will make their home in St. Louis. Dr. McGrath is an alumnus of St. Louis University and served overseas in the war. He recently received his commission as Captain in the Reserve Corps. Miss Dwyer has traveled extensively in this country and in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lee Holden of 5546 Maple avenue have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Irene Holden, to Robert Bruce of Litchfield, Ky., June 16. After a honeymoon trip to the Great Lakes, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce will be at home at 6242 Cabanne avenue.

Miss Renilda Kittlaus, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Louis Kittlaus of 4332 Forest Park boulevard, was married Friday afternoon at her home to Raymond Glunz of Buffalo, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Henry Forsyth of the King's Highway Presbyterian Church. The couple met at the Indiana State Normal College, of which both are graduates. After a honeymoon trip they will make their home in Buffalo, where Mr. Glunz has business interests.

The wedding of Miss Elsie Gummersbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gummersbach of 3840 Westminster place, and Edward A. Higgins, took place at St. Francis Xavier's Church Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. The mass was read by the Rev. Father J. O'Brien.

The bride's gown was white beaded georgette over satin, made with a court train of crepe over folds of the satin, and her tulle veil was caught to her hair with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley. Miss Leola Meyer of Springfield, Mo., as maid of honor, wore an orchid-colored gown with trimmings of satin and cream lace. With it she wore a picture hat of the same color adorned with a pink rose. Louis Gummersbach was best man, and David Stephen Jr. and Henry Albrecht were ushers. A wedding breakfast was served for the immediate families and bridal party at the home of the bride's parents.

After a honeymoon tour in the East, Mr. and Mrs. Higgins will reside in the Knickerbocker apartments. Mrs. Higgins was educated at the Sacred Heart Convent.

Miss Emma Wouters, daughter of Mrs. Jacques Wouters of 3839 Connecticut street, became the bride at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon of Harold T. Lippert, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Lippert, of 3847 Utah street. The Rev. W. F. Wilk performed the ceremony in the Messiah Lutheran Church, and a reception for relatives followed at the Wouters home.

The bride wore an afternoon gown in the mauve shades. The bodice was of Spanish lace with cap sleeves and a panel at the back which reached the hem. The crepe skirt was draped to the center front and a girdle of antique gold encircled the waist line. Her hat was tulle to match the gown with tulle drapery caught to the brim with two pink roses and falling to the ankle. She carried pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Helen Abbetmeir, bridesmaid, was gowned in beige georgette and Spanish lace, with a beige hat adorned at the brim with burnt orange flowers. Ward roses were used in fashioning her corsage. Miss Barbara Wouters, who was her sister's maid of honor, wore grey flat crepe with sleeves and panels of chantilly lace, and lace hat with the long drape and lavender flowers. She wore lavender sweet peas and roses. Clarence Tiemeyer was best man, and Gus A. Buder, Jr., groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Lippert have gone to Macatawa Beach, Mich., on their honeymoon, and upon their return will make thier home in Argonne apartments. Mr. Lippert is a graduate of Washington University and a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

The marriage of Miss Marie London, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. London, of 6149 Pershing avenue, and Isador Fry took place last Sunday evening at the home of the bride's parents. They are spending their honeymoon in New York and Washington and will make their home in St. Louis.

Miss Eleanor Schnur, daughter of Mrs. C. Schnur of 4440 Arco avenue, and Ward L. Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Foster of Vermont, Ill., were married at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Johana Schnur and Mr. Foster by A. E. McGrath. The couple will make their home with Mrs. Schnur.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Evans of 5795 McPherson avenue, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Celeste Evans, to Joslyn Marglous, on Wednesday, June 20, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Evans. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Julian Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Marglous have departed on a honeymoon trip through the East.

The wedding of Miss Isabelle Pfaender and Frank Finklang was solemnized Wednesday morning at the Visitation Church, the Rev. Father M. J. Conners officiating, and was followed by a dinner at the bride's home. After a river trip the couple will be at home June 27 at 3852 Maffitt avenue. The bridal party comprised Misses Marion Pfaender, Clarice Finklang, Doris Oberrieder and Margaret Finklang. J. Emerson Pfaender was groomsman.

The bride wore white beaded georgette over Victoria silk with a charmeuse train and tulle veil. She carried orchids and roses. Her attendants wore pastel shaded gowns with girdles of roses, and silver leaves in their hair. There were about 50 guests.

The marriage of Miss Fay Orenstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Orenstein, 4620 Newberry Terrace, and George J. Zatlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Zatlin of 5027 Maffitt avenue, will be solemnized today at 5:30 p. m. in the presence of the two families. A reception will be held in their honor in the evening from 8 to 11 at the Orthodox Old Folks' Home, East Grand boulevard and Blair avenue, to which their friends are invited. No cards have been issued.

Miss Fern Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bailey of Marceline, was married to Captain Lewis Coleman Gordon, Engineers Corps, U. S. Army, at the Westminster Presbyterian Church at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Only the members of the families were in attendance. The officiating minister was Rev. Stuart McAlpine Campbell, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Macon, Missouri.

The bride is a graduate of Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., where she was a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority. For the past two years she was an instructor in the Department of English, University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kan. Capt. Gordon is a son of the late Rev. Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Gordon. For several years prior to the war, Capt. Gordon lived in St. Louis. After a honeymoon in the East, Capt. and Mrs. Gordon will reside at Fort Riley, Kansas, where he has been stationed since 1921.

Headquarters For Clocks
From 1829 to 1923

When Louis Jaccard left Switzerland and came to St. Louis in 1829 he opened a clock shop. He was a clock maker by trade. Since that time Jaccards has become known throughout the nation as a reliable place from which to procure timepieces. Our collection of French clocks, we believe is unsurpassed in America. And we have clocks of every description. Monday we are featuring a—

Westminster Mantle Chime Clock
Special at $42.75

At this low price we now offer a number of these very handsome solid mahogany clocks, one of which is illustrated at left. They play Westminster Chimes at quarter hour intervals and strike the hours. The tones are remarkably sweet and distinct. 8-day jewel lever movement, convex glass, silver finish dial, size 12½ in. high by 9½ in. wide.

Charming Colonial Banjo Clock
Special at $12.75

Since the days of Colonial America these graceful Banjo clocks have been appreciated for their decorative possibilities. The clock illustrated at right is 17¾ inches high and five inches wide, with solid mahogany case, cast metal ornaments, decorated side panels, 3½ inch porcelain dial and beveled glass.

Small Round Hanging Clock
"The Lawen" $6.75

These neat looking clocks, with 12 day lever movements, are very desirable for kitchens, kitchenettes, bathrooms and dens. The 6x6 inch case is porcelain, with 4½ inch white dial.

NOTES OF ST. LOUIS FOLK TRAVELING

Judge and Mrs. Franklin Miller of 1117 McCausland avenue, with their three children, will pass the summer months at Fernwood, Central Lake, near Charlevoix, Mich. They will make the trip by motor, departing this week.

Mrs. John L. Roemer of Lindenwood College will depart this week for Manitou Springs, Colo. She will be joined at Kansas City by Dr. Roemer, president of Lindenwood, who has been assisting in the Lindenwood Presbyterian Church dedication ceremonies in that city. They will remain in Manitou until August.

Prof. and Mrs. John Thomas of St. Charles, a June bridal couple, are spending their honeymoon on an auto tour. Going first to their summer cottage at Atlantic City, where they are to remain three weeks, they will return in July to the West, touring half way across the continent to Colorado Springs, Colo., where they will be guests of the bridegroom's parents. Prof. Thomas is head of the music department of Lindenwood College. His bride was Miss Lucile Stout of St. Charles.

Mrs. W. J. Dascher of 3512 North Newstead avenue, accompanied by her sister, Miss Charlotte Voelpel, of 4215 Margaretta avenue, departed June 19 for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Otto of New Franklin, Mo.

Miss Grace Leland of 4240 Cleveland avenue and Miss Melva Corson will depart Wednesday evening for Rome, N. Y., where Miss Corson will fill a singing engagement in the Methodist Church. They will stop in Detroit, Niagara Falls, Utica and Camden en route.

Bernard Yawitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Yawitz of 6657 Kingsbury place, is in the Officers' Training Camp at Fort Monroe, Cal., and later will visit Washington, New York, Niagara Falls and Detroit.

Miss Nell Burke of 4054 Lindell boulevard has gone to St. Joseph, Mo., where she was maid of honor at the wedding of her sister, Miss Edna Burke, and Lawrence Joseph Toller of Kansas City, Wednesday morning.

Miss Josephine Shannahanof of 1249 Amherst place is in Kansas City visiting friends. She will remain away a month.

Miss Celestine Cirode of 933 Hamilton avenue, has departed for New York to remain until the last of July.

Mrs. Frank B. Coleman of 5042 Washington boulevard, who has been visiting in Syracuse, N. Y., and other Eastern points for several weeks, is expected home tomorrow. Her daughters, Misses Marianne and Dorothy Coleman, will spend July and August in camp at Algonquin Park, Ontario.

WEDDINGS OF INTEREST DURING THE PAST WEEK

lenger to Chas. Sprich took place Saturday, June 16, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. Mullenger, 3408 Williams Place, Rev. C. F. Crowe, pastor of the Terry Methodist Church, officiating. The guests were relatives and close friends. The couple departed to spend a month in Glacier National Park.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Lulu Maravich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Maravich of 2101 Kansas avenue, East St. Louis, and John Duich of Madison, Ill., June 14 in St. Louis. The couple reside at 1342 State street, East St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Alonzo Yackey of 4222 Flora place announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Cordelia Olive Yackey, and Dr. William Edwin Froelker, on Wednesday, June 20, Dr. Dodson officiating.

The bride wore a gown of white flat crepe trimmed with rose point lace which she recently brought from abroad. Her veil, worn by her sisters, Mrs. Harold George and Mrs. Herbert Gross, was edged with rose point lace.

Only immediate members of the family were present. Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Yackey Jr. flew down from Chicago in one of their airplanes. Other out-of-town members of the family were sisters of the bride, Mrs. Herbert Gross of Chicago and Miss Millicent Yackey of New York. Mrs. J. P. Hessdoerfer, an aunt of Mrs. Froelker, of Waco, Tex., was also present.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Wuertenbaecher of 4060 Cleveland avenue announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marguerite Wuertenbaecher, to Herbert J. Beckers, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Beckers of 3616 Utah place at a bridge luncheon given recently at the home of the prospective bride. The wedding date has not been chosen.

Mrs. A. Sender of 4102 McRee avenue announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Frances E. Sender, to Leo Linzer of New York. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Miller of 5553 Waterman avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Miller, to Joseph Marx of Cincinnati. The wedding date has not been set.

Mrs. Paula Wezler Sittinger of 3661 Humphrey street announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Helen Sittinger, to Alfred C. Waldemer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waldemer of 3216 Hawthorne boulevard.

HORNSBY IN COURT BUT IS NOT CALLED IN THE HINE CASE

Responds to Summons as Witness for John A. Hine, Who Seeks to Have Divorce Set Aside.

MISS PENNINGTON PLACED ON STAND

Testifies Ballplayer Called at Her Home on One Occasion to Leave Quail After Hunting Trip.

Rogers Hornsby, star second baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals baseball team, appeared in the Court of Domestic Relations yesterday on a summons as a witness for John A. Hine of 1346 Bayard avenue, an automobile salesman, who is seeking to reopen the case in which his former wife was granted a divorce decree. However, he was not placed on the stand. Hornsby's name had been mentioned in connection with the Hines' domestic trouble.

Testimony was completed yesterday, with but one minor reference to Hornsby, and the case was taken under advisement by Judge Ossing.

Wants Divorce Set Aside.

Hine recently filed a motion asking the court to set aside the decree awarded his former wife, Miss Jeannette Pennington, 23, of 1149 Union boulevard, on Feb. 20, last. Hine alleged that he, and not the former Mrs. Hine, was the injured party. His attorneys introduced a typewritten copy of a letter, containing endearing terms and signed "Roge," which Hornsby was alleged to have written to Miss Pennington. Hornsby has denied this.

This letter, written from Bradentown, Fla., spring training camp of the Cardinals, bore a date in March, after the decree had been granted.

Mrs. Hornsby recently filed suit for divorce and a decree was awarded by Circuit Judge Hogan, before the latter recalled that the rules of the court require 10 days must elapse after filing of the suit before a decree can be awarded. He then suspended the decree and announced he would take the case under advisement. The 10-day period expired Friday, but the Judge announced he would hand down a decision later. Mrs. Hornsby was given custody of her young son.

Miss Pennington on Stand.

Miss Pennington was placed on the stand for a few minutes yesterday. In response to a question by Hine's counsel if Hornsby ever had called on her, she stated he had called on one occasion in November, 1922. She said Hornsby had returned from a hunting trip and came to her home, then at 1414 Goodfellow avenue, to leave a dozen quail.

Hornsby was in the courtroom when Miss Pennington testified, but was excused, at his request, after attorney's for Hine said Hornsby would not be placed on the stand.

Denial of any intimate friendship with Miss Pennington was made Friday by Hornsby when his deposition was taken by attorneys for Hine. Hornsby went direct from the baseball game to the offices of Edgar V. Maher, who acted as commissioner, in the Times Building.

Questioned by Attorney.

When questioned by W. D. McCarthy, representing Hine, Hornsby stated he met Miss Pennington at dog races in East St. Louis last summer, being introduced by Eddie Ainsmith, a catcher for the Cardinals. "I never knew her as Mrs. Hine," Hornsby said. He said he met her again at the Melbourne Hotel last February when he was leaving for Bradentown.

He denied having met Miss Pennington at the baseball park here, but admitted having met her last July or August in the lobby of the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York, when he took her to dinner. He also denied having taken Miss Pennington to various cafes and resorts in and about St. Louis, or that he had driven her around in his automobile here.

Reference in Letter.

Hornsby stated he received many letters from men and women, in regard to baseball matters, and in answer to a question said he had received such a letter from Miss Pennington, referring to baseball. She made no reference to a divorce, he said. Hornsby said he answered this letter, addressing it "Dear Miss Pennington," and wrote that he would be glad to get back to St. Louis and see all his friends.

When asked if he used endearing terms in the letter, or signed it "lovingly yours, Roge," Hornsby made an emphatic denial.

McCarthy asked if Miss Pennington had telephoned Mrs. Hornsby at any time and Hornsby became angry, exclaiming, "I don't want you to ask anything about my wife. McCarthy insisted the question was a proper one, and Hornsby replied, "Don't ask a lot of foolish questions." Maher, as commissioner, ruled out any questions concerning Mrs. Hornsby.

A summons to appear at the hearing yesterday, as a witness for Hine, was served on Hornsby when he appeared at Maher's office.

Church Suspends Broadcasting.

Station WMAY, the King's highway Presbyterian Church in St. Louis, has announced that owing to a breakdown in its aparatus it will not be able to broadcast for the next three or four weeks.

PIGGLY WIGGLY SUITS DROPPED

Cases Had Been Brought Against Saunders by Banker.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 23.—The curtain was rung down today on the feud between Clarence Saunders and out-of-town members of the Piggly Wiggly pool when two suits filed by Sidney W. Souers, banker, of New Orleans, against Saunders were dropped. One of the suits was filed at Memphis and one at New Orleans, and each involved a note of $30,000 made to Souers by the Piggly Wiggly president at the time Saunders was protecting his stock against bear raids.

This gesture of peace is interpreted as establishing harmony between Saunders and his pool members. St. Louis and Nashville interests reached an agreement with Saunders about a month ago granting him until July and Jan. 1 to meet his obligations and approving his policy to sell a sufficient number of stores to put the business in sound financial condition.

Manchester Bank GROWS

Increases Capital Stock to

$500,000.00

The Manchester Bank, at Vandeventer and Chouteau Avenues, announces an increase in its capital stock from $250,000.00 to $500,000.00. This recent action by the stockholders places the bank in a better position to serve its rapidly increasing clientele and indicates their faith in the continuous growth of the city.

Growing Bigger for Bigger Things

The following totals by years show the regular and rapid growth of a popular bank. Through liberal and progressive banking methods it has grown with and for the rapidly expanding neighborhood which it particularly serves, although it enjoys accounts from many other sections of the city.

MRS. J. M. BRYSON IS GRANTED DIVORCE

Also to Receive Custody of Minor Child and $22,500 Alimony by Stipulation.

Mrs. Mazie Finney Bryson of 5570 Chamberlain avenue was granted a divorce yesterday from Joseph M. Bryson, general solicitor for the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad, residing at Hotel Chase.

Bryson entered his appearance, filed a general denial of the charges but did not contest the suit.

Mrs. Bryson testified he treated her with indifference, embarrassed her by showing no interest in her conversation when they were with mutual friends, and failed to take her to places of amusement. They were married Oct. 17, 1894, and separated June 8, last.

Mrs. Bryson was awarded custody of a minor child, Alice Dalton Bryson, and by stipulation she is to receive $22,500 in gross alimony. It is understood another contract has been drawn up in which further financial provision for her is made.

Confederate Veteran Dies.

Thomas H. Harris, 4660 Page boulevard, died yesterday at Barnes Hospital after a long illness. He was 82 years old and he is survived by his widow, six sons and one daughter. He was a charter member of the Masonic Lodge of Troy, Mo., and was a member of the local camp, United Confederate Veterans, having served under "Stonewall" Jackson. The body will be sent to Troy for burial there tomorrow.

AIRPLANE SERVICE LIKELY SOON FOR ST. LOUIS POLICE

President of Board of Opinion It Is Bound to Come in Order to Catch Up With Modern Criminal.

RADIO ALSO PROBABLY WILL BE INSTALLED

Powerful Searchlight for Central Station, and Return to Traffic Whistles Other Ideas Gleaned on Trip.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Heads of the St. Police department will return home tomorrow afternoon prepared to install a more modern service by adopting several innovations gleande from the departments of several large cities visited during the last few weeks.

An airplane service, a new searchlight system for quick assemblage of the force at night, and the radio are the outstanding features. The officers saw the value of the airplanes for themselves here yesterday when they took a 45-minute trip over the city. They are strongly impressed with the possibilities of flying. Incidentally, they have virtually agreed that St. Louis must have the police whistles restored notwithstanding complaints by some citizens that they made too much citizens.

Members of St. Louis Party.

The party here includes Chief Martin O'Brien, Chief of Detectives Hoagland and President Brockman of the Police Board. They paid their respects yesterday to Maj. Daniel Sullivan, head of the Washington Police. Detective Sergeant Jett accompanied them to the naval air station at Anacosta. They went up in the F-5-L, Lieut. Gordon, pilot. Their trip took them over Mt. Vernon, the home of George Washington.

Brockman said today that he believed the Police Department fo St. Louis ultimately will have to use the airplane. "We are of the opinion it is bound to come in order to catch up with the modern criminal," he added.

Another feature that he expects to be added to the service is the radio. The chiefs found that in New York and Detroit the services were all ready to be used as soon as a suitable code can be worked out. "It is just a question now as to a code system," he continued. "This problem is being worked out now." Brockman said its usefulness would come in broadcasting theft of automobiles and identification of criminals who pull quick jobs and get away in high-powered machines.

A searchlight playing on the Washington Monument here from a hotel roof gave the police heads an idea for St. Louis last night while they were driving around Washington. This is to place a searchlight on the roof of the Central Police Station on Twelfth street, opposite City Hall. In times of emergency powerful flashes would be sent every direction over the city and the police officers would be informed thereby to hustle to their boxes and stations. This is expected to be a far advance over the flash boxes at intervals over the city now, which may not always be visible.

Sold on Searchlight Idea.

The two chiefs believe a powerful fash of light across the sky can give signals that will be seen by the men from their beats instantaneously. "I am pretty well sold on this idea," Brockman said.

Good traffic ideas were found in New York and some of these are to be applied in St. Louis. "All large cities have adopted the whistle," Brockman continued, 'and I believe we will have to come back to it in St. Louis."

The officers were impressed with the Bertillon finger-printing system in Washington.

GRAIN HARVESTING IN CITY

Demonstration to Be Given by Threshing Machine Company.

"City folks," who have never seen any grain harvested in the field, will have an opportunity to witness a demonstration in the heart of St. Louis. A crop of oats will be cut with a modern self-binder at Forest Park boulevard and Boyle avenue July 7.

About two weeks later another agricultural exhibition will be given on the same lot. The ground will be plowed and seeded, and those attending will see the amount of labor required to produce a bushel of grain. The exhibitions will be under the auspices of a threshing machine company.

Welfare Session at Columbia.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., June 23.—A public welfare institute, which will be in session here five days, will open Monday and close Friday. The University of Missouri and the State Board of Charities will conduct the institute jointly. Miss Bessie A. McClanahan of St. Louis will speak Wednesday night on "Community Organization for Public Welfare." Thursday morning Miss Emma C. Puschner of St. Louis, executive secretary of the board of children's guardians, will speak on "Child Welfare and Placing."

BEAUTIFUL ALTA-DENA
THE BEST BUY IN ST. LOUIS TODAY

All cities have certain residential sections wherein values are pyramided by natural development. In St. Louis it is UNIVERSITY CITY. ALTA-DENA, UNIVERSITY CITY'S most charming section, is practically the last opportunity to take advantage of the rapid increase in values that have and are making fortunes for those who have already invested. The sensational, but staple, increase in values of Delmar Boulevard and Delmar Garden will find a counterpart in IDEAL ALTA-DENA.

Reinforced concrete streets, granitoid sidewalks, storm and waste sewers connected with each lot; gas, water, electricity and telephones. No additional charge is made for these improvements as they are now being rapidly installed.

We have prepared a beautiful colored plat of ALTA-DENA, showing the artistic landscape treatment, with arrangement of homesite locations. With the plat are examples, reproduced in halftone, of artistic homes suitable for such a setting. WE WILL MAIL IT TO YOU IF YOU WILL SIGN AND POST ATTACHED COUPON.

HOW TRIANGLE AIR RACE COURSE WILL APPEAR TO FLYERS

Pylons at Each of Three Corners to Guide Entrants in Speed Contest in October.

AVIATORS TO FLY LOW AROUND ROUTE

Must Make Considerably Better Than 200 Miles an Hour to Break the World's Record.

Aerial racers in the National Air Meet and Pulitzer race, to be held at St. Louis Field Oct. 1 to 3, will fly around a verdant triangle and one that will be far from "eternal," in that its existence will be left mostly to the imagination, aided by a pylon at each of the three "corners."

This was a prime impression of a Post-Dispatch reporter who was taken for a flight around the 30-mile course recently, along with Col. C. S. Thornton, who, as commander of the 138th Infantry, will have administrative control over the new Air Service units of the National Guard, and who desired to inspect the course. The pilot was William B. Robertson, president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, who was active in forming the new units.

Racers to Fly Low.

It was a case of seeing the underlying terrain from the aviator's perspective, but with two important factors of difference—the flight was at an altitude of about 1500 feet and speed of 60 miles an hour, while the racers will fly perhaps no higher than 50 feet and will have to make considerably better than 200 miles an hour to break the world's record. They will fly low because they won't want to waste precious seconds climbing aloft.

The inspection flight was made late in the afternoon of a rare June day, but a haze pervaded the West and made an orange disc of the sun. There was comfort in shirt sleeves and joy in blown hair in the rush of wind about the cockpit.

Men and teams preparing the field for the races dwindled into pigmies as the circling ascent was made. Close behind was Bridgeton and to the east the smoke of the city. Natural Bridge road a pointing finger of gray. Then the first realization of the abundant verdure as the course led north across Florissant Valley. Hills and valleys lost their meaning to the eye, but trees and barnyards marked out the gardens, the wheat and the corn.

Some tillers of the soil were plodding weary homeward ways, tiny figures, while others shot about the landscape in flivvers. An outstanding group of buildings was the Jesuit novitiate of St. Stanislau, west of Florissant, which lay sleepily under green branches.

River Cleaves Landscape.

Then the brown Missouri River cleaved the landscape, running beneath the course for three miles. Its swirling surface looked like a bowl of placid iced coffee from above. Drainage ditches made little deltas as they flowed into it from the bottoms. Some of the islands looked like jungles. Away to the east a tall yellow smokestack betokened the glass works at Alton.

Suddenly the plane banked at a 45-degree angle and the first turn was rounded. The course ran almost straight for the setting sun. The shiny metal fence down below was no fence, but the Burlington railroad, a glance at the map showed. What seemed to be a few puddles in the lowlands, with wheat all around, proved to be Marais Temps Clair, charted as a great marsh.

On the right the Mississippi flowed northward in a great bend to meet the mouth of the Illinois, which came from the west. The streams were framed in mist. The few houses below were Seeberger, then another banking and back for the field on the third leg. Boshertown road was a long, white path from St. Charles, and that town was a smoky cluster on the bluffs. The two bridges over the river there seemed as cobwebs and the unusual height of the Wabash Railway bridge was imperceptible. The concrete of St. Charles road glistened between crowding automobiles.

Maneuvers Above Train.

Another plane circled about; in it were Col. Thornton's wife and daughter, waving. Once more St. Louis Field lay beneath—the 30-mile course had been traversed in 26 minutes. The westbound Wabash accommodation train was sighted coming into Anglum, so a landing was not made, but Pilot Robertson circled about till it had left the station, then swooped down to within about 50 feet of the ground, to give his passengers a special thrill, and darted through the smoke of the locomotive, which materially warmed the atmosphere.

After landing, Col. Thornton waxed enthusiastic about the ride. He had had several flights previously. "Three weeks ago you said you'd never ride in one of those flimsy things," his wife chided, to which he replied that he had learned a lot about the stability of aircraft.

As has been told in the Post-Dispatch, spectators of the October meet may drive to St. Louis Field, to roads in the vicinity of Florissant, to the end of Hall's Ferry road or to points on the Boshertown and other St. Charles County highways for vantage points.

FARMER PICKED LOCK EVERY TIME POLICE TURNED KEY ON HIM

Alton Authorities Relieved When Son Takes Away Man Who Wouldn't "Stay Put."

P. A. Campbell has been taken off of the hands of the Alton police and they breathe freely again. During the day or so that he was their guest they had great difficulty in keeping him locked up. Every time they put him in the detention room he picked the lock and walked out.

Campbell is a well-to-do retired farmer of Tullula, Ill. A few days ago he bought a new car and drove away from Tullula. Wednesday he appeared in Alton, driving the car. Later he was found wandering around on foot and was taken to the station. He could not tell what had become of the car. He was able to tell his name and address and his family was notified. Meantime he was placed in the detention room.

But being locked up was not to his liking. He promptly picked the lock and was found sitting on the bench in Magistrate Connor's court. Every time he was locked up he picked his way to freedom. Yesterday his son came and took him away, but was unable to find out where his father had left the car.

OFFICERS AND POOLROOM OWNER FREED OF BLAME FOR KILLING

A Coroner's jury yesterday exonerated two city detectives and a poolroom proprietor who fired the shots Wednesday night which fatally wounded Thomas J. Mackin, 19, of 4064 Cottage avenue, as he fled after taking a box of nickels from a poolroom at 3841 Easton avenue.

Detectives Ben C. Whitmore and Joseph A. Wren, and Castler C. Alford, proprietor of the poolroom testified they fired only after calling upon Mackin to halt. Alford said the youth entered his place while he was busy and attempted to slip out the door with the box of coins. He gave chase, firing two shots, and the detectives joined in, each firing twice, they testified. Mackin ran about two blocks.

The POST-DISPATCH is the only St. Louis evening newspaper giving Associated Press news service.

I want a word with you women

I wish I might have that word individually—and privately. But that cannot be done. So I am talking to millions of you at the same moment today through the pages of the great newspapers.

I want to ask you a few questions. Then I want to tell you something. And the questions I want to ask you are these:

If there were a young married woman in your circle whom you knew to be carrying on a liaison with an unmarried man while her husband lay ill at home, what would be your attitude toward her? Would you merely raise your eyebrows and go your way? Would you publicly scorn her and snub her? Would you banish her name from your tongue? Would you forbid your daughter to meet her, and warn your son against her like?

or, Would you, before judging her on the single fact of sin, seek to learn all that lay behind the fact? Is it conceivable to you that there might be a reason for that woman to sin, sufficiently great, in her mind, to justify the sinning? Is such a thought beyond a decent woman's comprehension? In a word, are women as ready today to cast the stone as they were in the day of the Magdalen of old whom Jesus protected? Pretty vital questions, these, for upon their right answers rests the whole institution of the new free and independent womanhood.

And now I want to tell you something.

I do not ask these questions at all.
They are asked you by

Edith Wharton

in her new and amazingly frank story of Lizzie Hazeldean's sinning. Not asked you directly, but indirectly, in the way Mrs. Wharton tells the story of Lizzie. For after all, here is a woman—Lizzie Hazeldean—who sold her soul that Love might live.

Not a girl or woman in America can in justice to herself forego reading this vivid and penetrating story by America's foremost novelist—the author, you will recall, of "The Age of Innocence," which won the Pulitzer Prize as the greatest novel of its year of publication—the woman, moreover, whose name appears on every list of the greatest living American women.

In this story of Lizzie Hazeldean, which she calls "New Year's Day," Mrs. Wharton writes with all the unfettered frankness of France, where the story was actually written, even though it is concerned solely with New York society, which Mrs. Wharton knows better and more intimately than any other author. Superlatively fine as have been her other works of fiction, Mrs. Wharton's fame, it is prophesied, will, in the years to come, rest most securely upon this amazing story of

{OUR SIXTH ANNIVERSARY}

We signalize the opening of our enlarged display rooms at 2921-23-25-27 Locust Blvd. by the announcement of the new

HAYNES 60

$1295

F. O. B. FACTORY

Anticipating the advent of this new and most remarkable model of the Haynes, which heralds an era of greater value-giving in fine automobiles, we have arranged this opening to coincide with the introduction of the Haynes 60.

This increase in our facilities for displaying and servicing cars is thus much more than the result of six years' natural and deserved growth—it is a preparation for the still greater future, opened by the new era of value now inaugurated by the Haynes. It is a purposeful provision for the increased number of new Haynes owners who will certainly be attracted by this new policy of finer quality at a price hitherto considered impossible—the lowest price ever placed on a Haynes automobile.

The Haynes 60 is manufactured in six body styles as follows:

Model 60 Haynes Standard Touring, 5-pass.	$1295
Model 60 Haynes Standard Sedan, 5-pass.	2295
Model 60 Haynes Sport Touring, 5-pass. -	1750
Model 60 Haynes Sport Roadster, 2-pass. -	1695
Model 60 Haynes Sport Sedan, 5-pass. - -	2495
Model 60 Haynes Sport Brougham, 5-pass.	2195

Prices quoted are f. o. b. factory

By this enlargement of our faciliti Haynes owners, present and future, a assured of a still higher standard of se vice than that which we have alway endeavored to maintain. Here you wi find both exterior and interior advan tages contributing to your convenienc —a boulevard location, and an interi arrangement which provides for quic ness and efficiency.

Wilson Motor Car Company, by its officers, Mr. Ge A. Krauss, President, and Mr. H. C. Merry, Sales Man ager, extends to the people of St. Louis and vicinity cordial invitation to attend this celebration and lea at first hand the desirability of the newest Haynes a of its home in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA AND THE MOVIES

PART FIVE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 24, 1923. PAGES 1—12.

Crown of Operettas, "Die Fledermaus," Is This Week's Selection

Masterpiece of "The Waltz King," Johann Strauss, Opens Tomorrow Evening at Municipal Theater—"Prince of Pilsen" Ends Tonight.

THE most distinguished work in the season's repertory will be undertaken this week, beginning tomorrow night, at the Municipal Theater. It is "Die Fledermaus," an operetta by Johann Srauss, which admirers have declared to be his masterwork, and "the apex of all operettas." It is celebrated not only for its music—it has been said to contain enough melodies to furnish forth three operettas—but for its libretto, adapted by Richard Genee and Hafner from a three-act comedy, "Le Reveillon," by Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halevy.

The translation of the title is "The Bat," but of course has nothing to do with the popular mystery play of that name. The work was first produced on April 5, 1874, at Vienna; and its most recent St. Louis presentation was in 1912, at the Shubert Theater, with Fritzi Scheff in the leading feminine role.

Strauss had written two operettas, "Indigo" and "The Carnival in Rome," when a lucky whim of fate placed in his hands the thankful material on which "Die Fledermaus" is based. "Le Reveillon" ("The Midnight Supper") had been produced at Paris in 1872, with great success, partly due to the then bold device of bringing real viands, smoking hot, upon the stage in the banquet scene. Meilhac and Halevy, both of whom later became members of the French Academy, wrote the librettos for "Carmen" and "Barbe Bleue;" and likewise for Offenbach's "La Belle Helene" and "La Grande Duchesse." Together they wrote a popular comedy, "Frou Frou." Halevy will be remembered by all students of French as the author of "L'Abbe Constantin."

How Strauss Got the Libretto.

A VIENNESE manager purchased the production rights of the French comedy for that city; but later decided not to undertake it. He attempted in vain to dispose of it to another producer; and finally hit upon the idea of having it turned into a libretto for Johann Strauss. Genee and Haffner made what has been called the best libretto that had up to that time fallen into the hands of a German composer of operettas, and Strauss undertook the music with zest and satisfaction. It became the most popular work of the day; it had 250 performances in Vienna, 130 in Munich, and 170 in Hamburg.

According to the story, Gabriel von Eisenstein, a landed proprietor, must go to jail for a few days because he addressed a municipal guard as an "imbecile." His wife, Rosalinde, encounters a former suitor, Alfred, a tenor, and weakly consents to permit him to visit her as soon as her husband shall be under lock and key. Eisenstein doesn't have to go to jail until morning, and accepts an invitation brought by Dr. Falke, a notary, to attend a supper given by a rich young Russian, Prince Orlofsky. Eisenstein explains to his wife that he is going to jail to serve his sentence, and departs for the supper.

Alfred returns, and is making himself at home when the director of the prison and his bibulous turnkey arrive to arrest Eisenstein. They take Alfred for the husband, and he, in order to prevent Rosalinde from being compromised, voluntarily accompanies them to jail.

"The Bat's Vengeance."

THE fact is that Dr. Falke has arranged the supper both to amuse Prince Orlofsky and to avenge himself on Eisenstein for one of the latter's practical jokes. Falke and Eisenstein had attended a masked ball, at which Falke was disguised as a bat. Eisenstein made him drunk and placed him on a train, so that he had to return next morning and pass through the town in his bizarre costume. This is why the title is sometimes translated "The Bat's Vengeance."

Falke persuaded Rosalinde to go to the Prince's supper, wearing a mask. She flirts with her husband, who does not suspect her identity and is enchanted with his companion. By means of blandishments, she induces him to give her his watch.

The denoument occurs at the jail. Eisenstein comes to surrender himself, and finds that he is already supposed to be under arrest. He contrives to pose as an attorney, and draws from Alfred a recital of his visit to Rosalinde. Rosalinde also comes to the prison and is jealously upbraided by her husband, but she reduces him to silence by producing his watch. The husband is put in a cell, and the lover gains his freedom.

The roles have been assigned as follows: Eisenstein, Craig Campbell; Rosalinde, Miss Blanche Duffield; Frank, warden of the jail, Detmar Poppen; Prince Orlofsky, Miss Flavia Arcaro; Alfred, Roland Woodruff; Dr. Falke, Thomas Conkey; Dr. Blind, a lawyer, William J. McCarthy; Adele, Rosalinde's maid, Miss Dorothy Maynard; Frosch, a chorus girl, Miss Elva Magnus; and Melanie, another chorus girl, Miss Clara Schlief.

Critics have attributed to the music a "champagne effervescence," have declared that it "swims in pure joy." Edouard Hanslick wrote that the finale to the second act "belongs to the most fascinating operetta music which we possess." Strauss, in a ballet following the banquet scene in the second act, looses his inexhaustible invention in dance music—there is a czardas, a schottische, a Russian dance, a Spanish number, a Bohemian polka, and finally a waltz in authentic Viennese accents, into which the chorus is summoned.

A quarter of a century, lacking one year, has elapsed since Strauss died on July 3, 1899, having won the title of "The Waltz King," and a position as the greatest worker in the field of Viennese operetta. Another of his works, "Der Zigenunerbaron," will be presented at the Municipal Theater during the week of July 9.

The concluding performance of "The Prince of Pilsen" will be given tonight.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

Constance Talmadge has finished work in "Dulcy," her latest comedy for First National.

Jackie Coogan's latest picture, "Circus Days," is to be released by First National late in July. It is an adaptation of the famous circus story, "Toby Tyler," and offers the diminutive star one of his best roles.

As head of the all-star cast of John M. Stahl's new Louis B. Mayer, First National attraction, "The Wanters," Marie Prevost is said to have one of the most attractive roles of her career. Beginning the picture in the character of a maid, she soon develops into a society debutante—a jump that not only necessitates deft plot arrangement, but also calls for finesse and versatility in the young star.

Traveling 18 miles a day on horseback for a stretch of almost three weeks is just one of the things with which the Cosmopolitan company making "Unseeing Eyes," picturized from Arthur Stringer's popular story "Snow Blind," had to contend while on location in the Canadian Rockies. Some members of the company were rather inexperienced horsemen and suffered as a result from more than the cold. Scena Owen, who is featured with Lionel Barrymore in the film, was in her element, however. Miss Owen is an expert horsewoman. While working on the coast she owned her own horse and since she has come to New York she may be seen riding in Central Park early every morning.

Anita Stewart, Cosmopolitan leading woman, who recently finished "The Love Piker," has begun work in "Cain and Mabel," a picturization of H. C. Witwer's fight story.

Now that Harry Myers is cast as a newspaper publisher, in "The Printer's Devil," Wesley Barry's latest Warner Brothers production, he is tasting the woes and daily events that make a publisher's life a vale of tears. Harry's first bit is to receive a goat in payment for five years' subscription to his newly purchased pa-

Queenie Smith Stars in "Helen of Troy, N. Y."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 23.

THE business of satirizing business, utilized in "To the Ladies," is transferred to the musical comedy field in "Helen of Troy, N. Y." which opened Tuesday evening at the Selwyn. Kaufmann and Connelly, who wrote the book, seem to have determined that for once a musical show should be shown some new tricks. There was some strain in the effort to be original throughout, in situation and humor, but after the first half of the opening act the piece showed many signs of a potential hit.

There is a scanty plot, but one eliminating most of the old familiar situations. It is based on the romance of a collar-worker in a factory at Troy, the troubles of her little sister, and the sinister influence of an efficiency expert. The two acts are laid at the factory and at the studio of Baron de Cartier, a photographer.

This work should be the first big event in the career of Queenie Smith, dancer, pantomimist and comedienne, who grew up with the ballet at the Metropolitan Opera House. She hasn't the leading lady's part in the show, but virtually carries it. In adition to her finished dancing and remarkable aptitude for pantomime, a sense of the comic line must have been born in her.

In Charles Lawrence, as a collar advertisement idol, burlesqued into a priceless dumbbell, Miss Smith found a foil for all the racy picturesqueness she employs in using the American idiom. What a marvelous success Queenie Smith might have been as the Montague girl in "Merton!"

Tom Lewis, as the collar factory president, has the comic lead, and Helen Ford, in the title role, sings sweetly. The comic situations between Miss Smith and others of the company are superlative examples of smartness and finish in humorous dialogue.

Summer Edition of "The Follies."

THE summer edition of the Ziegfeld "Follies" will open Monday night at the New Amsterdam, with Ann Pennington, Eddie Cantor, Ina Marvenga and Gallagher and Shean as stars. On Thursday night, the gods permitting, Earl Carroll will offer his summer revue, "The Vanities of 1923," with Peggy Joyce and Joe Cook as the feature entertainers.

A complete surrender to the Actors' Equity Association was made by Carroll, who wrote to Equity Tuesday that applications for membership in that organization from most of the members of his "Vanities" were on the way, and that he would do his best to have an all-Equity company on the opening night. However, several of the chorus girls have declared they will not join Equity, and Carroll says he will not dismiss them. This complication may precipitate the whole trouble anew. Equity has withdrawn its pickets from the Earl Carroll Theater, and Carroll is said to have promised to reingage Ray Dooley, eight chorus girls and twelve chorus men who were dismissed.

It is reported that Daniel Frohman will re-enter the producing field with a new play called "The Bride," which has been tried out by an up-State stock company * * * New York's first season of open-air opera opened Wednesday night at the Polo grounds with "Aida." In the cast were Francesca Peralta, Carmela Ponselle, William Gustafson, Charles Bender, D. Imperanti, D. Ansolone, Grace White and O. Olivero. The orchestra and chorus numbered 300.

Percy Mackaye has signed contracts with Dr. Sergius Bertensson, business manager of the Moscow Art Theater, for production in Russia of his play, "The Scarecrow" * * * Julius Tannen will be a member of the cast of the "Ted Lewis Frolic." * * * Margolo Gillmore will enter the cast of "The Devil's Disciple" Monday night, replacing Lotus Robb, who is taking sick leave. Miss Robb was injured in an automobile accident before the play opened.

Revues Duplicated Scenes.

THE producers of Revues should form a liaison committee and thus avoid conflict when staging numbers which have their origin in the Folies Bergeres at Paris. Recently the "Passing Show of 1923" came to town at breakneck speed to beat George White's "Scandals" in opening. The Winter Garden revue had a great many charming things in it, particularly a "hall of mirrors" effect and an ensemble of the company at inclined tables with tiny lamps. Mr. White's revue had the same. If only the producers would agree on just what feature the respective company should borrow from Paris, this conflict would not occur.

The White revue also had a curtain studded with nudes as a finale for the first act. The program credited the Folies Bergeres with the novel idea. Hardly had the "Scandals" been shown out of town before Mr. Ziegfeld's office announced to the press that the re-made Ziegfeld "Follies" would have a curtain of nudes. This, said the press agent, was designed by Ben Ali Haggin, and was not suggested by the feature at Paris. Thus, it seems, when producers do not borrow Paris ideas, the long arm of coincidence contrives to duplicate results.

"The Scandals" has a scene which has been acclaimed the best for revealing lavish costumes. The set is a vast, purple velvet jewel case at the head of a broad stairway, between white columns. At the right of the stage is a jeweler's display counter. A youth and his fiancee (a tenor and soprano) are buying engagement tokens. The jeweler presents a solitaire, a tiara, a bracelet, a lavalliere, and a pearl necklace from the huge velvet case. Mr. White has culled fifteen magnificent

New England Drama and Two Crook Plays Are Local Offerings

Betty Compson, Blanche Sweet, Billie Dove, Louise Fazenda, Richard Dix and Buddy Messenger Among the Stars on View Here.

The film version of Charles Felton Pidgin's story of New England home folks, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," is offered this week at the Grand Central, Lyric Skydome, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters. The cast includes John Bowers, Blanche Sweet, Lon Chaney, Barbara La-Marr, Elmo Lincoln, Claire McDowell, Kate Lester, Louise Fazenda, Hank Mann, Victor Potel, Edward Donnelly, June Elvidge and many others.

An added attraction at all these theaters will be Buster Keaton's latest comedy, "The Frozen North," a picture which burlesques the arctic stories done in the James Oliver Curwood style.

The exclusive stage feature at the Grand Central is the appearance of Bartram & Saxton, vocalists. Dave Silverman, who continues as the guest-conductor, offers an especially arranged overture, "When 'Barney Google' Goes 'Swinging Down the Lane' with 'Bambaline,'" introducing in medley fashion those three popular selections.

For "Quincy Adams Sawyer," John Bowers is Quincy, the young Boston lawyer; Blanche Sweet is the blind girl heroine; Barbara LaMarr is Lindy Putnam, the small town vamp; Lon Chaney is Obadiah Strout, the plotting villain; Elmo Lincoln is Abner Stiles, the strong-backed weak-minded blacksmith; Hank Mann, Victor Potel, Louise Fazenda and Harry Depp have comedy roles. There are two spectacular leaps off cliffs on horseback by John Bowers.

Herbert Brenon's latest Paramount production, "The Woman With Four Faces," starring Betty Compson and Richard Dix, is the leading screen attraction at the Missouri this week. On the program also will be Sam Ash, tenor.

In "The Woman With Four Faces," Miss Compson is again seen in a characterization of a "lady raffles," a role which she made famous in "The Miracle Man." Richard Dix has the role of a district attorney trying to obtain evidence which will convict a ring of dope peddlers.

Some of the thrilling situations are a convict's escape by means of an airplane, a scene where Betty is tortured by a Japanese who employs jiu jitsu to learn from her the whereabouts of a document; a scene where a broken-hearted mother pleads with her wayward son to renounce narcotics and loses her life as a result; and a holdup by Betty, in which she makes a valuable haul only to be arrested.

"All the Brothers Were Valiant," the feature picture at the Delmonte this week, is a film version of a sea story by Ben Ames Williams.

The plot turns on the conflict between two brothers, Jack Shore, a captain of a whaling schooner, and Mark Shore, also a seaman. The disappearance of Mark has been an unsolved mystery, until one day he puts in an appearance, while the vessel is anchored off the island of Tubal. Mark tells a thrilling story, and suggests that Joel and he make a search for pearls which he had obtained during his disappearance, and hidden. Joel refuses, insisting that whaling is his business, and that he has promised the ship's owner to take no unnecessary risk with his craft. The enmity between the two brothers increases; word of the disagreement is brought to the crew; and even they take sides on the question of going for the pearls or sticking to whales.

The end of the picture shows a mutiny on board ship, with two brothers on opposing sides. The call of a notable and heroic family tradition brings both men together again—so that, in the Log of the House of Shore, their father is able to underscore the first word of "All the Brothers Were Valiant."

In the cast are Lon Chaney, Malcolm McGregor, Billie Dove, William Mong, Robert McKim, William H. Orlamond, Bob Kortman, Curt Rehfeld, and Leo Willis.

As an added attraction Pierre and Pagie, present pantomimic dance dramas.

"Trifling With Honor," a Universal special production, is the feature at the Rivoli Theater. It is the story of a reformed convict who becomes a baseball idol and of how he is kept from slipping back to crookdom by the faith of an idolizing youngster. This boy is the brother of his sweetheart, long lost. By refusing to throw a baseball series, despite threats of baring his past, the hero regains his self-respect and his lost sweetheart.

MAY BAN GERMAN ARMY DUELS

Reichstag to Act on Proposal Submitted by Dr. Bell.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 23.—Dueling in German army will no longer be morally necessary if the Reichstag commission on laws for military discipline adopts the proposal submitted by Dr. Johannes Bell, centrist and former cabinet member.

In the old days any officer who offended another was expected to render satisfaction according to the established code, should the offended one demand it. A cabinet order indirectly required that such a challenge be accepted, although the penal code forbade dueling. The authorities therefore were obliged to wink at the illegality of these engagements for the vindication of honor. Dr. Bell's recommendation would wipe out for the Reichswehr the old rule which pinned the badge of unworthiness on any commissioned military man who refused to meet a challenger.

PAYS OFF MORTGAGE WITH CAKE

BERLIN, June 23.—A Hamburg capitalist several years ago loaned 10,000 marks to a baker on a mortgage. The other day the capitalist, together with his wife, called to collect the debt. When the baker tried to pay off his obligation with a 10,000 mark note, now worth only about 7 cents, the woman laughed and suggested: "You'd better bake us a butter cake instead."

The baker hesitated, remarking that flour was a very expensive commodity, but finally consented to send his creditor a butter cake for Sunday dinner in payment of the mortgage.

TELLS WHY HE GAVE MILLION FOR CRIPPLES

W. H. Eustis of Minneapolis, Handicapped in Limbs Since He Was 15, Wants Children to Be Made Normal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 23.—To lessen the tragedy of crippled childhood, so impressed upon him by his own affliction since a youth, William Henry Eustis, former Mayor of Minneapolis, has set aside the bulk of his considerable fortune and made the University of Minnesota its trustee.

By an endowment of $1,000,000 to the State institution, which, as has been told, was accepted by the regents this week, Eustis, now nearly 80 years of age, hopes to live to see established on the university campus a free clinic and hospital where crippled children may, if possible, have their physical deformities corrected and thus be given a more nearly equal chance in life with other children.

The institution will be known as the Minnesota Hospital and Home for Crippled Children. In connection with it Eustis has donated a tract of land a few miles away from the university on which will be erected a convalescent home for the patients.

And on its part the university has engaged one of the foremost pediatrists of the world, Dr. Clemens Pirquet of Vienna, to be professor of pediatrics at the university.

Gift of 44-Acre Tract.

The land for the convalescent home, comprising 44 acres and valued at $100,000, becomes the property of the university at once. The $300,000 endowment fund becomes available on or before July 1, 1927. Eustis has protected this gift in his will in case of death prior to that time.

Eustis came to Minneapolis 40 years ago, practicing law and dealing in real estate. Since the age of 15 he had been handicapped by an affliction of his limbs, as the result of which he got about only with difficulty. But his was a cheerful, optimistic nature and in spite of his impediment he attained success in a business way and became a leader politically.

Was Mayor of Minneapolis.

In the nineties Eustis was elected mayor of Minneapolis and later he was the Republican nominee for the governorship, but was defeated. Following this he devoted his attention largely to his business interests and accumulated the fortune which he now has set aside for unfortunate children.

"I would like to have given the University $3,000,000 for this institution to work out the plan in every detail," said Eustis. "But it was impossible for me to do that, so I am giving what I can.

"For many years I have wanted to do something for the crippled children. You have seen them, little folks who haven't a chance to be anything in life, unless someone helps them; little fellows whose parents can't provide for them.

Handicapped Since He Was 15.

"I want to make my children's hospital a place where crippled children will be made over complete—where not only their bodies but their minds will be put in shape for life. I haven't any children of my own but I have always loved children. And I want to, I've got to, do something to help.

"I have been crippled since I was 15 years old. Perhaps if I had had the advantages which are possible today, I might have been normal physically. So many wonderful things are done today in such cases. So I thought that I would do what I could for others."

The University endowment will not be Eustis' first gift to crippled children. Recently he donated 21 acres of land to the city as a site for the Michael Dowling School for Crippled Children. This is a city institution, a part of the public school system, named in honor of Michael Dowling, for many years a country banker in Minnesota, who despite the fact that when a boy he lost both hands and feet through exposure in a blizzard, became a successful business man and leader in civic affairs.

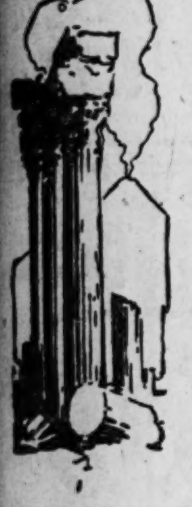
A Thousand Vacations in One

The Most Glorious Experience of a Lifetime

For gratifying a love of adventure in foreign lands—there is nothing to compare with

A Cruise Around the World

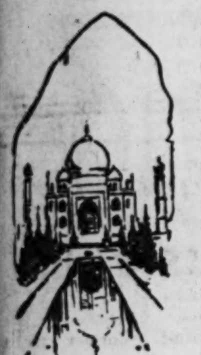


Life, as it has been lived for centuries—as it is lived today by strange people in strange lands—opens wide before you. Such a Cruise is a thousand vacations in one—more fascinating, more satisfying, than all other vacations put together.

A venturesome journey a few years ago, fraught with infinite question and questionable pleasure, except to the adventurer. Today, under the experienced management of the American Express Travel Department, a Cruise Around the World is luxuriously comfortable, wholly delightful, easily attainable; and at a cost little more than expense covering the same time at home.

All that is necessary is the desire to go, and a little personal anticipation and forethought in making arrangements as to time and expense.

The S. S. FRANCONIA, newest of the Cunard Liners, built especially for long distance cruising with all the luxuries of an exclusive club, has been chartered by the American Express Company for its next Cruise Around the World. Sailing from New York the 15th of November, the Cruise covers 30,000 miles—leisurely—in 133 days; returning to New York, March 27th, 1924.



Details, deck plan, prices and illustrated book of the Cruise are now ready. Secure this literature. Look it over carefully. It will fascinate you. See how easily all arrangements are made. Experienced travel representatives of the American Express will answer all your questions and give you every assistance in perfecting your plans

The perfect facilities of the American Express Travel Department, with its own offices and local representatives around the world to prepare the way, must convince you of its ability to carry out the idea as it should be carried out, and give you the most glorious experience of your life.

Get the full details now. The Franconia party will be limited—a party of unusual prominence assured.

vacation land

You'll find happiness and real fun here!

Plan to spend your vacation in Minnesota this Summer. It is the real vacation-land where nature has provided 10,000 cool, crystal-blue lakes, many of them bordered with sweet-scented pines, thick forests and a delightful climate to bring you happiness.

Come and camp at the edge of a lake, where you can catch nearly every variety of game fish—not just fish!—and spend weeks at a time exploring the rivers and lakes in a canoe. If you prefer a little cottage, or a fine summer resort hotel, you will find them aplenty and at moderate prices.

Minnesota's fine automobile roads are alluring as no others are, for there is always another lake ahead and you never tire of the shady turns and the flower-scented woods on every side. Start your fun at Minneapolis—it is the convenient way to reach everything else as well as having every vacation attraction itself.

We offer you a friendly service to guide and assist you so that you will do as hundreds of others do—come again!

Keeps Children's Hair Beautiful

Proper shampooing is what makes children's hair beautiful. It brings out all the real life and lustre, the natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Children's hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but fine young hair and tender scalps cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali, in ordinary soap, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why millions of discriminating mothers, everywhere, use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo.

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a four ounce bottle lasts for months.

girls for his jewels, and has costumed them in perfect taste to represent the items named by the jeweler. This smacks of the usual revue method of revealing pretty girls as jewels, or drinks, etc., but it certainly eclipses anything of the kind which has been done.

Schildkraut Quits Guild.

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT, who has been more or less temperamental since his success in "Liliom," is at outs with the Theater Guild, and has gone to California to the films despite the Guild's effort to restrain him by injunction. Schildkraut was scheduled for several new plays this fall, especially for a co-starring presentation of "King Lear" in which Rudolph Schildkraut, his father, was to play the title role. It is understood that he is now a free agent.

The sketches in the new revue are lamentably lacking in sprightliness, despite the fact that a producer stands ready to pay spot cash for the barest suggestion of cleverness. Fifteen minutes of aptly turned dialogue, a little good business and a sure fire "gag line" at the end, is worth about $2000 for anyone who can write it. Some of the better known playmakers refuse to sell, preferring to take a royalty of $100 per week as long as the show stands up.

Thus a sketch sold to the "Music Box Revue," for instance, may earn for its author in the neighborhood of $8000 before it is discarded. A young newspaperman last week suddenly hit upon an idea which he thought convertible into a hilarious set of stage pictures. He did not fancy working over it until perfected. The producers of the "Greenwich Village Follies" tendered him a check for $1000 for his idea, and he has sailed for abroad inwardly praying that he has another hunch before the fall rehearsals begin.

Song May Earn $300,000.

IRVING BERLIN, who ought to know, estimated the other day that "Yes, We Have No Bananas" will earn its author about $300,000 before the royalties cease. The song has catchy music, but the phrase itself is becoming a part of the current idiom with lightning rapidity. It is not unusual for the cashier of a bank to greet a prospective borrower with the phrase. It is being put to a thousand uses.

The other day a star reporter who had been attending a banquet where there were exceptionally good refreshments, came into the office with a bunch of bananas which he, gravely distributed to the staff. Eddie Cantor in the "Ziegfeld Follies" has the audience working with him in the number.

per. He is wondering if someone is going to give him an elephant for a life subscription.

Marion Davies' next picture, "Yolanda," will probably be filmed on the west coast. It is from the story by Charles Major, who wrote "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

Myrtle Stedman, who has just finished a leading role in the Goldwyn production of "Six Days," has been signed for an important role in "Dust in the Doorway," to be released by First National. In the all-star cast are William Collier Jr., Josef Swickard, J. Farrell MacDonald, Frederick Truesdell, Frankie Lee and Baby Bruce Guerin.

Wesley "Freckles" Barry may be small when it comes to age and size, but he has a five-man job all rolled in one in his latest Warner Brothers picture, "The Printer's Devil." "Freckles" is the chief engineer, janitor, reporter, assistant editor and printer's devil on the Briggsville Gazette.

A photoplay symphony will be written by Frederick S. Converse, noted composer, for Percy MacKaye's "The Scarecrow," starring Glenn Hunter, according to an announcement made by the Film Guild.

"Spec" Walter O'Donnell, a new film prodigy discovered on the Pacific coast, plays his first reel part in the Warner Brothers picturization of Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street."

Preparations are nearly complete for the starting of James Cruze's next Paramount picture, "Ruggles of Red Gap." The story has been adapted from Harry Leon Wilson's novel by Thomas J. Geraghty. Ernest Torrence, who had one of the important roles in "The Covered Wagon," has been assigned the leading character role of Cousin Egbert.

Pola Negri has changed her coiffure. She has worn her hair bobbed and usually with a band about her head ever since coming to this country, but in her forthcoming Paramount picture, "The Cheat," produced by George Fitzmaurice, she will wear it high on the head.

After five weeks in the wilds of the Tonto Basin, Arizona, the Paramount company making the Zane Grey production, "To the Last Man," has returned to the Lasky Studio at Hollywood. Featured in the cast of this picture under the direction of Victor Fleming are: Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery, Robert Edeson and Frank Campeau.

Walters Hiers is to return to Hollywood soon. For several weeks since the completion of "Fair Week" he has been making personal appearances in theaters in the East and Middle West in connection with the showing of another of his Paramount pictures, "Sixty Cents an Hour."

HAY FEVER and SUMMER ASTHMA

TO SLEEP TONIGHT

NOT THIS YEAR!

Those who habitually fear the approaching summer seaons with the dread of hay fever or summer asthma will welcome Raz-Mah. This summer it will not be necessary for many to seek relief in other climates. They can take their holidays for themselves or, if they wish, stay at home, without fear of again becoming victims of the distressing conditions associated with these complaints.

use RAZ-MAH Today

Raz-Mah is a tested treatment. It has brought 100% relief to thousands. It is manufactured for the sole purpose of alleviating these troubles.

You may have tried other things—you may think there is nothing left worth trying, but just give Raz-Mah a chance to prove you are wrong. If it fails your money will be refunded.

Raz-Mah is prepared in small capsules, easily swallowed. It contains no harmful, habit-forming drugs. Raz-Mah is taken as you need it and relief is surprisingly quick.

Then why go through another summer without at least getting yourself a $1 box as a tryout? Your druggist shoud have it or we will send you one C.O.D.

RADI

RADIO IN THE SCHOOL AND ITS POSSIBILITIES

Promises to Become an Important Factor in Educational Institutions.

BY GEN. J. G. HARBORD.

Radio classroom instruction which is being conducted in several of the high schools of New York by the Board of Education and the broadcast station of the Radio Corporation of America has met with unqualified success. One need but tap the ether to know what phase of civics, history and accountancy are being studied by pupils of New York's schools. All three, by their success, have deepened the conviction, in the minds of both the school and corporation authorities that the use of radio in education is not only possible but essential.

The installation of the receiving sets in the schools presents no difficulty; the broadcasting of the lessons from WJZ at Broadcast Central has been done with absolutely no confusion, delays, or unsatisfactory transmission. The success of the venture has opened new vistas as to the uses of radio, and inspires the prophecy that the time is not too far distant when radio lecture courses will be an integral factor of school curriculums.

Radio installations in the city schools will make possible a unity of instruction which is not possible at present. To the imaginative minds hosts of possibilities appear—interscholastic contests, with th problems of broadcast from a central station, reaching all schools a the same moment, allowing no hint of unfairness—lectures by visiting statesmen and educators who could not possibly give the benefit o their experience to more than one school without the use of radio, bu who could reach every school-chil in Greater New York by a fifteen minute appearance before a broadcasting microphone—instruction and routine reports from the Schoo Board to the various schools in out lying communities could be trans mitted with minimum effort an maximum speed at predetermine times every day. The list of possibilities increases momentarily, but enough has been said to show that radio would be more than a good investment in city schools—it will soon be regarded as indispensable.

All that applies to radio installation in city schools holds good with every greater force in the case of the rural schools, for isolation of the country schoolhouse is even today too great to allow the broad education afforded by city systems. With receiving sets installed in every rural school the country boy could hear important men who never visit the small town on their lectures, the figures of nation-wide importance in short, could get "in the swim" of current events.

Farmers are using the radio in receiving market reports to a truly remarkable extent. Should not their sons receive the benefits of educational broadcasting as well? New Improved Reinartz Circuit

Inventor Claims This New Hook-Up With One Stage of Audio Frequency Amplification Equal to Two Steps of the Usual Type.

The above circuit developed by J. L. Reinartz is claimed by its inventor to be so much better than the first one which bears his name, that he advises those now using the arrangement with spider-web coils, to give this new one a trial, according to F. D. Pearne in "Radio Programs."

Either the parts for a vario-coupler are obtained, or a new one having a tube of not more than 3½ inches in diameter is purchased and the wire removed. The rotor should be of sufficient size to accommodate 14 turns of No. 18 single silk insulated wire on each side.

The tube is wound with 40 turns of No. 18 cotton or silk insulated magnet wire. Starting from the bottom of the tube, taps are taken off at each turn for the first 10. These taps are connected to contact-points as shown in the diagram. The switch-arm which makes connection with them, is connected to the "ground" of the set.

After rewinding the rotor with the No. 18 wire, the terminals are brought out in the same manner as they were before the rotor was rewound. One terminal connects to the .0025 mfd. fixed condenser of the grid circuit as shown, and the other is connected to the upper end of the wire wound on the tube. The reconstructed vario-coupler acts as a tuning variometer.

This hook-up shows a detector and one stage of audio-frequency amplification. It will be noted that the plates of both tubes are connected to the aerial through variable condensers of different capacities.

The values of all the different parts are indicated with the exception of the choke coil, located between the detector tube, and the primary of the audio-frequency transformer.

This will be a matter of experiment for the particular set used, but in many cases the choke has been found unnecessary, if the tube is operated at the greatest brilliancy.

The insertion of this choke coil will make it possible to get results with the filament operating on less current, thereby saving the battery.

Note that the lower end of the secondary of the audio-frequency transformer is not connected, but left entirely open.

According to Reinartz, this circuit, with the one-step of audio frequency, is fully equal to two steps of audio amplification when the 23-plate condenser "A" is properly adjusted. If, however, the adjustment of this condenser is advanced too far, the set will howl, but by using lower values of capacity this may be eliminated.

Any standard make of three-element vacuum tube may be used. Obviously, the first tube is a "soft" or detector tube, and the second is an amplifier tube. Any audio frequency transformer will serve, but it should be the product of an established manufacturer, to assure satisfactory operation.

The grid condenser is of the fixed type, having a mica dielectric and capacity of .0025 mfd.

Variable condenser "R" has 43 plates. The fixed condenser in the grid circuit of the amplifying tube may have either .0025 or .003 mfd. as desired.

ACTIVE RADIO STATIONS TOTAL 595 ON JUNE 16

Four New Stations Licensed During First Two Weeks of Month.

There were 595 active radio broadcasting stations on June 16, according to the Department of Commerce records. Of these stations, 180 are in Class A, 42 in Class B, 372 in Class C, and one in the experimental class. A gain of four stations is shown over the survey made on the first of June.

During the past two weeks 16 stations stopped transmitting and failed to renew their licenses. One new B station, located at Zion, Ill., and eight new Class A broadcasters were licensed. Seven Class C stations, operating on 360 meters, were transferred to Class A with special wave lengths. One of the new A stations licensed is in Lihue, Hawaii, which brings the total broadcasters in Hawaii to four, the three others continuing as Class C stations.

The list of stations licensed in the past week follows:

CALL.	New Class A Stations.	Frequency Kcys.	Wave-Length Meters.	Power Watts.
KFHQ	Curtis Bros Hardware Store, Los Gatos, Cal.	1240	242	5

Any strain on the aerial that has become kinked will cause a break in a short time.

There is more danger of lightning coming in on the radio set than there is from lightning on telephone wires.

Radiograms.

Denmark is discussing the erection of a radio station in Greenland.

There are three broadcasting stations in Hawaii, and two in Porto Rico.

Microphones with amplifiers are being installed in hotels in Paris for paging guests.

In Germany, radio fans, most of whom are bankers and business men, must pay 500,000 marks annually for their radio broadcast service.

Queen Alexandra returned thanks to the British people for their greeting on the sixtieth anniversary of her wedding day through the radio broadcasting service.

Radio broadcasting stations in England operate on different wavelengths, the lowest being 369 meters and the highest 420 meters. Programs include stories for the children. Concerts and press dispatches are sent out daily.

Cuba has two broadcasting stations. They are located in Havana and Tuinucu.

Canary Isles Considering Radio.

Vice Consul Phelan, in the Canary Islands, reports active discussion in the Cabildo Insular de Teneriffe of a proposal to establish in the near future wireless telephone stations at the various islands of the Archipelago. The present cable service between the islands has been very inefficient and has given rise to the suggestion of using wireless telephony.

Wireless Phone, Ship to Shore.

The United Steamship Company of Copenhagen, Denmark, plans to install wireless telephone equipment on all boats plying between Copenhagen and the provincial harbors for the traveling public's convenience. Travelers will be able to secure direct communication, through the land telephone service, with their own homes or offices, similar to the service planned for the U. S. Ship Leviathan.

RADIO AS A FACTOR IN NEXT CAMPAIGN

Oratorical Upsets Predicted When Candidates Use New Medium to Reach Voters.

Already there is much speculation among politicians as to the part which radio will play as a campaign factor in future elections, more particularly in the Presidential contest next year. That many candidates and political speakers will broadcast their views, arguments and appeals through the little microphone which speaks to hundreds of thousands simultaneously is a foregone conclusion.

Ray T. Tucker in the New York Evening Post has been discussing the radio possibilities of some famous voices and he finds that certain public men whose oratory falls flat when they face an audience in a hall have certain qualities of clearness of voice and carrying power which make them show to much better advantage when talking over the radio.

Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, on the contrary suffers an almost complete oratorical eclipse when he tries to reach his hearers by the microphone route. In this he is quite the reverse of Mayor Hylan, who is an indifferent platform orator but who speaks over the radio with most telling effect.

The writer predicts that President Harding would make a tremendously effective broadcaster of political speeches while fiery reformers like La Follette, Borah and Hiram Johnson would fall flat. Experience, he says, has proved that good radio transmission is best achieved by cool, deliberate, straightforward, unhurried speakers with good enunciation. He concludes with this amusing and whimsical forecast which may have in it more than the traditional grain of truth:

In view of all this, it is not difficult to imagine the following scene in 1924 at Chicago or some other convention city:

In the midst of a discussion of candidates a hard-boiled, practical politician from, say, New York, drops the following suggestions:

"I'll admit that Jones is a fine candidate, a good organization man, and right on most of the questions at issue. But he doesn't radio well. This campaign will be fought over the radio. In 1920 there were about 52,000 homes in this country equipped with radio outfits. A year ago, in May, 1923, estimates were that 5,000,000 homes had them. When a presidential candidate speaks all the neighbors are gonna flock into those 5,000,000 homes.

"You're gonna have at least 25,000,000 people, many of them voters, getting their impressions of our candidate over the radio. It'll be more than that, because the radio has become even more popular than it was last year. You can't afford to disregard that vote, especially when we want to conduct a front porch campaign. Nominate Jones and you'll alienate that great body of voters right away. Now, my man goes fine over the wireless. He isn't much of a candidate other ways, but he'll pull the whole radio vote with him from the start."

The New York man's candidate was nominated and elected—by radio.

Automatic Transmission and Reception in the Navy.

During the last ten years, commercial companies have developed automatic printing telegraph equipment for the transmission over land wires of typewritten characters from one point to another. The present means of copying signals with the tape requires the employment of two or three extra men for translating purposes. Due to the reduction in operating personnel in the Naval Service, it became imperative to devise means to operate stations with reduced personnel. Experiments conducted in 1922 prove conclusively that automatic printing equipment could be applied to radio as well as to land wire. So much faith was placed in this new method of transmission and reception that automatic recording telegraph equipment has been installed in naval high power circuits at San Diego and Washington.

A Good Ground.

A wire from the front of the house to a pipe in the rear will not make so good a ground as a wire down the side of the house attached at a place where the water pipe enters the house.

MOVING PICTURES VIA RADIO IN NEAR FUTURE

Successful Experiments Recently Conducted in Washington, D. C.

The near future will see the perfection of radio movies; essentially, they are here today. Every "listener-in," with the aid of a special apparatus, contained in a box about a foot square, and small curtans, will be able to see as well as hear over the versatile radio, according to C. Francis Jenkins of this city.

Last week, Prof. Jenkins, who has previously demonstrated the transmission of still pictures by radio, showed on a screen in his laboratory the movements of his hand and other objects held in front of his radio transmitting apparatus in another room. The apparatus used in transmitting still pictures was employed in the last experiment, but a new "lens-faced prismatic ring" was introduced to show a rapid succession of pictures depicting movement.

Perfection of the moving picture radio transmitting set now awaits only the manufacture of a new and more powerful electric lamp of the "corona-glow" type. In the recent demonstration a temporary lamp was made by the inventor, but it is not strong enough to transmit large pictures. The question of rapidity is solved, Mr. Jenkins says, as he has already sent pictures at twice the standard movie speed. What he needs is a better and stronger lamp which will stand up when the signal strength is increased about 3000 times, as is necessary in sending pictures in motion.

Not only actual pictures of moving bodies can be transmitted, by pointing the machine at them, but films can be broadcasted, Mr. Jenkins claims and shown on screens in theaters or homes where proper receiving and reproducing apparatus and a screen are available. When the power of the light is raised the size of the picture can be increased, it was explained.

Radio experts of the Navy, who saw the first demonstration between two rooms of Mr. Jenkins' laboratory on Connecticut avenue, say that the invention is adaptable in military operations as well as in commercial fields. They point out that a transmitter used in an airplane over the enemy fleet or trenches, would give officers far in the rear an actual view of the fall of shells and all front-line activities. In the commercial field, with some adaptations, moving picture distributors might transmit their films to subscribers via radio instead of by exrpess, saving time and the making of many copies.

With the completion of his new lamp, probably not sooner than several weeks, Mr. Jenkins promises to give a long distance demonstration, transmitting pictures of objects in motion and perhaps films, between Washington and probably Philadelphia.

For the Notebook.

Tubes should always be well set in the tube sockets.

A sewing machine motor when in operation may create noises in a radio set.

The average life of a standard "B" battery is about nine months.

A variometer and a variable condenser make an easily operated set for beginners.

In damp weather, if reception is not so good as usual, it may be due to faulty aerial insulation.

In tuning in stations on a regenerative set it is necessary to first pick up the carrier wave.

Vario-couplers and variometers are so cheap now that it hardly pays to make them.

From time to time the aerial should be lowered, and the insulators should be cleaned off, to avoid leakage.

Audions even of the same make, require different plate voltage for best operation. Therefore, it is a good plan to experiment.

Much of the troublesome "static" can be avoided during the summeer months if the right circuit is employed and the aerial shortened.

Argentina Radio Manufacturer Bankrupt.

The largest manufacturer of radio telephone and telegraph apparatus in Argentine has applied for receivership, according to advices reaching the Department of Commerce. The financial difficulties of this company are due, it is said, to intense competition existing in the Argentine market, which resulted in considerable price cutting.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Sender.

Q. Please tell me why I cannot hear distant broadcasting stations. I heard them up until a few weeks ago. My set is of the regenerative type connected to a two-stage audio-frequency amplifier. All the batteries are new. C. G. N.

A. Long distance reception in the summer time without several stages of radio-frenquency amplification is practically impossible. Even then, it is comparatively unsatisfactory.

Q. (1) What is the wave length range of a set using the Erla reflex circuit? (2) Could the 43-plate variable condenser be connected in the ground lead with a series-parallel switch instead of in series with the aerial? What would be the wave length range with the last named arrangement? (3) Will a UV-199 tube fit in a "peanut" tube socket? E. C.

A. (1) The circuit used does not determine the wavelength range but the size of the aerial and the tuning inductions, and in the case of a loop, the amount of wire and the capacity of the condenser connected in shunt.. (2) Yes. The same effect is obtained whether the condenser is connected in series with the antenna or ground. The wave length range is largely dependent upon other factors than the position in the circuit of the variable condenser. (3) No.

Q. (1) Is a UV-201-A tube adaptable for use in a Reinartz set? (2) If an aerial is grounded to the gas pipes and lightning should strike, is it dangerious? R. F.

A. (1) Yes. (2) Yes, decidedly dangerous. A "ground" connection should never be made to gas pipes.

Q. Please tell me how to make a loose-coupler. V. C.

A. Send 5 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., requesting Bureau of Standards Circular No. 121 which deals with the construction of a simple two-circuit receiving set.

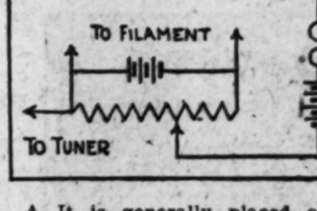
Q. (1) What is the best all around circuit outside of the super-regenerative? (2) Will future radio sets be simpler or more complicated than the ones on the market today? D. H.

A. (1) This is entirely a matter of personal opinion. (2) The tendency is to simplification.

Q. (1) Which socket is the most efficient, the one having a metal shell, or thetype model of bakelite? (2) Does the kind of circuit employed determine whether or not a tube is "critical"? (3) What resistance should a rheostat have in order to safely operate a UV199 tube with a 4½-volt dry cell? E. J.

A. (1) There is no difference. (2) No. Soft tubes (those having a low degree of vacuity) are said to be "critical" because they require fine adjustment of the filament current for efficient operation. This close variation is best obtained by means of a vernier rheostat. (3) Thirty ohms.

Q. Please print a diagram showing the connections for a potentiometer. F. M. N.



A. It is generally placed across the filament battery as shown in the above diagram. The purpose of a potentiometer is to permit close adjustment of the plate circuit battery potential when gas content vacuum tubes are used. The .02 amperes consumed by a potentiometer is negligable.

Q. Would it be possible to add one or two stages of radio and audio frequency to the portable set described on the Post-Dispatch June 3? J. L.

A. The GGrimes three-tube reflex circuit appears in the Post-Dispatch March 25. It is very similar to the hook-up employed in the portable set, except that two arritional tubes are employed.

Q. Are storage "B" batteries as good as unit dry cell "B" batteries? If so, which would be cheaper and best in the long run to use in a portable set such as the one described in the Post-Dispatch of June 3? C. C. M.

A. Most radio enthusiasts consider storage batteries preferable in all cases, even for supplying the plate current, although they are somewhat more expensive. They are not to be compared with dry cells, for use in portable sets, however, as recharging would become quite a problem, not to mention their bulk, and the great risk of spilling the acid electrolyte. We would strongly advise dry batteries for portable use.

Q. (1) Will a cage type antenna connected by a 35-foot lead-in give sufficient results? (2) Does a vernier rheostat improve the operation of a receiving set? (3) Does static injure the detector or headphones? (4) In shielding a set, is the ground the only connection made to the shield? S. E. D.

A. (1) You did not specify the height, but it is probable that a loading coil will be necessary in order to hear broadcasting stations operating on the longer wavelengths. (2) It permits much finer control of the "A" battery and, consequently, in many cases, finer tuning. (3) Heavy static will kill the sensitive points of a crystal detector connected in the circuit with an outdoor aerial. Very severe charges would more than likely ruin headphones connected in the circuit. (4) Yes.

Q. Could a 45-volt storage battery and a 22½-volt dry cell battery be connected in series? R. T.

A. Yes, but be sure to remove the dry battery from the circuit as soon as it becomes exhausted.

MONITOR CONTROL AND ITS USE IN THE NAVY

Messages Received at a Distant Point and Relayed to Headquarters.

The question of what Monitor Control is, seems to be worrying a number of radio fans, who try to keep abreast of the rapidly advancing art of radio communication.

Most of them know what remote control is, the expression itself practically indicating the method of operating a distant transmitter by land lines.

Monitor control is a similar method of receiving at a station removed from local electrical interference, and transmitting the signals by land lines to the central office. A radio engineer or expert radio man stands watch in the distant receiving station and sees to it that the receiving sets are tuned in and functioning properly during the reception of a message.

The navy monitor control system now used at San Francisco, San Diego and at Radio Central in Washington, is a refinement of duplex operation. Three units, instead of one, are operated; the transmitting station, the monitor receiving station and the control or central operating office. This system is employed in the interest of efficient administration, rapidity of service and elimination of errors due to land wire relays, all activities being controlled at administrative headquarters or central office. Headquarters are frequently located where there would be interference from electric power lines or unfavorable atmospheric conditions for radio reception.

To overcome these difficulties, a monitor collecting or receiving station is established at a place free from all electrical disturbance. Signals are there received on overhead antenna or loops, and are impinged through suitable coils, on land wire loops, called "tone channels" composed of two land wire circuits between the administration station, where the signals are transferred through suitable coils to the operator's head phones. By this method, operators are relieved of all functions except operating.

A large number of messages for simultaneous transmission and reception, including duplexing, can be handled at the same time from administration headquarters. At San Diego, the Monitor station is located at Point Loma, eight miles from district headquarters. All incoming signals are monitored from Point Loma to headquarters. All outgoing signals are sent from headquarters, the operator at headquarters controlling the transmitting key at the high-power transmitting station at Chollas Heights, 12 miles from San Diego by land wire.

The monitor station is located on the roof of the Navy Department in Washington, as little electrical interefrence in that part of the city is found.

Loop Antenna for Receiving.

One of the good effects of the new broadcasting craze has been to bring to attention the great interference problems which exist, naval experts say. The loop antenna has been brought into great prominence for receiving purposes, as a means available for avoiding interference. Practically unlimited receiving ranges are possible with the loop when sufficient radio frequency amplification is used. One frequently reads of the enormous distances obtained on loops, even as small as two feet in diameter. It is conceivable that all receiving may be done on loops in the near future. Some of the advantages claimed for the loop are: Sharp tuning, wide range of frequencies available in a single coil, one tuning adjustment, directive effect, easy portability and replacement, small space occupied, and little reradiative effect when regeneration is used.

To Stop Howling.

Shield the back of the panel with a thin sheet of tin foil or metal soldering a connection with it to the ground. Every joint in the wiring should be soldered. Make sure that the switch points and arms are not loose. Much unnecessary noise may be eliminated in this manner.

BIG ORDERS FOR LOCOMOTIVES

In First Five Months of Year, 1598 Had Been Contracted For.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 23.—"Thus far in the year 1923," says the Railway Age, "the railways have not ordered as many new freight cars as in the same part of 1922, but they have ordered a much larger number of new locomotives. In the first five months of 1923 the number of new locomotives ordered was 1598, as compared with only 480 in the same months of 1922. Additional orders placed in the first two weeks of June increased the total number of locomotives ordered up to that time to 1684. The number ordered in the entire year 1922 was 2600, which shows that two-thirds as many were ordered in less than one-half of the present year than in all of last year.

"The number of freight cars ordered in the first five months of this year was 56,699, as compared with over 77,000 in the same months of last year. Up to the middle of June total orders of freight cars were 67,209. The number of passenger cars ordered in the first five months of this year was 1250, as compared with 1195 in the same months of last year, and up to the second week in June the number of passenger cars ordered was 1300."

Total	$833.07

The Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies Milk Fund is growing slowly. Returns from a show, the profits of a lemonade stand and a cash donation of $50 from Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe B. Thomas of 4011A Shaw avenue, added $60.70 to the fund during the last three days. The total sum in the fund is now $883.07.

Margaret and Paula Schneider of 2024 Russell avenue managed the benefit show at their home last Monday evening. With the assistance of Genevieve and Marjorie Molt, their guests from Shreveport, La., and their playmate, Virginia Strandberg, they gave a miscellaneous program of dances, readings and musical numbers, followed by a refreshment sale. The affair netted $10.20.

A lemonade stand in the 5100 block of Westminster avenue under the management of neighborhood children cleared 50 cents for the Ice Fund.

138TH INFANTRY TO HOLD REGIMENTAL "SHOOT" TODAY

Picked Teams From Each Company to Compete for Trophies at Range Near St. Charles.

A regimental "shoot" will be held today by the 138th Infantry at the rifle range near St. Charles, when picked teams from each company contest for cups and other trophies. A cup will also be awarded the high individual marksman.

The "shoot" is one of several being held to select men to try for the team which will represent Missouri at the national rifle matches at Camp Perry, O., in September.

The 138th opened a downtown recruiting office last week at 221 North Tenth street, in its campaign to recruit the regiment up to full peacetime strength for the annual encampment at Nevada, Mo., July 15 to 29. The camp program calls for maneuvers and military instructions each morning, and athletic sports and games in the afternoons. Members of all units attending will receive full army pay, in addition to having their expenses paid.

HEAD OF SMALLEST ORCHESTRA IN FRANCE NOW LEADS GREATEST

Fame of Paul Paray's Little Band of Musicians Reached Ears of Noted Director.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 23.—Paul Paray, recenty elected conductor of the Lamoureux Orchestra, went in one week from the head of the smallest to the leadership of the greatest musical organization in France. Paray, who was studying in Rome under the Prix de Rome scholarship in 1914, spent a considerable part of the wartime period in German prison camps. He returned to Paris after the armistice and the best work he could find was intermittent playing of his violin in cafes. He then organized a small orchestra, recruited from among unemployed musicians and played for just about enough to keep body and soul together at a casino in the Alps.

Though handicaps in many ways, Paray made his little orchestra heard, its renown eventually reaching the ears of Chevillard, long leader of the Lamoureux orchestra. He sent for Paray and offered him the opportunity of leading the large orchestra that night. The young man was greatly surprised, but gladly accepted. He conducted the orchestra with such success that the next day he was made assistant to Chevillard and on the death of the famous leader was chosen as his successor. Paray is much younger than most of his men, but already he is recognized as one of France's most capable conductors.

"The Brouette"

IMPROVED FOUR DOOR BROUGHAM

First of the Master Models

IN 1918 the Cole two-door short coupled Sedan Brougham was built; followed one year later by the four-door Brougham.

Today we announce, for the first time, a decided improvement over the conventional four-door enclosed type.

—the new Cole Brouette

—first of the Master Models.

Just a little lighter, just a little easier to handle, just a little more luxurious and beautiful, this most recent example of the coach builder's art satisfies completely the new public demand.

BUYS RICKENBACKERS AFTER UNIQUE TEST

Advertising Man Orders Two Cars From Diesing Co., After Trying Twenty-Nine Makes.

Donley D. Lukens, head of Donley D. Lukens and Associates, advertising specialists, decided to purchase two cars for business purposes. He wanted to use one and to have Carlyle Emery, writer of daily newspaper features, and a stockholder in an automobile company, not the Rickenbacker, use the other. Last week after making the decision to purchase, Lukens got in touch with 28 different dealers, but not with the Diesing Motor Sales Co., Rickenbacker distributors.

However, M. O. Sorrells, retail sales manager for Diesing, and W. E. Short, a salesman for the same company, saw a bunch of cars in front of Lukens headquarters on Laclede avenue. They went in, found out that Lukens was testing out cars, and persuaded him to try theirs. Lukens tells of the results this way: "I tried 29 cars, putting them all through a test of my own and not one of them would do what the Rickenbacker did. Emery, my associate, agreed with me as to the performance of the Rickenbacker, and so we bought two of them for delivery at once."

Since buying the Rickenbackers, Lukens has sent two more purchasers to the Diesing Motor Sales Co., who took the same car. Lukens is a son of Dr. C. DeWitt Lukens, president of the Vandeventer Trust Co.

"Jim" Ward, manager of the Diesing Motor Sales Co., in talking of the Lukens sale, pointed out the fact that Rickenbacker cars are becoming mighty familiar to St. Louisans. "There are a large number on the streets here, he said, and the way we are selling them, Rickenbackers will before long be right up at the top of the list in St. Louis owned cars."

Ward also called attention to the strength of the Rickenbacker organization, stating that financially it is in wonderful condition as shown by its last statement.

"The Diesing Motor Sales Co.," he said, "is one of the strongest automobile distributors in St. Louis financially, just as the Rickenbacker factory is one of the strongest manufacturers.

"To show what we are doing, we have just put in a new, complete parts department, and our service station is completely equipped to handle the needs of Rickenbacker owners. We have been selling cars rapidly, not only new Rickenbackers, but trade-ins and have reduced our used car stock in three months from somewhere around $40,000 to about one-fourth that amount."

C. W. BECK BUYS FIRST OF PACKARD "EIGHTS"

C. W. Beck & Co., purchased the first Packard Straight Eight to arrive in St. Louis. Beck gets the Sedan that has been on exhibition in the salesroom of the Berry Motor Car Co., 22nd and Locust. Many other sales of Packard Straight Eights are reported by G. M. Berry, president of the company.

WILLYS-OVERLAND BIRTHDAY OBSERVED

On Tuesday, June 12, the Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo, Ohio, produced its one millionth car and this car bearing serial number 1,000,000, marking as it does a significant event in the annals of one of the world's largest automobile industries, was given official recognition by all Willys-Overland branches, distributors and dealers throughout the United States during the past week. The week was set aside by President John N. Willys as Jubilee Week when celebrations were carried out in every section of the country.

The creation of the one millionth car is conducive to some retrospection. The original Overland was designed and built in Terre Haute, Ind., in 1901 by Claude E. Fox a youthful graduate of Rose Polytechnic Institute. The car proved to be an innovation due chiefly to the fact that the motor was placed over the front axle instead of being placed under the seat as were the engines in all other cars being made at that time, the designer insisting that the location over the front axle was the logical place and asserting that in time all manufacturers would recognize the advisibility of it. Another decided improvement that the Overland had over other cars of that period was the seating arrangement. Early models of the car came out with the entrance to the rear seat from the side, while the entrance to the rear seat on other makes was from the rear. The Overland was also the first car to adopt the four doors now universally used.

"BILL" JOHNSTON DRIVES A BUICK

To the list of pre-eminent athletes who own Buick cars, has been added the name of "Bill" Johnston, the California idol, who recently captured the tennis title of France to supplement his long string of achievements.

"Little Bill," as he is affectionately known by devotees of the net and racket, drives a Buick touring sedan, presented to him by friends in appreciation of the wonderful work he did in his last invasion of the East.

Gene Sarazen of the golf links, Jimmy Murphy of the race track, 26 leading major league baseball players, are among those who own Buick cars.

PRESIDENT'S PARTY RIDE IN CADILLACS

Seventy-five Model 61 Cadillacs, all touring cars with the top down, made up the parade of cars, used by President Harding and his party when in St. Louis Thursday.

All decorations and the getting together of cars for the event, were handled by J. James MacGregor, president of Cadillac Automobile Co., of St. Louis.

That the Cadillac Co., was able to get together so many cars of one type is especially interetsing.

All of the visitors and all St. Louisans accompanying them in Thursday's visit of the President to the city rode in cars exactly alike.

Canadian registrations have passed the half million mark. Reports earlier in the year from the Dominion gave registration as 499,000. The latest figures from the Ministry of Trade and Commerce, however, show that the total has reached 514,000.

USED CAR WEEK ENDS MANY CARS ARE SOLD

Dealers Report Red Tag Sale a Success—Many Contend for Post-Dispatch Cup.

St. Louis automobile dealers have reported a decided success for Used Car Week, Red Tag Sale, which closes at midnight tonight. Hundreds of used cars have been sold, ranging in price from the older models of small cars, at $75 or thereabouts, up to the highest-priced types of reconditioned machines.

Many dealers have been lavish in their praise of the Post-iDspatch for promoting the week and many new owners are thankful for the campaign which has enabled them to own cars economically.

There are several contenders for the Post-Dispatch cup which will go to the St. Louis firm, which has made the best showing during the eight-day sale. A system of scoring points has been arranged for contenders for the trophy, based on number of cars sold and prices paid.

The Judges are H. F. Fahrenkrog, president, and Capt. Robert E. Lee, secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, and Walter B. Weisenburger, president of the Advertising Club of St. Louis and secretary to the president of the National Bank of Commerce.

The fine touring weather of the past few days, the fact that June is probably the best month of the year for used car sales and the prices on cars and sales efforts by dealers, coupled with the Post-Dispatch promotion, have according to prominent dealers been responsible for the success of the week.

Many dealers will continue their reduced prices on the cars that are left for the coming week in order to give prospective owners a further chance to make big savings on machines.

Bay State Big Bus Business.

The extensive operation of motor busses in Eastern Massachusetts is forecast by the granting by the State Department of Public Works to the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. the right to "acquire, own and operate motor vehicles not running upon rails or tracks for the transportation of passengers in a total of 71 specified cities and towns in the eastern counties of the commonwealth." This permission was granted dependent upon the company obtaining licenses from the various cities and towns in question.

The Mark of JORDAN Service

EFFECTIVE May 15th, every Jordan car which has satisfactorily served a Jordan owner and is offered for resale to the public will bear the Mark of Jordan Service.

This is a protected plate, authorized only by the Jordan Company after compliance by the dealer with certain standard regulations.

The Mark of Jordan Service, guarantees to the purchaser that the car on which it appears has been rebuilt in accordance with the national standard Jordan policy, to which every Jordan dealer has subscribed.

The Mark of Jordan Service means that you may purchase any Jordan car, offered for resale with the same assurance with which you would purchase a new Jordan.

Every rebuilt car bearing the Mark of Jordan Service will be priced and advertised in accordance with the standard Jordan policy in every city in which Jordan cars are sold.

This national policy will be permanent and will be widely advertised.

It will protect Jordan owners against imposition and guard the public against deception.

It will relieve dealers in other lines of the task of determining what prices should be placed on Jordan cars.

Prices on all Jordan models offered for resale in any zone will be nationally announced by the Jordan Motor Car Company at regular intervals. First announcement next week.

The Jordan car has the highest resale valuation of any car in its class.

You may buy with confidence.

TIRES WITH 500 NAIL HOLES LEAK NO AIR

Mr. R. Milburn of Chicago has invented a new puncture-proof inner tube, which, in actual test, was punctured 500 times without the loss of any air. Increase your mileage from 10,000 to 12,000 miles without removing this wonderful tube from the wheel, and the beauty of it all is that this new puncture-proof tube costs no more than the ordinary tube, and makes riding a real pleasure. You can write Mr. R. Milburn at 332 West 47th st., Chicago, as he wants them introduced everywhere. Wonderful opportunity for agents. If interested write him today.

MERKLE HITS AFTER GETTING A CHANDLER

When the baseball fans of Rochester, N. Y., presented an automobile to the captain of their league-leading club, they chose a car powered by a motor that was "Built to Master a Mountain," to the man who is master batsman of the International League.

Capt. Fred Merkle, the former New York National League baseball star, is the idol of Rochester fans, who have dubbed him "Uncle Fred."

Just before a recent game with Buffalo, a glittering green Chandler four-passenger Royal Dispatch was driven to the home plate. Mayor Clarence D. Van Zandt presented the car to Merkle in behalf of the fans.

With the car Merkle received a membership in the Automobile Club of Rochester, insurance policies covering fire and liability, a set of license plate holders, and a book containing testimonial letters. "Uncle Fred" is a man who believes in deeds rather than words. To show his appreciation he stepped up to the plate and smote the first ball pitched for a clean single to center. It was the twenty-fourth consecutive game in which he made one or more safe hits.

FRANKLIN STARTS WEDNESDAY TESTS

Cross-Country Demonstrations to Be Made Weekly—First Trip to Jefferson City.

A new demonstration plan has been inaugurated by the Franklin Motor Car Co., 2217 Locust street, St. Louis. This plan is an all-day demonstration, called "The Wednesday Special."

A. S. Lyndon, sales manager of the Franklin concern, has made arrangements to take four prospective buyers out each Wednesday and show them how the car performs.

Last Wednesday, with the top up and Lyndon at the wheel and four newspaper men as passengers, a trip was made to Jefferson City under some of the worst road conditions imaginable. Rain had left the Northern route, which is composed in part of State highways 2, 9 and 15, in a rough state.

Nevertheless, the Franklin stock car demonstrator, which had previously been driven 2503 miles made the remarkable time of four hours flat for the trip of 139.5 miles, an average of 34.9 miles per hour. The last 23 miles of the trip were made through sticky gumbo mud, it having rained the day previous between Fulton and Jefferson City.

It is most interesting to note the statistics on the trip. The start was made from 6500 Easton avenue, at 5:50 a. m., the gas tank having been filled to its capacity. St. Charles, a distance of 13.4 miles, was reached in 20 minutes. At the end of the first hour 36.1 miles had been covered. Wright City, a distance of 52.2 miles, was reached in one hour and 18 minutes. Wright City to Jonesburg, 19.3 miles, was covered in 40 minutes. Here were encountered several stretches of the worst road on the trip.

At the end of the scond hour's run 72.2 miles had been covered. Mineola, a distance of 88 miles, was reached in 2 hours and 24 minutes; Williamsburg, 96.1 miles, in 2 hours and 33 minutes. The hundred-mile mark was made in 2 hours and 36 minutes and by the end of the third hour the car had covered 112.6 miles. Fulton, 113 miles, was reached in 3 hours and 2 minutes, for an average of 37.5 miles per hour.

From Fulton the car struck the wet gumbo mud which made mighty tough going.

The car held the road in remarkable shape, getting into Jefferson City in an even four hours, with a gas consumption of nine gallons.

The second lap of the demonstration from Jefferson City back to St. Louis, was started at a quarter of 1, the return trip being made over the Capital highway. This is one of the most picturesque drives in the State. The winding road carries you through shady lanes to the hill tops. In the valleys are little towns and hamlets.

Half a dozen stops were made on the return trip, several times to view the beautiful scenery and four times to make minor repairs on cars of tourists that had become stalled.

Another remarkable feature of the test run was that the Franklin, having been put through the grueling test of the morning, never faltered once in the whole trip of almost 300 miles, while other cars were stalled by the roadside. At night when St. Louis was reached the motor sounded as smooth as it had that morning when the start was made.

The return trip of 154.5 miles was made in 6 hours nad 5 minutes actual running time. The gas consumption was 9¼ gallons, an average of 16.702 per mile. Those familiar with the Capital highway route to Jefferson City know that level stretches over this route are very conspicuous by their absence.

Next week, according to Lyndon, it is planned to make the run to Cape Girardeau, following the same plan of a time test on the down trip and a gas test on the return trip.

C. W. NASH PRESENTS STADIUM TO EMPLOYES

A new baseball stadium and athletic field, declared to be the finest semipro baseball plant in the country, has been presented by C. W. Nash to employes of the Nash Motors Co. And as a fitting touch to the dedicatory ceremonies the Nash baseball team was victorious over its opponents on opening day of the park.

"There is no question in my mind," said Mr. Nash, "but that clean sports should be encouraged by a business organization. I am firmly convinced that athletics have their place in business for, as we know, all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Just after the opening game started Mr. Nash made several hundred small boys happy by going to the gates himself and inviting them in to see the game.

The Nash baseball team which won four out of the first five games they played this season in the Mid-West League, is composed of men who previously had won their laurels elsewhere, most of them having been drafted from the major leagues. All of them, however, are employed in the big Nash factories and when not on the diamond are engaged in the intricacies of motor car manufacture.

ANDERSON ANNOUNCES SPORT TOURING CAR

With the demand for sport models growing larger every day, the Anderson Motor Co. has chosen a particularly opportune time to announce the addition of a sport touring car to its regular line.

Built on the famous Anderson aluminum six chassis, whose units include such universally known parts as the six-cylinder Red Seal Continental motor, Westinghouse starting, lighting and ignition, Borg and Beck clutch and others of similar quality, this model has many new features in addition to those found in the regular Anderson touring car.

The body, which is coachbuilt in Anderson's own shops, is Luxor green with dark green disc wheels and black mudguards. The upholstery is of special green leather to harmonize with the general color scheme. A nickel-plated radiator with a German silver shell, nickel-plated windshield with side wings, and nickel-plated head lamps and cowl lamps add to the dashing appearance of the car. The sporty appearance is further enhanced by a trunk fitted with two suitcases, mounted on five aluminum bars on the rear.

"NEW HAYNES" ORDERS SWAMPING THE FACTORY

Telegrams and letters from Haynes distributors and dealers everywhere, declaring that the Haynes Model 60 Standard touring car at $1295 is the greatest value ever placed before the motor-buying public, have been swamping the desk of Gilbert U. Radoye, director of sales and advertising for the Haynes Automobile Co., Kokomo, Ind., who was in the city during the past week visiting the Wilson Motor Car Co.

Orders for the new model 60 began to pour in immediately after the announcement was wired to the Haynes selling organization.

"Ship up 150 Haynes 60 Standard touring cars at once," came a telegram from Triangle Motors, Inc., Haynes distributers at Chicago. "You are to be congratulated on this astounding value."

Other quantity orders are being received daily from many large Haynes distributing points.

STEPHENS AGAIN WINS CALIFORNIA CONTEST

Some 360 miles of winding mountainous roads leading through snow and slush as well as dust, greeted the 14 contestants that finished in the seventh annual economy run from Los Angeles to Yosemite Valley. Over mountains more than a mile above the sea, around the twists and turns of the "Grapevine" trail and through the camps of watchful constables, the drivers guided their entries.

Lighter than many of the entries in its class, but not the lighest, a Stephens touring car with five passengers and their baggage, a total weight of 4410 pounds, easily won first place on 16½ gallons of gasoline, while not even a pint of engine oil was consumed.

This makes the sixth time a Stephens car has earned first place in California economy tests. Three times the sweepstakes cup for highest fuel-oil and water economy has been won by the Stephens.

American Cars All Over World.

All parts of the world are opening up as markets for American motor vehicles. Though some European countries are heavy purchasers of the United States product, the best customers for motor cars from the United States in 1922 were Australia, Canada and Mexico which purchased 11,238, 10,214 and 7279 respectively.

AWAY she goes—care free and confident—in her Jewett Special. She says it's "a dream to drive"—so simple she "didn't have to learn how." Never has she stalled the motor nor jerked the car—so smooth the Paige-type clutch. Never has her Jewett failed to do her bidding—so certain its performance.

Up most any hill on high—thanks to Jewett's 50-horsepower motor. Around corners in traffic at 2 miles an hour—never a thought of changing gears. Out of congestion in a jiffy. From 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear. Jewett is nimble, quick on its feet, obedient—a wonderful Paige-built six, at the price of a four.

You'll never worry over your loved ones in a Jewett, because Jewett is Paige built. Paige-Timken axles front and rear. Paige-built motor. Paige-type clutch and transmission. Jewett is the only moderate size car built by a maker of finest quality cars. Thousands of families are enjoying the confidence this brings.

Women are always comfortable in the Jewett. It is heavy enough to ride smoothly over all roads—200 pounds heavier than any car of its size—cradled on extra long springs. Seat cushions are soft; body positions just right. Upholstery is hand-crushed Spanish leather, of special colors to match the car.

Men point with pride to Jewett's motor, with its high-pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system—like the big Paige. It sends 2 gallons of oil a minute through all main and connecting-rod bearings. Makes smooth, quiet operation; assures long life and small upkeep.

Jewett Special is complete. Nickeled spring bumpers front and rear. Nickel-plated radiator and motometer. All nickel, barrel-type headlights and side lamps. Extra cord tire, tube, rim and cover, mounted at side. Trunk rack and trunk. Body guard rails. Automatic stop-light. Automatic windshield wiper. Rear vision mirror. Sun visor.

Jewett Special is truly—"a dream to drive." Let "her" decide at the near-by Jewett dealer's salesroom after a demonstration. You'll find no equal to Jewett Special 'round $1200.

Empire
"Wear Longest" TIRES

LAST year price slashing reigned supreme. Some dealers made money by selling underweight, poorly-made tires—just built to meet price competition. We concentrated on EMPIRE TIRES which presented the ideal combination of high quality and fair price.

We have profited by our policy. People who bought "cheap" tires last year are now rueing their "bargins." They have made 1923 a quality year and are now buying only those tires which came through the price-cutting period with reputations unscathed.

Such are Empires. Yet they are not necessarily expensive. By eliminating all unnecessary waste and burdensome overhead, the manufacturers enable us to offer them to the public at

COLE-EADS RECEIVE COLE MASTER MODEL

The Cole Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis has commenced to make delivery on the new series Master models to the Cole-Eads Co. of St. Louis and other distributers. A brouette is now being shown by the local company at its showroom, 3021 Locust street.

One of the most notable changes found in this new motor is the newly-designed multiple disc, self-adjusting clutch. There are two individualistic features of the Cole clutch that make it stand out. First, is the elimination of any tendency to clatter, cock or distort. This is done by the use of special steel stock and special milling process in the making of the clutch plates. Second, is the construction of the fabric friction plates. Instead of building up a plate of solid fabric composition or riveting the fabric onto the steel plate, Cole has woven a corded fabric into the plate itself. This special combination fabric and steel plate, because of its integral construction, resists the deteriorating forces that have in the past prevented the highest efficiency in disc clutch operation.

On the Master model chassis, six different and distinct body styles are mounted. The Westchester is for those who desire seven-passenger comfort and the exhilaration of open-car motoring. The Volante for those of the open-air school who are willing to sacrifice some of the passenger-carrying space for snap and dash of four-passenger design. The Imperial coupe for those who desire the intimate in closed car design. The Brouette for those who want a little more room than found in the Imperial coupe and still want in their closed car that swagger appearance found in the Volante. The Royal sedan for those who want seven-passenger closed car comforts. The Royal limousine has the distinction of being readily convertible from the chauffeur-driven equipage to the intimate family conveyance.

MAGAZINE WRITER LIKES COLOR IN CARS

"When Buick, Haynes, Moon, and Jordan introduced their early sport cars in 1921 and 1922, they brought a welcome splash of color into a drab motor world, says George W. Sutton Jr., in the July issue of Vanity Fair. American standard cars were almost without exception garbed in funeral shades—black or such dark reds, blues, greens and browns as to appear black. The long line of American motor cars today gives a kaleidoscopic impression of vivid colors, most of which show wisdom and taste on the part of automobile makers," says Sutton.

New York Leads in Trucks.

New York State leads all others in ownership of motor trucks, the total being 185,853. Ohio is second with 117,832 and Illinois third with 99,724. Michigan, Massachusetts and Texas are next in line.

WILSON MOTOR CAR CO. CELEBRATES THIS WEEK

Sixth Birthday Being Observed by Increase Doubling Size of Firm's Quarters on Locust.

The Wilson Motor Car Co., 2921-23-25-27 Locust boulevard, is having a double celebration this week, starting Sunday. The week commemorates the sixth anniversary of the firm's starting in business, it having been incorporated in June, 1917. In addition it marks the enlarging of the Wilson headquarters, by an increase of 65 front feet on Locust, and the opening of the increased size showroom.

The Wilson Motor Car Co. has had the Haynes agency ever since it started in the automobile business six years ago. It has had the Dort line since January, 1922.

For five years the premises at 2921-23 Locust boulevard were occupied but when the next door building was vacant, the Wilson Co. leased it and added it to the old headquarters, cutting through the wall between and redecorating the entire building.

Private offices were prepared for George A. Krauss the president and H. C. Merry, the secretary and general sales manager. In addition a salesroom's room was fitted up. Service and repair parts are in the old Wilson building, according to the new arrangements. The Dort is also handled in this building, while the Haynes is being taken care of in the new addition. Quick service will be rendered on the ground floor. A large parking lot has been rented just east of the building.

All this week, including Sunday and evenings, the Wilson Motor Car Co. will have open house. Flowers will be given all lady visitors. H. C. Merry, secretary of the company, is one of the veteran automobile men of St. Louis, he having gone into the business with the Mississippi Valley Automobile Co., 20 years ago.

Stealing Automobiles Unprofitable.

Thieves are finding automobiles to be an unprofitable form of loot. In 1922 78 per cent of vehicles stolen were recovered, according to the National Automobile Dealers' Association. Those high in robbery circles are reported to have said that the car stealing business is highly unsatisfactory due to the fact that the product cannot be readily hidden, that it goes out of style if concealed too long and that the number of vehicles recovered makes the overhead cost so high as to render a good business profit almost impossible.

Champion Double-Ribbed Core for your protection
CHAMPION
CHAMPION

Save a dollar or more

You save in first cost and in operating expense if you install dependable Champions by the full set. Champion is a better spark plug, but because of its tremendous production, the price is only 60 cents for Champion X and 75 cents for the Blue Box Line.

Champion is outselling because it deserves to outsell. Six out of every 10 cars you meet on the road are Champion equipped. More than two-thirds of the makes of cars selling for $2000 and upwards have Champions in their cylinders—including the fine foreign cars Minerva, Peugot and Lorraine Dietrich.

The owner of a Rolls-Royce, Locomobile, Pierce-Arrow, Lincoln, Peerless, Winton, Cunningham, Wills Sainte Claire, Franklin or an H. C. S., pays but 75 cents for his dependable Champions. Why should the owner of a Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Dodge Brothers or Maxwell pay more for his spark plugs?

So put in Champions by the full set. You will be one of the great majority of motorists if you do this. You save in initial expense. You save in gas and oil consumption. Your engine will perform better. Power and pick-up will improve.

Champion X, which sells for 60 cents, is recognized standard for Ford Cars, Trucks and Fordson Tractors.

STUDEBAKER BIG-SIX TOURING CAR
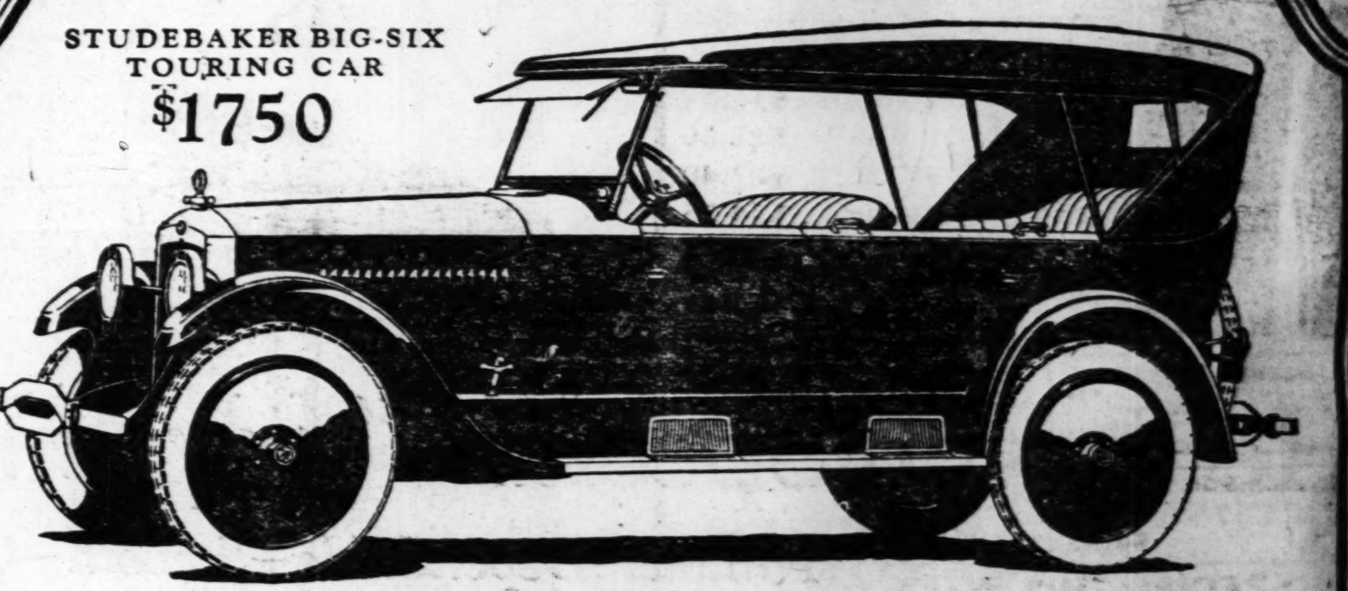
$1750



You Can Buy More Weight—But You Won't Find a Better Car

In the Studebaker Big-Six you get all the performance, all the comfort, and all the dependability that any car can give—at a price that smaller producers cannot even approach.

The Big-Six Touring is a seven-passenger car with a seven-passenger motor and seven-passenger dimensions throughout. It distinctly is not a seven-passenger body mounted on a five-passenger chassis.

The Big-Six will take the steepest hills on high. It will maintain a high rate of speed over long stretches hour after hour. Yet no car is better adapted to constant city use. None provides more restful riding—none is easier to operate. None is freer from frequent repairs.

And all the equipment you will ever want or need is an integral part of the car. It is complete even to an extra disc wheel with tire, tube and tire cover.

Its low price is due to large volume and to the fact that Studebaker overhead is shared by three models—all sixes. Then, too, only one manufacturing profit is included in the Big-Six price because all vital parts are manufactured in Studebaker plants.

If you spend more than the Big-Six price you can buy more weight and bulkiness and pay more for overhead and operation but you will not get a better automobile.

Studebaker has been building quality vehicles for 71 years and the name Studebaker is assurance of satisfaction.

Power to climb in high gear any climbable hill

Extra disc wheel complete with cord tire, tube and tire cover. Bumpers. Motometer. One-piece, rain-proof windshield, automatic windshield cleaner, and glare-proof visor. Rear-view mirror. None of this!

While Common Sense Auto Polish —the greaseless cleanser —removes ALL grease, road oil and grime down to the original finish, and thus restores the Factory Lustre, it is as easy to use as an ordinary Oil "polish"!

It cleans and polishes in one operation and leaves a clear surface, smooth as glass, DRY AS BONE—so dry that you can sprinkle dust over the freshly polished surface and then "flick off" every particle with a silk handkerchief!—the ONE preparation you have ever seen that will pass this test.

So, Today! Not the paint shop, but a bottle of Common Sense —an investment of $1.00 that will add at least $150.00 to the appearance of your car.

MOTORISTS WASTING MUCH TIRE MILEAGE

Wheels, Out of Line, Result in Loss of Tire Service.

Thousands of perfectly good miles of tire service are thrown away annually by motorists. It is all done innocently on the part of the car owner through misalignment of wheels.

Although the wheels are out of line no more than a quarter of an inch the resultant damage will be death for the tire before it has given nearly all of the service which was built into it by the manufacturer.

When misalignment is extremely bad, the motorist must notice it, but in the lesser cases it cannot be detected without an accurate test, say Miller tire men. Most up-to-date tire service stations are equipped with specially constructed instruments for testing alignment. Many gas filling station also use them while the car is stopped to be filled with gasoline. Almost any tire service station will test alignment for the asking and will be glad to point out and correct the cause of trouble.

When wheels are out of line for any reason the result is a scraping which quickly wears away the tread surface. Instead of running straight ahead and accepting the natural traction surface friction, the tire is compelled virtually to skid along sideways.

This condition frequently is the fault of bent axles, but not always. It may be broken springs, loose shackles, sprung frames, loose steering knuckles, bent pinions, wornout bearings or wabbly wheels.

OFFICERS INSTALLED BY ACCESSORY BODY

At the regular meeting of the Motor Accessory Trade Association, at the Claridge Hotel Tuesday evening, June 19, recently elected officers were installed, and Daniel F. Hyland, of the Stewart-Warner Products Corp., the new president, launched vigorously into a program of broadened activities for the Association during the forthcoming year.

James W. Chilton, Southwestern manager of the Credit Clearing House, the speaker of the evening, described credit as being fragile. "It takes a long time to make credit," Chilton said, "but it can be broken in a moment, and it is always difficult to mend."

H. H. Fleer, of the Fleer-Petty Auto Accessory Co., retiring president of the Association discussed preliminary plans for bettering the position of the battery charging and rental service interests in the city and submitted figures showing that it costs at least 82 cents to charge a battery, and that under present conditions some stations are rendering this service at prices materially below their costs.

The Motor Accessory Trade Association will hold its fourth annual excursion on the St. Paul the evening of July 25.

St. Louis Auto Club to Meet.

The St. Louis Automobile Club will hold its regular meeting at the Western Rowing Club, 5000 South Broadway, Thursday evennig, June 28, at which time the membership contest between club teams headed by Albert Von Hoffman and H. F. Riefling will be determined.

NEW JEWETT PLANT IS TO DOUBLE PRODUCTION

DETROIT, Mich., June 23.—Preliminary work has been completed and the site turned over to the general contractors for a new Jewett plant which will bring production of this automobile up to over 500 daily.

The plans for the new plant, which will be one of the most modern in the city, will be announced soon, according to H. M. Jewett, president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co., builders of the Jewett. Its location, on West Warren avenue, adjacent to the Pere Marquette and Detroit Terminal railroad tracks, gives ideal facilities for shipping and receipt of freight, says the Paige president. Here is now located the Jewett motor plant.

Pressed for information concerning the new plant, Mr. Jewett said that it would have two of the longest final assembly lines known to the automobile industry. He believes that they are the longest used in the production of any automobile selling at $1000 or more.

"The market for Jewett cars appears to grow daily," said Mr. Jewett. "With nearly 40,000 cars on the road, every section of the country not has had an opportunity to view the extraordinary performing qualities of the Jewett.

"These Jewetts have been placed in the hands of their owners in slightly over one year's time, as production on this model was not on a quantity basis until late in March, 1922. The Jewett was first announced in January, 1922. The present demand alone for Jewetts, we feel, justifies our new factory and its consequent doubling of production."

Busses Carry 5500 Weekly.

A conservative estimate made by the attaches of the bus terminal station at Binghamton, N. Y., places the number of people brought into the city weekly by motor busses at over 5500, a figure that will be greatly increased with the coming of the summer months and the addition of two new busses now on order. A fleet of 18 busses now play their traffic in and out of the city, covering virtually every part of the country within a radius of 40 miles.

How do you buy a car?

Do you walk into the first automobile salesroom you come to and say "give me a touring car"? Did you ever see anybody do it that way?

Why not buy motor oil just as carefully as you buy a car? Only the best lubricant can make automobiles last as long as they should last.

It will pay you to buy oil as carefully as you buy an automobile. People who buy Streett's Motor Oils always, don't have to buy cars often.

One MILLION
Cars

MORE than one million automobiles now have been built and sold by the Willys-Overland organization. One million cars! This is not merely an accomplishment in production and distribution. It is an accomplishment in civilization.

Many Overlands and Willys-Knights are playing a tremendous part in the life and happiness of our own community. They are putting our families on swift wheels. They are multiplying the earning power of our men. They are lightening and quickening the work of our women. They are carrying our children to school. They are promoting business and bringing our people together in closer, friendlier relationship.

Today's Overland and Willys-Knight cars unquestionably are the best automobiles Willys-Overland ever built—and at the lowest price. All past achievements are being excelled in beauty of design, in comfort, in faithful performance—in the giving of real value.

Reflecting such quality, sales this season are the greatest in our history. The public has registered unmistakably its appreciation of great value.

Overland Models: Touring $525, Roadster $525, Coupe $795, Sedan $860, Red Bird $750. Willys-Knight Models: 5-pass. Touring $1235, 3-pass. Roadster $1235, 7-Pass. Touring $1435, 5-pass. Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

TWENTY-SIX pieces of Nineteenth Century French silverware are being exhibited for a month at the City Art Museum. Their interest is historical as well as artistic, since they belong to the famous 1618-piece dinner-set given by Napoleon to his sister, Maria Pauline, at the time of her marriage to the Roman Prince, Camillo Borghess. The entire set, having passed intact through several hands since its original ownership, is now owned by Canessa of New York, by whom these 26 pieces now being shown are loaned.

From even the small number of pieces exhibited here one may gather an idea of the extent of domestic grandeur during the reign of Napoleon. After the Reign of Terror, when all products of the gold and silversmiths' crafts were seized and converted into uses as common metal, the "Directoire" period, immediately following, enabled a civic and political relaxation which permitted the innate French desire for beauty and luxury again to manifest itself, and artists strove to establish their artistic supremacy over other countries as Napoleon did politically. The great architects of France (among whom were Percier and Fontaine) roamed all Europe for reconstructive ideas. This resulted in the unanimous acceptance of the ideas they brought back. Not only was their word taken in matters of architecture, but in decorations, furniture, tapestries and art crafts. Thus, the majority of models of even silverware was supplied by these architects, and the names of Percier and Fontaine are found inscribed on many of the objects in this dinner set, in addition to the marks of Jean Baptiste Claude Biennais and Martin Guillaume Odiot, the most famous goldsmiths of the time.

Gilded With Gold.

This dinner set with which we are now concerned is considered by authorities as among the best examples of goldsmith work in France during the first part of the nineteenth century. Many will be surprised to find that these objects look to be gold instead of silver. The fact is that the silver has all been covered with a thin gold wash. This gilding of silver is extremely effective and very expensive, since it is accomplished by the now-abandoned and dangerous process. This consists of dissolving gold in mercury to form an amalgam which is applied to the surface of the silver. By evaporating the mercury, the gold remains as a veneer.

The famous coat of arms (the dragon and crowned eagle shown against a ducal mantle, all of which are beneath an Imperial French crown) appears on each individual piece belonging to this dinner set, which is said to be rivalled in magnificence only by the toilet set Napoleon presented to his wife, the Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria.

By the articles which comprise this dinner set, one can get a fairly good idea of the intricacies of nineteenth century French domestic life, since the craftsmen's products were the result of careful study of contemporary ceremony. Napoleon, himself, typifies most perfectly the ostentatious attitude everywhere assumed in France during that period. Customs became very elaborate, and manners were extremely complex. It is related that at formal receptions, at least 16 hot courses were served, only a bite or two being tasted of each food, many of the courses being entirely untouched. Every household of any social standing necessarily possessed at least three complete sets of dishes to accomodate 50 persons each, and courtesy dictated that two formal dinners a week were the minimum quota for each recognizable household to give.

Considering the complicated service of a nineteenth century French dinner, it is not surprising to find a remarkable number of widely varied objects in this dinner set, all of which are beautifully executed as to workmanship, and the lines of which are delicately graceful.

Emerson Paintings.

During July and August, the Newhouse Gallery will continue to show its collection of tempera paintings by William C. Anderson. Although Emerson's work lacks fundamentals, these pictures are cooling and are appropriate covering for the walls of the gallery during a St. Louis summer. Their chief merit lies in their unobtrusiveness; they demand nothing the beholder does not feel like giving. Their insipidity is of such a nature that they could be successfully hung in a sleeping chamber, so undisturbing is the composition and coloring. At least they have no damaging or irritating potentialities.

It might be remarked that the frames for these pictures are some of the most commendable the writer has seen. They are really an achievement in appropriate smoky softness.

Dawson Dawson-Watson has reported the sale of 12 of his pictures in Hartford, Conn., where an exhibit of his work has been in progress in the Old State House. The remainder of his visit in the East will be brief, as he is anxious to reach Colorado and start his summer work in that locality.

Julia Woods' Romances and Drab Court Fight Over Her Estate to Which They Led

CAREER OF MISSOURI HEIRESS WHOSE FORTUNE IS CLAIMED BY AN EGYPTIAN ADVENTURER UNDER A LONDON WILL

MRS. JULIA WOODS GRISSOM-RUBEY-DICKINSON-DAVIES.

GEORGE WESTLAIN DAVIES

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 23.

A COUNTRY DOCTOR weds the belle of Paris, Mo., one June.

Another June, 50 years thence, they stood under a mammoth marriage bell in William Woods College at Fulton, Mo. It is their golden wedding anniversary. Theirs a Darby and Joan fireside for half a century—a wonderfully happy marriage that is the ideal of their friends.

Still another June—1923. Men of two continents go to court at Liberty, Mo., contesting the estate of a late Missouri heiress. It is a sequel to the trail of romantic adventure which the daughter from this unchanging hearthstone has blazed from Missouri to New York, Paris, London, Rome and back again—playing a progressive game of matrimony with husbands as trumps.

Romance touched in widely different ways the lives of Dr. William S. Woods, late Kansas City capitalist, church pillar and founder of William Woods College, and his daughter, Mrs. Julia Woods Davies.

Dr. Woods gave vent to his adventurous spirit in finance; his daughter, to hers in matrimony.

The present court contest between George Westlain Davies of St. Louis, fourth and last husband of Mrs. Davies, and Capt. Harry Lello Zeitun of London, over the wills of the millionaire banker's daughter, has revisioned to many Missourians the colorful and romantic career of Julia Woods, once considered the State's richest heiress, being the only child of one of Missouri's richest men.

On the marriage bell under which Dr. and Mrs. Woods stood seven years ago this month at their golden wedding celebration at Fulton, were inscribed these words:

"'Tis years since your young love made life divine,
But age enrichest true love like noble wine."

The daughter did not find this sentiment true. But why?

Was it a broken heart, the shattering of her illusions in the tragedy of her first romance and marriage with the late Arthur Grissom, poet, editor and founder of The Smart Set, a New York magazine, that caused her to decide to play lightly with the hearts and lives of men?

Or was it a reaction from the conventional, uneventful, religious atmosphere of an old-time, old-fashioned home that sent her afield in search of varying experiences?

Or was the adventurous spirit of some Cleopatra, Catherine the Great or other famous romanticist re-embodied in the daughter of the country physician and church elder?

The stage was well arranged for a colorful life drama for Julia Woods. Here was the setting:

An Ash Blonde With Dimples

A girl in her first twenties. An ash blonde with an alabaster skin. Dimpled doll type. And wealth enough to make her a great catch in any society.

The drama itself fulfilled its promise.

The plot beginning with an elopement with a struggling poet on the eve of marriage to a rich suitor moved over America and Europe involving four marriages, three divorces, an alienation suit by a discarded husband, a long residence in Rome, jealousies, estrangements, reconciliations, a friendship with a picturesque Egyptian Lothario and finally death, starting in its wake a chain of international litigation.

The men who figured in these strange series of episodes were:

Arthur Grissom of Independence, Mo., poet, litterateur and one of the founders of the Smart Set magazine in New York.

Jesse W. Rubey of Texas, cousin of Julia Woods, to whom she was married 19 years.

Frank M. Dickinson, interior decorator and amateur actor of Kansas City and St. Louis, to whom the Missouri heiress was married nine months.

George Westlain Davies, singer of St. Louis, last husband of Julia Woods and her beneficiary in a will made in 1921.

Capt. Harry Lello Zeitun of London, Egyptian adventurer and globe-trotter, who claims the Julia Woods estate under a will made in 1922 in London.

Dr. Woods, one-time physician at Middle Grove and Paris, Mo., had deserted his professional career and had amassed a fortune through his capitalistic and banking enterprises in Kansas City and Clay County by the time his only daughter Julia made her debut into the society of the nineties.

Great Independence Days and Nights

Independence, Mo., historic Southern center with its big square brick houses and its streets shaded by rows of sugar maples then was the fashion suburb of the newer and more commercial Kansas City.

The younger set of the latter city always went down—at least once a week, by "rubber tired" buggy or on the old dummy line to the Independence dances.

Julia Woods, nearly always in white, a fair-haired statuesque lily, was one of the belles who flitted in the mazes of the waltz or the German in the big, old-fashioned Independence "parlors." Quite often a slender, fair curly-haired young man with the eyes of a dreamer led her from the ball room or to the balcony of an Independence mansion to listen while he declaimed sentimental verses.

The young man was Arthur Grissom, a rising young literary genius of Independence whose promising career was cut short by his death in New York not long after he became known in the magazine field there.

HARRY LELLO ZEITUN.
Egyptian adventurer and London Police Court interpreter, who claims the estate of Mrs. Davies under a will mysteriously made in London.

Rumor has it in Independence that Arthur got his early literary practice writing odes and sonnets to Julia.

Residents of Independence still maintain that Arthur Grissom was wont to spend his time on the old dummy line between Independence and Kansas City writing poetry to the daughter of Dr. Woods.

Young Grissom was employed as a special writer on Kansas City newspapers and went back and forth daily from that city to Independence, where he lived in one of the town's characteristic ivy-colored brick houses.

His father was a widely known early minister in the Christian church in which Dr. and Mrs. Woods were lifetime members and workers.

Arthur Grissom was a distant cousin of Julia Woods and as a companion and escort he was always welcome at the Woods home.

But as a husband for Julia, Dr. Woods didn't "see" him.

A successful financier himself, accumulating a fortune of $5,000,000 by his own efforts with no other start than $1.50 physician's fees for 10-mile rides to visit patients, Dr. Woods could find no excuse for men who were not practical and successful providers.

The poetry, wit and charming conversation with which Arthur Grissom was gifted were regarded by the banker as an undependable source for the payment of rent and grocery bills, although thoroughly enjoyable as a social diversion.

A close-up of Zeitun, the adventurer claimant.

The late capitalist and philanthropist is reported once to have said that he had no use for "curly-haired poets." And Arthur's hair was quite wavy.

Meanwhile another suitor entered upon the scene, a rich young man from Hannibal, another distant relative of Julia and one with a hard head and a practical business sense which won Dr. Woods' admiration. The Woods' family encouraged the suit and broken-hearted Arthur bundled up his poems and went on to New York to find solace in his art.

Julia and all the younger set at Independence missed Arthur's wit and poetry and his graceful manner for awhile. Then Julia capitulated to her family's wishes and became engaged to the practical and wealthy rival.

Big plans were made for the wedding. Mrs. Woods and Julia went on to New York to buy the trousseau. But some way Julia didn't take the interest she should in her wedding finery. One morning Mrs. Woods went alone from the hotel to shop and Julia went for a walk.

Unconsciously her steps directed her in the direction of the famous Little Church Around the Corner. While a short ways distant she collided unexpectedly with—Arthur Grissom.

Arthur had heard the news from home of Julia's approaching marriage. He used his literary powers upon her and in a few moments they were headed toward the Little Church Around the Corner—together.

Later they surprised Mrs. Woods at the hotel with the announcement of their marriage.

Then came parental forgiveness and Mrs. Woods, Julia and Arthur all journeyed back to Kansas City together. The young husband had agreed to give up his literary work in New York and come back to live with his bride among her relatives and friends.

For a while Arthur and Julia lived at the one-time fashionable Auditorium Theater Hotel in Kansas City. Later they lived in Independence, some of the time at the Grissom home, and finally at a home in Kansas City purchased for them by Dr. Woods.

A daughter, Gladys, was born, now Mrs. James M. Kemper of Kansas City.

How Smart Set Magazine Was Started

Then rifts began to appear in the sea of happiness. Small jealousies and misunderstandings arose. Grissom, later, in his alienation suit against Dr. Woods, charged the latter with seeking to break up the marriage. Grissom went back to New York and his wife obtained a divorce. It was said she was jealous of a woman collaborator with Grissom on various New York magazines and that Grissom had been jealous of her friendships with her cousins and various other relatives.

Shortly after the divorce Grissom brought suit for $20,000 against Dr. Woods for alienation of Julia's affection. The action was begun in New York City and later by transfer got into the Federal courts of Missouri. It never came to trial. A settlement was understood to have been effected.

Bitterness of feeling always existed between Dr. Woods and Grissom. Grissom's daughter was not allowed to use her father's name but was known as Gladys Wood Rubey after her mother married for a second husband Jesse W. Rubey, of Texas, her cousin.

Gladys was reared largely by Dr. and Mrs Woods and the bulk of the Woods fortune went to her and to her half sister, Ruth Rubey.

Grissom, who had a penchant for founding magazines, having been with George Creel, one of the founders of the Independent, a Kansas

By F. A. BEHYMER,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WAVERLY, Tenn., June 23.

OLD timers of Waverly and Humphreys County now know that the man who drove down the hill, on a day in 1876, coming from the direction of Clarksville, over on the Cumberland river, with his family and a few possessions in a new wagon, drawn by two fine horses, and put up at the Nolan Hotel for the night, giving his name as J. D. Howard, farmer and stock man, looking for a location, was Jesse James, Missourian, who turned his hand at odd times to deeds of banditry.

J. D. Howard, farmer and stock man, found Humphreys County, and particularly Big Bottom, on the Tennessee River, to his taste and that is why the two years that ensued are silent years in the biographies of Jesse James, bandit. During those two years, while Jesse James was in prudent retirement from main traveled roads, J. D. Howard of Big Bottom was giving himself to gentlemanly enjoyments.

Outside of this remote region the story of those silent years has not been told, but the old timers tell it now, chuckling over their hoarded recollections, and the stories they tell reveal a new Jesse James.

It was as J. D. Howard, gentleman farmer, that James lived in Big Bottom, indulging his sporting fancy for the racing of his own fast horses at county fairs, buying and selling stock, coming and going, hailing neighbors and hailed by them, going to church on Sunday and striking hands with the brethren, giving voice to psalm and hymn, counting it no hypocrisy to join a few gentlemen on a week day evening in a friendly game of poker, a man among men.

If it be objected that, as a poor poker player, Jesse James was not running true to form, the answer is that he played poker, as he did everything else, not as Jesse James, but as J. D. Howard, gentleman farmer, carrying his pose so far as to pretend even a personal cowardice, lest anyone might discover in him any of the traits of that Jesse James whose exploits were of such a different character.

Rumors Finally Transformed Into Fact

The evidence that Howard was James has been accumulating through the years and has reached the stage of certainty through the investigations of J. Ben Fuqua, now Commonwealth Attorney of Humphreys County, prompted by his interest in the history of the region.

Uncle Dan Goodrich, now 85 years old, happened to go to the door of his store that day in 1876 when the new wagon, drawn by two beautiful horses, came down the hill, with a man and a woman and two children in it, and crossed the railroad track and drew up at the Nolan Hotel. Migrations of families, carrying scant belongings, were not unusual then and he gave the arrivals no more than casual scrutiny, entirely unsuspicious that Waverly and the Nolan Hotel were being paid the honor of a visit by the greatest of American outlaws, with an onlooker's distinction accruing to him.

And Henry Harris, station agent of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad, working about the station, viewed the arrival of the strangers with even greater detachment by reason of the indifference bred by his professional relation to the traveling public.

But the stranger, looking over Waverly that day, found it to his liking and was glad to find, as he had been led to expect, that Humphreys County was good stock country, and the inquiries he set on foot caused sundry landowners to seek him out at the Nolan Hotel and offer concessions for him to settle in their midst, appraising him as in all respects a worthy person whose coming would confer credit on the community. And after the usual exchanges of compliments and inspection of the various properties offered for his consideration he decided to take the W. N. Link place in Big Bottom, a few miles from Box Station (now rechristened Denver).

So, in the course of the next few days, he called at the Goodrich store and bought some housekeeping things and made a quite agreeable impression upon the merchant and established a pleasant acquaintance which continued through the period of his residence in the county.

Impressed All With Honesty

And so, also, he had occasion to make the acquaintance of Harris, the station agent, under circumstances somewhat embarrassing for a gentleman who was a stranger, in that he found, when he came to pay the freight on two carloads of goods, that he did not have quite enough money with him. But Harris, not a little impressed with the substantiality of a stranger with two carloads of goods, had no hesitancy in advancing to him the trifling sum needed, a service which Citizen Howard ever after held in grateful remembrance and which, perchance, had something to do with Howard's willingness at a later date to lose at poker when friend Harris was sitting opposite.

Established at the Link place, Howard rode away and brought back a string of "yearlin's" and bought corn and began fattening them for the market. He came frequently to Waverly and very soon made for himself a secure place in the confidence of the people. The mature estimate of Uncle Dan Goodrich is the estimate of all who knew him.

"He was a very nice gentleman," said Uncle Dan, "well informed and of pleasant conversation. I became very fond of the man, and hated to hear of him being killed, dogged if I didn't, even if he wasn't what he seemed. It was a cruel thing, the way he was killed. I cannot think that he was a common murderer."

It chanced, the day that Uncle Dan sat in his pleasant home on the hill overlooking Waverly and talked of the days when Waverly, unawares, was harboring a man with a price on his head, that Uncle Jake Young, 83 years old, came from Denver to visit Uncle Dan and talk over, as johnnies like to do, old times when they fought in the lost cause together. It took all of his breath to get up the hill, but the joyous welcome of Uncle Dan and his wife repaid his exertion and after he had rested a moment he confirmed Uncle Dan's opinion of the neighbor he had known as Howard.

"There was no nicer family anywhere," he said. "Mrs. Howard, or Mrs. James as we now know her to have been, was an excellent lady, friendly to everybody and especially attentive to the sick."

Harris says all this of him and adds, out of his somewhat more intimate association with him, in gentlemen's games, that he was a good loser and a thoroughly agreeable companion. While Reddick C. Carnell, a hardware merchant who had business dealings with him, says he was "a handsome man, a fine rider and a quiet citizen of this county."

Cultivated Contact With Neighbors

The Jesse Jameses, or the J. D. Howards, as Humphreys County knew them, although well content to be unnoticed by the world at large, cultivated contact with their neighbors. They impressed themselves upon the consciousness of their community by entertaining in a manner which, for the region and the period, was nothing less than lavish. At intervals they invited all their neighbors to their Big Bottom place and served an excellent dinner, which was followed by a dance. Hospitality is the soul of the south and the hospitality of the Howards placed them high in the estimation of their Tennessee neighbors.

Humphreys County gentlemen are keen horsemen and Neighbor Howard had horses which compelled their polite envy and at these social assemblies and on more casual occasions it was their choice to repair to the yard or barnlot, or the race course which Howard had laid out through the farm, while the young people danced, and admire the Howard steppers.

Most admired of the Howard animals, and Howard's favorite, was "Red Fox," a racer of whose quality the county fairs of West Tennessee were to have witness. It was somewhat singular that every time "Red Fox" was seen at the Howard home he was saddled and attended by a negro boy. Howard explained that the horse needed constant exercise to keep in trim.

Of course it is well understood now that the fleet animal was kept always at hand, ready for instant use, because Jesse James did not know the hour or the minute that "Red Fox" would be his dependence for escape from Big Bottom. And it is remembered that when he rode to town he made it a point to keep close to "Red Fox."

There were other things scarcely noticed then but significant in the light of later knowledge. When Howard came to town and joined the circle of gentlemen in leisurely converse about the courthouse square, he took good care that nobody was behind him. And W. A. McCutcheon, who ran the Nolan Hotel, had occasion to discover a fastidious idiosyncracy on his part, in that he would never sleep in the same room with another person. If McCutcheon could not provide him with an unshared room, he went out to the barn and spent the night with "Red Fox," contriving, it is supposed, to guard himself in some manner there against surprise.

Carried His Weapons Inconspicuously

He did not wear weapons conspicuously, although in those days guns were gentlemanly impedimenta, and he only occasionally permitted himself exhibitions of the markmanship which was his pride. Once, at a barbecue at the fair ground there was a thieving dog that was making off with a piece of meat and a wish was expressed that someone would go after it and kill it to stop its depredations.

Howard stepped to his saddlebags, hanging on a stall nearby, and brought one of his long-barreled pistols and, scarcely seeming to take aim, he sent a bullet after the fleeing dog which terminated its thieving career then and there. His marksmanship was a startling surprise to those who witnessed it.

During fair time Howard kept "Red Fox" and his other horses at the fair grounds and stayed there at night. There was quite a company, horsemen and others, and in the cool of the evening they found amusement in matching their skill and prowess in various ways. After dark they placed a lighted candle on an upturned barrel and took turns at trying to sniff out the flame with a bullet. There is a local tradition that one of the marksmen missed the barrel but his name has been lost in merciful oblivion. If anybody hit the candle it was set down to accident, but this may have been the disparagement of envy.

The owner of "Red Fox" watched the amateurs as long as he could stand it. Then he brought out his pistol and drew down on the distant candle flame, flickering in the night air. While the others were waiting for him to take elaborate aim, as they had done, his pistol barked and the flame died.

"Light it again," said Howard, the stir of the thing in his blood. It was lighted again. He shifted his pistol to his left hand and another bullet found the flame.

And the next day Dave Rudolph and the others spread the fame of the finest pistol shot they had ever seen.

Finally Shows His Fighting Blood

It may have been this imprudent display that prompted him to divert attention by a pretense of personal timidity. One evening Henry Harris and a number of other citizens were congregated in front of the Nolan House discussing current events when they were startled by the agitated approach of Howard. He was trembling and frightened.

"Have any of you gentlemen a weapon?" he asked. "I was coming peacefully along down here by the bridge when I was set upon by two ruffians, who put me in fear of my life. I ask you gentlemen to protect me."

Such appeal for protection was never made in vain to Tennessee gentlemen, especially when the one making it was a comparative newcomer and therefore entitled to an extra measure of courtesy. So with the valor born of numbers and a few odd weapons they moved enmasse upon the bridge, only to find there Pat Halpin and Cul Fortner, most amiable of citizens, more amiable than usual by reason of gentlemanly indulgence, who had accosted Mr. Howard out of pure excess of affection and with no desire except to hang upon his neck and assure him of their undying regard.

Howard, not a little embarrassed, said it was plain that he had been unduly alarmed, and would the gentlemen be so kind as not to mention it. They understood and assured him that it should go no further and went back to the Nolan House with feelings of pride that they had been permitted to render a service to a fellow citizen who was unfortunately a little timid.

It may be conjectured that Jesse James found great enjoyment in this and other little masquerades that he enacted from time to time for the purpose of proving himself a man of meekness. True to the part he was playing he took more from contentious individuals than was to his relish, but even in this he found enjoyment of his anonymity, chuckling over the transformation that would ensue if he were to reveal himself.

It is hard for ardent horsemen to keep from falling out once in a while and it happened that Howard and Jim Ward had a difficulty at the races one day and Ward, not knowing of course to whom he was talking, gave rein to his speech, as his manner was, and Henry Harris and the others who were standing by say that some of Jim's remarks were such as any Tennessee gentleman would feel called upon to resent. And he flailed about with his like he meant to commit an assault.

Howard felt that something was requi him. He went for his saddlebags and t them over his left arm and slipped his hand under the flap and walked up to W and when that person paused for breath Ho said: "Jim, when I came up here I had mind made up to kill you, but I've changed notion. You can call me anything you but if you hit me I'm going to shoot your out. Now what are you going to do?" he smiled.

Then He Laughed and Rode Away

Ward resumed where he had left off said some things he had forgotten to ment before, but he didn't hit. Howard listened while, smiling, and then mounted his horse an rode away, laughing as he went.

The clash he had with D. B. Thomas Johnsonville "looked like it was going to a difficulty," as Uncle Jake Young tells a it. Thomas hired a negro who had worke Howard, without obtaining from Howar waiver of his rights to the man's ser under the code which governed such de transactions.

The next time Howard saw Thomas he monstrated. Thomas, as Uncle Jake de him, was a very fractious man but game flared up and carried on so that Ho reached for his gun. But he realized Thomas was beside himself, as he after explained, so he turned and walked laughing to think how surprised Th would have been if he had known that he monkeying with a certain widely known saw known as Jesse James.

J. P. White was Sheriff then and his duties, along with the balance of the iffs of the country, was to keep a looko the badly wanted Jesse James. through Big Bottom one day he met H They lifted their hands in salutation spoke their howdys and as each was mirer of fine horseflesh and each rode animal, it was inevitable that they should and talk horses for a while.

The Sheriff was bound for the lower and he invited Howard to ride along and ard, having nothing particular to do, along. The Sheriff was on official bu and although the business in hand did for the assistance of his companion, James, in the guise of Howard, loaned performance the prestige of his presence.

It was nightfall before they came the Howard neighborhood and Howard the Sheriff to spend the night with him. accepted and Mrs. Howard, who might have a natural sensitiveness about entertaining ficers of the law, was attentive and cha

Jesse Had the Best of Him

When it came time to retire Howard panied White to his room and White very fine watch from his pocket and laid a table, fine watches and fine horses his twin hobbies. Howard noticed it, as W intended that he should. He had had up that his horse was not as good as but when it came to watches he thought had the best one in Humphreys County watched Howard out of the corner of his as that person turned it over with praisal.

"Fine watch you've got there, Sheriff," said.

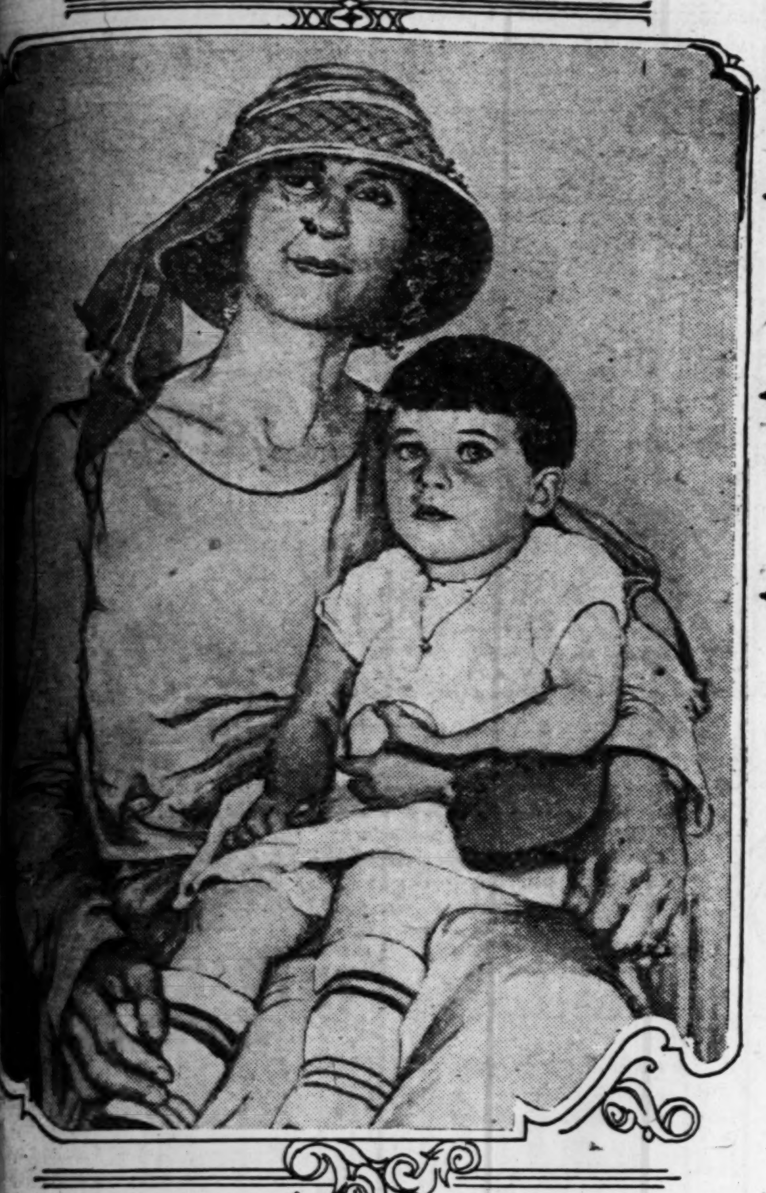
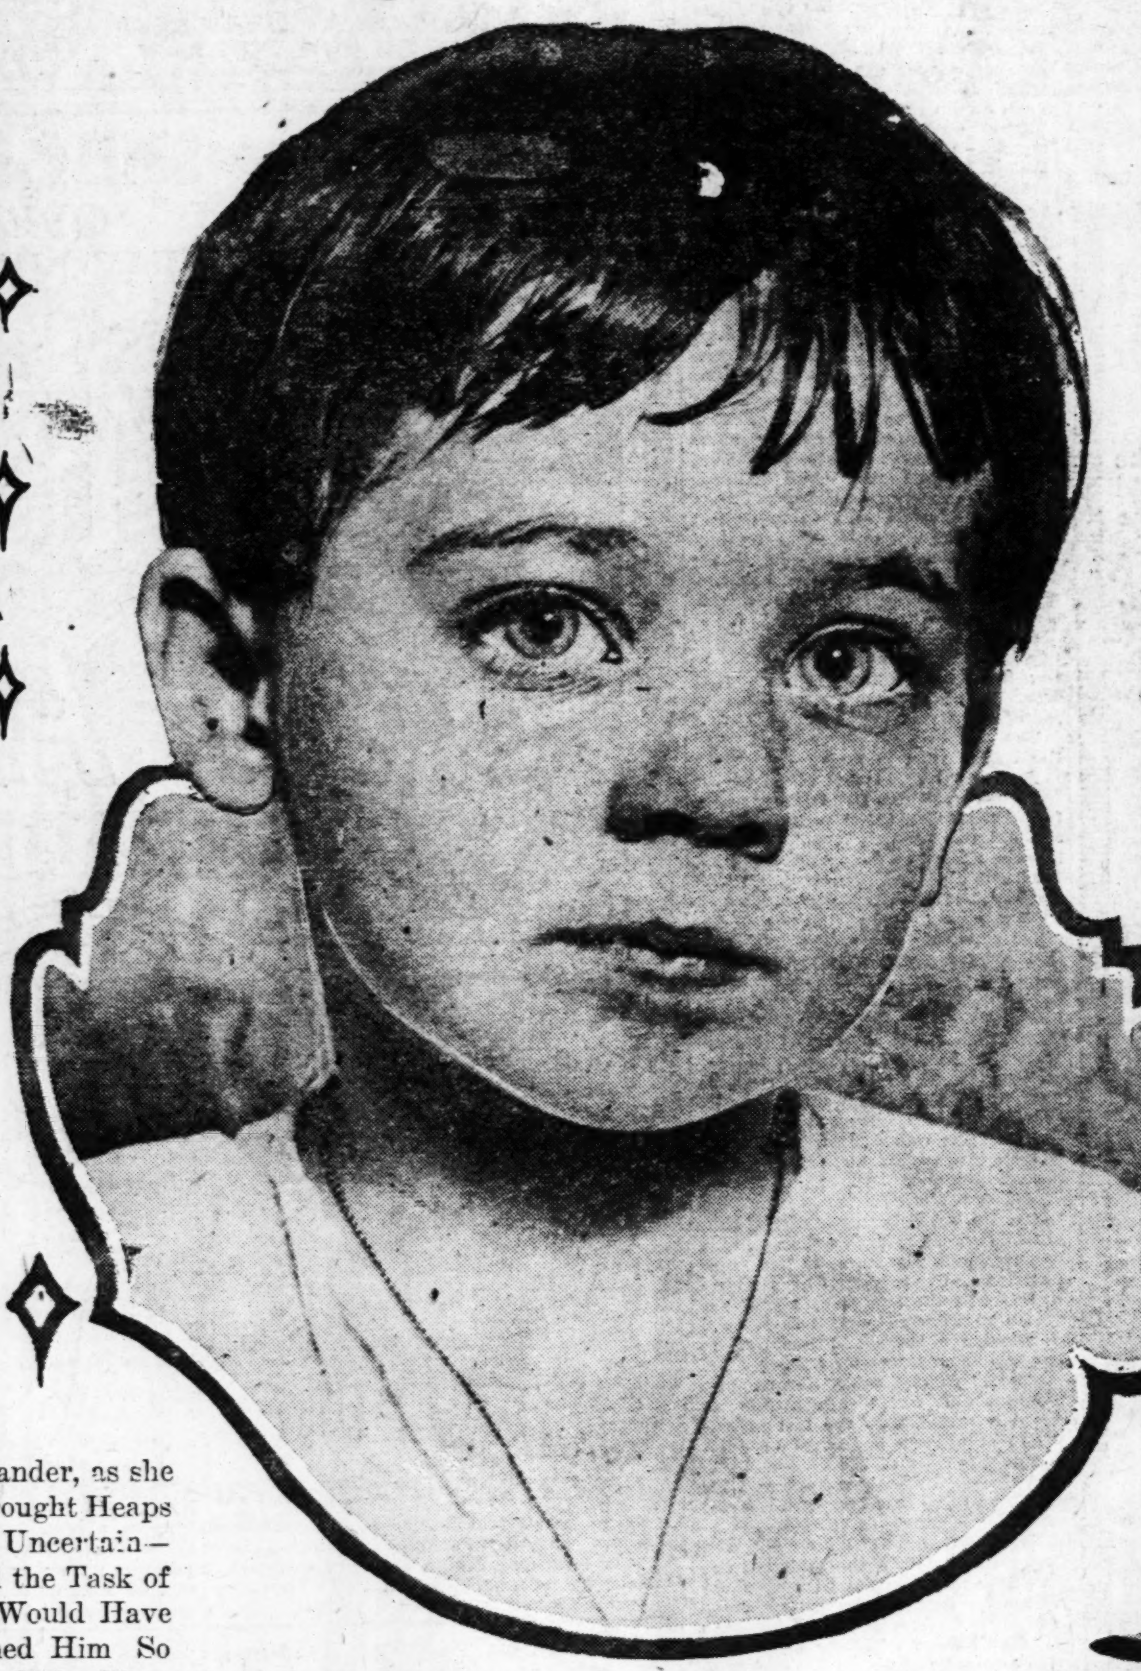
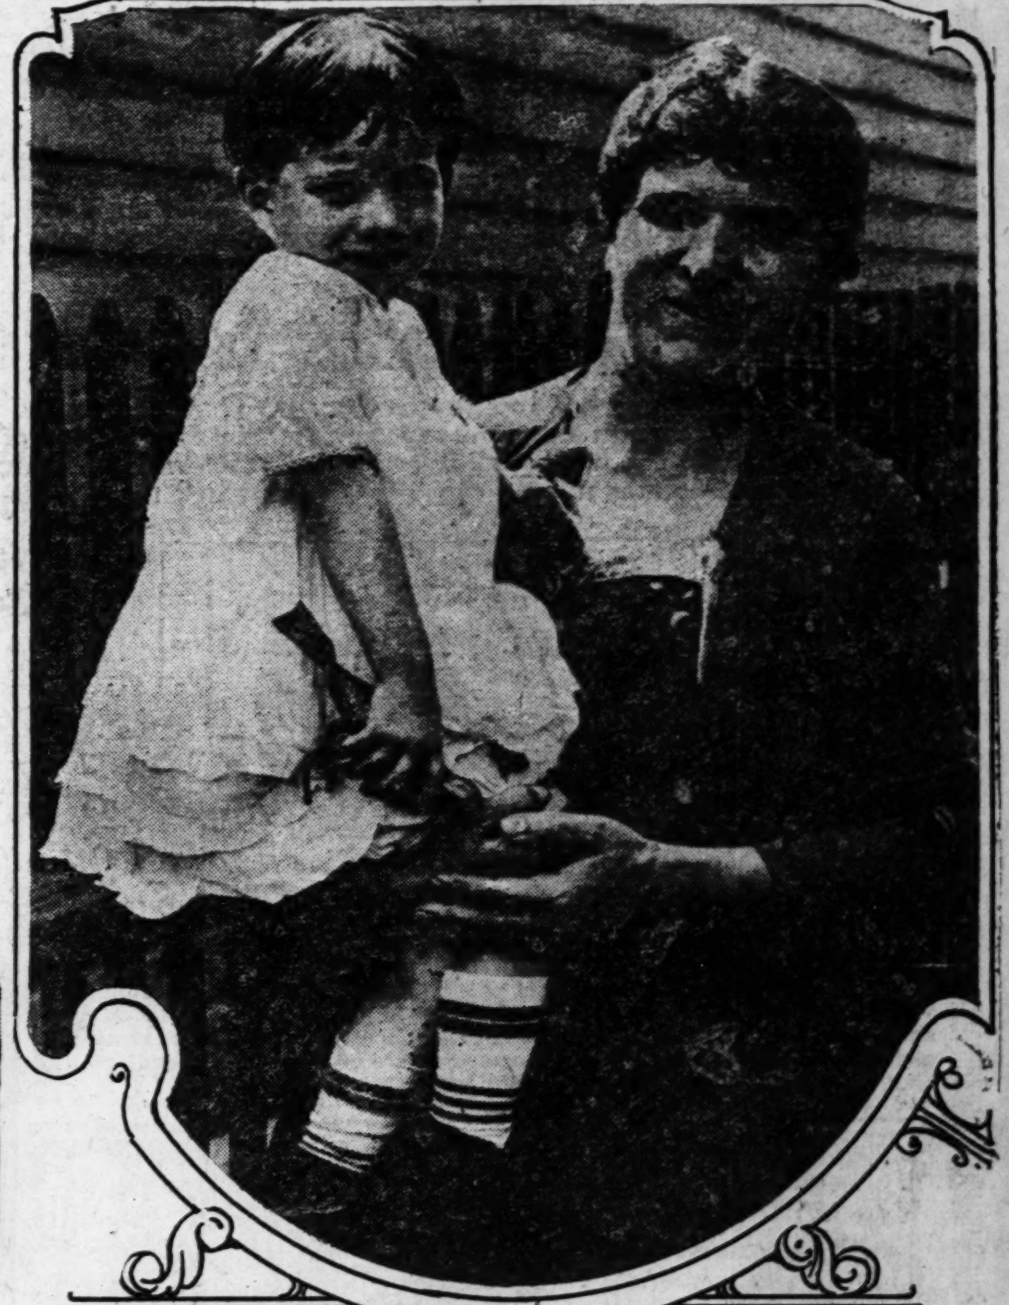
New Name and New Mother for Baby Whom Fate Has Made The Chief Card in Fight for Arkansas "Potato King's" Estate







Moving Case of Ida Georgine Boening, or Mildred Jo Alexander, as she Is Called Now, Into Whose Life Destiny Has Already Brought Heaps of Trouble and for Whom the Road to Happiness Is Yet Uncertain—She Came Into the World Without Benefit of Clergy and the Task of Her Mother Now Is to Prove That Joseph Alexander Would Have Recognized Her as His Child if Death Had Not Claimed Him So Soon After Her Birth—Foster Mother Who Had Adopted Her Gives Her Up Though Loving Her as Her Very Own.

IDA GEORGINE BOENING is just a tiny girl a little more than 2 years old, and therefore is not consulted about her preference as to parents. And, like most children of her age, she hadn't noted the lack of deference accorded her so long as she remained the center of attraction in one household, which happened to be that of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Boening of 4766 Genevieve avenue. She had always taken it for granted that she was the little girl of Mamma Boening, who lavished toys and maternal affection upon her unstintedly, and as such she was contented to remain.

But things of momentous import have been happening in Ida Georgine's young life of late —things that she is too small to understand and that she will arouse much wondering in her childish mind for many years to come.

It never occurred to Ida Georgine that while she played at home with her big doll last week, she was the innocent cause of a bitter court encounter—that a real mother and a foster mother, each backed by a battery of legal talent, were struggling and pleading for possession of her while a Judge knitted his brows and pondered over all the evidence in an effort to determine whose little girl she should be in the future.

Indeed, she wondered in wide-eyed amazement what it was all about when Mamma Boening came home with tearful eyes and told her that soon she would go away with a new mamma. Ida Georgine couldn't see why she should go away when she had never been away, even overnight, and when, a few days later, a strange man and a woman she didn't remember ever seeing before came for her she was frightened and rebelled with all the vehemence characteristic of the expression of a healthy 2-year-old baby. But wails and Mamma Boening's tears availed her nothing and the strange man and the equally strange woman, in reality, though, her rightful mother, took Ida Georgine away.

Out of One Drama Into Another

Thus ended the suit filed last November by Miss Audie Dunlap of Van Buren, Ark., for the recovery of her child from the Boenings, who adopted the little girl on Nov. 24, 1920, just 11 days after her birth in a private hospital on Laclede avenue. Circuit Judge Hartmann had set aside the adoption and decreed that Ida Georgine should go back to her real mother, who had seen her but once since her birth and then only for a few moments when she was but 3 months old.

But this unsual case in which a real mother's affection was pitted against the devotion of a foster mother ends only to usher in another just as extraordinary, and Ida Georgine is to play, innocently as before, the leading role in another drama of the courtroom. When the story of her brief existence in the world shall have been told a second time and lawyers shall have matched their wits again, a jury in the Federal Court at Muskogee, Ok., will decide whether or not she shall be the sole heiress to all the lands and all the houses and all the wealth of the late Joseph Alexander, known as the Southwest's "potato king," who, Miss Dunlap alleges, is the baby's father.

So, displaying considerably more interest in her dolls than in the prospect of becoming an heiress, Ida Georgine is in process of becoming adjusted to her new family connections. She is finding it very awkward to say "Mamma" to the strange young woman, when Mamma Boening is the only mother she ever knew, and she can't quite understand why she is being called Mildred—Mildred Jo—when everybody ought to know her name is Ida Georgine Boening, which she can pronounce as well as anybody.

Even her name, the first she learned to say, must be forgotten along with the other teachings of her babyhood. Pathetic though it is, it is clearly up to Ida Georgine to start out all over again, to learn new names and faces in place of the old ones dear to her. Even if she inherits the fortune of Joe Alexander, the way will still be hard for her, for she will have to live down the odium that attaches to a child born out of wedlock.

Not Mentioned in Alexander's Will

Though the chances are favorable that the Court will look kindly upon little Ida Georgine's claim for the estate, it will not be won without a fight. Alexander, a bachelor, who died some three months after the child was born, failed to mention her or her mother in his will, made shortly before his death. That instrument named as his heirs only the members of his immediate family—his stepmother, Mrs. J. H. Alexander of New York; two sisters, Mrs. Miles Dickens of Fort Smith and Mrs. A. S. Wyley of Muskogee, Ok.; three half-sisters, Mrs. Lee Kelly of Fort Smith, Mrs. Maud Janey and Miss Kate Alexander of New York, and his brother, Thompson Alexander of Fort Smith.

His holdings, variously estimated to be worth anywhere from a million and a half to three million dollars, consist of some 15,000 acres of fertile farm land along the Arkansas River in Arkansas and Oklahoma and numerous pieces of town property, including a rice plant in Lonoke County, Ark., a cotton gin and 32 residences and business lots at Moffett, Ok.; a rice plantation at Stuttgart, Ark., and various tracts of land in Louisiana and Texas. It is heirship to this fortune that is claimed for Ida Georgine in the suit filed at Muskogee. The estate is still in the hands of the executor, Thompson Alexander, who has been operating it as a unit since his brother's death. The will was signed in a Fort Smith hospital, just before Alexander underwent an operation which preceded his death by about 10 days.

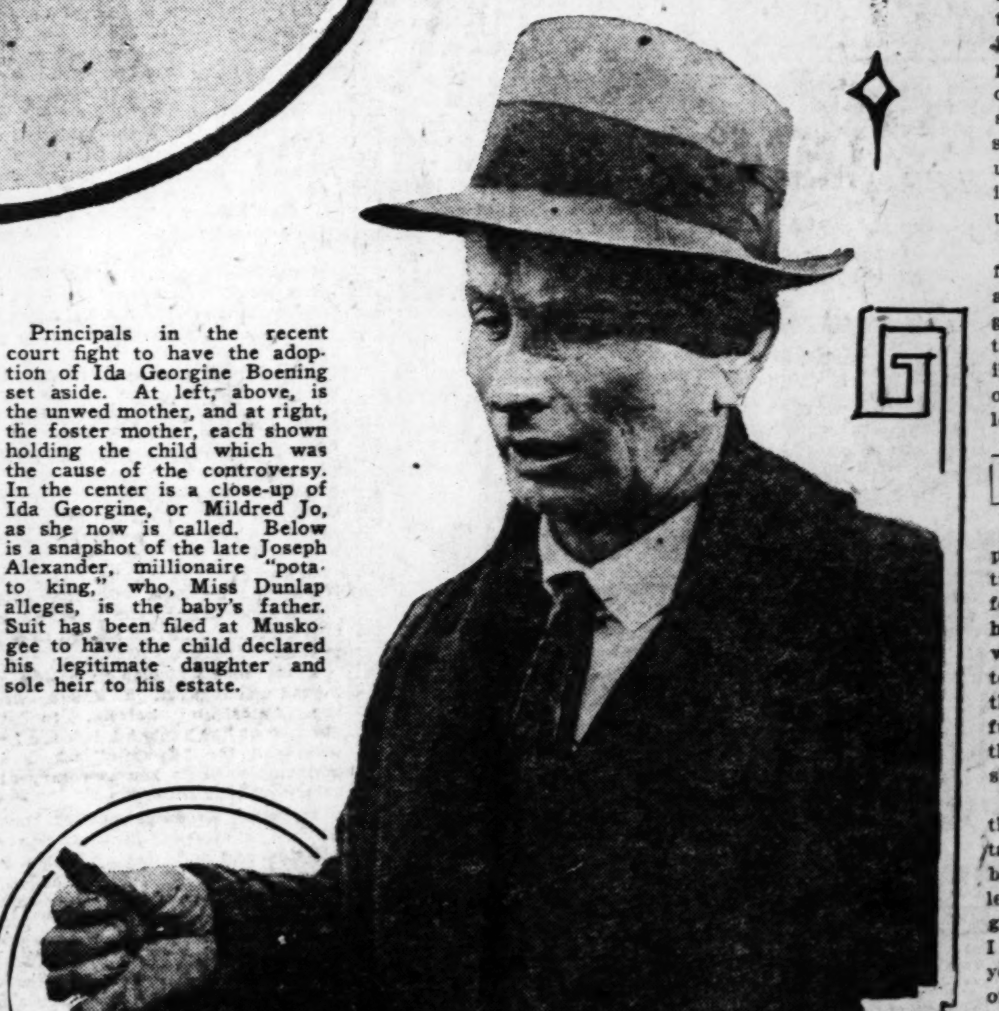
The chain of events leading up to the unique role Ida Georgine was destined to play had its first links forged back in 1917, long before the little girl was born. It all began when Miss Dunlap, then employed in a Fort Smith office, chanced one evening to meet Joe Alexander, and the two, impelled by a mutual attraction, decided to keep steady company.

How Their Association Began

Miss Dunlap was then 21 years old and Alexander, who already had become a prominent figure in the community because of his immense land holdings and his enormous potato crops which his river bottom acres yielded, was nearing 45. The girl, having made her own way in the world from the time she was 14 by waiting at tables in restaurants and doing various other odd jobs that offered, felt flattered at receiving the attentions of a man so rich and powerful as Alexander, and he, having devoted the greater part of his life to hard work incident to building up and managing a great potato plantation, which left little time for seeking feminine association, felt that he had found a companion worth while in Miss Dunlap.

The romance developed. Alexander came in from his home near the city on visits with increasing frequency and often the girl accompanied the rancher back to his farm, spending whole days sometimes, riding with him about the plantation and watching his army of hands plant or harvest the great potato, cotton and corn crops. Affairs went on thus for nearly three years. Then came reports that the couple were to be married soon, and gossip heard about town was to the effect that the contemplated nuptials should not be long deferred.

But for some reason or other the marriage didn't take place and it became necessary for the young woman to make a trip to St. Louis. So, accompanied by Alexander, who paid all expenses, she arrived in the city in October, 1920, and was placed in a sanitarium in the 4400 block of Laclede avenue, where, on Nov. 13, a girl baby was born. That little girl was Ida Georgine, though it was not for several days that she was to acquire that name and the foster parents who have put up such a determined fight to keep her.



Principals in the recent court fight to have the adoption of Ida Georgine Boening set aside. At left, above, is the unwed mother, and at right, the foster mother, each shown holding the child which was the cause of the controversy. In the center is a close-up of Ida Georgine, or Mildred Jo, as she now is called. Below is a snapshot of the late Joseph Alexander, millionaire "potato king," who, Miss Dunlap alleges, is the baby's father. Suit has been filed at Muskogee to have the child declared his legitimate daughter and sole heir to his estate.

Due to a slight upset of expectations, it seems, the name Joseph Jr., which Miss Dunlap told a reporter that she and Alexander had decided upon for the baby, wouldn't quite fit the recipient and had to be altered to Mildred Jo, much to the disappointment of the father. Then Alexander was forced by a sudden turn of misfortune to return home and on Nov. 24 the adoption by the Boenings was effected, whereupon the name Mildred Jo was discarded for that of Ida Georgine.

Two Different Stories of the Adoption

That adoption and the circumstances attending it were the factors upon which the recent contest was based and upon which Judge Hartmann ruled that Ida Georgine is to go back to her mother.

Just what the circumstances really were depends on which side is telling the story—and both were supported by numerous witnesses at the trial—but the story that carried most weight with the Judge was that of the mother. Accepting it, there was nothing for him to do but set aside the adoption, notwithstanding the devotion with which the foster mother had cared for the baby from the time she was a sickly infant 11 days old and without a stitch of clothing to her little back.

The mother declares that the adoption came about through a misunderstanding and that in the delirium from which she was suffering at the time she didn't realize what she was doing when she consented to give up the baby.

Mrs. Boening, on the other hand, is just as certain that she did and insists that Miss Dunlap seemed perfectly rational when she signed the adoption papers. In the trial she tried to show, too, that the mother had arranged with Alexander for a money consideration to leave the child in St. Louis.

Miss Dunlap vehemently denies that either she or Alexander wanted to get rid of the baby or that she received any money settlement for leaving it here. Her understanding was, she told a reporter, that the baby was to be left in charge of the hospital authorities for a period of three months, during which time an operation was to be performed to correct a slight deformity in the child's foot. The paper she signed, she declared, she thought was a document giving her consent to leaving the child in St. Louis, where she was to be "boarded out" until time for the operation.

At any rate, the mother went back in a few days to Van Buren, where she and Alexander planned to carry out their intention of getting married before the baby should be ready to be brought home. Then Alexander became ill and he never recovered, his death occurring on Feb. 9, 1921, from spinal meningitis following a mastoid infection.

Foster Parents Insist on Rights

After the funeral and when the three months' period had expired, Miss Dunlap related, she returned to St. Louis and, calling at the hospital for her baby, learned for the first time that it had been adopted by the Boenings. She then went immediately to them, she said, offering to reimburse them for all expenses incurred in the care of the child, but was met by a flat refusal to part with the little one. It was then that she got the only glimpse of the baby that she had had since she was born.

"Finally," she said, "I went back home, with the understanding that the Boenings were to take under consideration the surrender of the baby, and I frequently wrote to them, but my letters were returned unopened, as was a little gift that I sent the baby on her first birthday. I made three more trips to St. Louis within the year, too, but never was able to get possession of my little girl or even to see her. I didn't have money enough to bring court action then. Mr. Alexander was always good and kind to me during his life and gave me plenty of money, but in his will, which was a hastily arranged affair, just before his death, nothing was left to me. I had to file a claim against the estate and wait for action on it before I could get funds to sue for recovery of the child."

The claim to which Miss Dunlap referred was for $78,000 and was filed in Lonoke County, Ark., on Nov. 29, 1921. It was settled out of court by compromise, which is understood to have been for about $35,000, and Miss Dunlap immediately brought suit for the recovery of the child. Then, on Dec. 20, last, counsel for both parties united in action at Muskogee to have the baby declared the heir of Alexander.

But Mrs. Boening has her side of the story to tell, also, and it is a pathetic one. The joy of the mother at recovering her baby is matched only by the sorrow that descends upon the Boening household as little Ida Georgine leaves, to be Ida Georgine no longer.

How the Adoption Came About

Seen by a reporter just before the surrender of the little girl, Mrs. Boening, who is much older than Miss Dunlap, gave, between sobs, her account of the adoption and told of her attachment for Ida Georgine.

JULIA WOODS' ROMANCES AND THE COURT FIGHT TO WHICH THEY LED

City society publication, started the Smart Set venture shortly after his return to New York—with the money his alienation suit had brought from Dr. Woods. It failed financially, but the magazine was continued. Grissom also wrote for Puck and various other publications. He died not long after his Smart Set enterprise ran on the rocks, and a modest tombstone marks his burial place in the Independence cemetery. Others took up the Smart Set and made of it a successful publication, dedicated to cynicism and art, along lines that Grissom originally designed.

Julia Woods' second experiment in matrimony came not long after her divorce from Grissom. It was one which had the complete approval of her family. Dr. Woods regarded Jesse Rubey, his nephew, as a man "eminently sane and sensible" and able to take care of Julia. The couple were married in 1900 and were not divorced until March, 1919, although they had been separated several months before that time.

Much of their married life was spent in a villa near Rome. There a second daughter, Ruth Rubey, now 14 years old, was born.

Mrs. Rubey was living abroad at the time of her father's death, July 5, 1917, at Excelsior Springs. She remained in this country most of the time thereafter.

During his later years, Dr. Woods with his wife had spent much of his time at Excelsior Springs, where he lived first in a simple cottage and later at the Elms Hotel. The Woods family came to regard Excelsior Springs as their home.

Mrs. Woods died early in 1918. By the terms of her will and by that of her husband, the daughter, Julia, came into possession of the income from an estate estimated at about $500,000. Her estate consists of what she accumulated out of this together with some property she had acuired before, amounting to not more than $500,000 and probably considerably less.

The bulk of Dr. Woods' estate had been put in a trust fund for his two granddaughters, Mrs. Kemper and Ruth Rubey. He also had left liberal gifts to Williams Woods College, which he had established and to a large extent financed.

The year 1919 brought another marital adventure to Julia Woods Rubey. In March of that year she obtained a divorce from Rubey charging general indignities and stating that his love for her had cooled. She also said her husband had made false accusations against her.

Kansas City gossip at that time had it a new romance had captivated Mrs. Rubey's heart and her immediate marriage to Frank M. Dickinson was expected.

Dickinson was the type of man women describe as "interesting looking." He was tall, slender, dark, smooth shaven and, like Arthur Grissom, a patron of the arts.

Mrs. Rubey is said to have met him while he was overseeing the decorating of her Kansas City home. He had appeared in various amateur theatricals with the fashionable Comedy Club in Kansas City.

However, it was not until in September of 1919, six months following her divorce from Rubey, that Mrs. Rubey married Dickinson at Stamford, Conn.

The couple went abroad to live in the Rubey villa in Italy.

Age Did Not Enrich His Love.

However, Mrs. Dickinson again found that, unlike her parents' lives, age did not "enrich love," and nine months after her marriage, June 25, 1920, she divorced Dickinson, obtaining her decree at Bridgeport, Conn.

Now comes upon the scene another romantic figure, George Westlain Davies, known on the opera stage as Giorgio Salvatore.

Davies, who maintained music studios in St. Louis and New York, had met Mrs. Julia Woods Grissom-Rubey-Dickinson in Rome. The couple were married in 1921 at Stamford, Conn. Davies was about 40 years old, Mrs. Davies was approaching 50. She was still a handsome woman, always exquisitely and gorgeously gowned.

Mr. and Mrs. Davies were to go to her Italian villa in the fall of that year. Oct. 19, Mrs. Davies made a will in which she named her new husband as her principal beneficiary. In this will she left many minor bequests to relatives and left $30,000 to provide a memorial hospital to her father at Excelsior Springs.

"Capt." Harry Lello Zeitun, picturesque old world adventurer of Arabian origin, was the last principal to step upon the stage of Julia Woods' life drama.

His method of appearance and his relationship to Mr. and Mrs. Davies bring forth different stories.

This much is agreed upon—Zeitun first met Davies in the lobby of the Excelsior Hotel in Rome, where the Davies were staying in the winter of 1921.

Zeitun's Story of Their Meeting.

Zeitun says they met over the drinks. Davies says the Londoner sought him out and complained of being lonely and later forced an introduction to Mrs. Davies when he met her and her husband on an elevator.

Mrs. Davies was in ill health. Davies was called to the United States on affairs in connection with his wife's interest in Dr. Woods' estate. "Capt." Zeitun accompanied him to the station in Rome, and, according to Davies, borrowed several hundred dollars from him, on the plea of urgent necessity due to the failure of a remittance to arrive from London.

Zeitun went back to cheer Mrs. Davies' loneliness. Shortly afterward, according to the husband, cables from Mrs. Davies ceased to come to him.

Rome social circles in which she moved were given a shock when the American heiress, in the absence of her husband, left for London with the "Captain" whom she had employed as her secretary at a salary of $500 a month.

It was in London that Mrs. Davies made two alleged wills cutting off her husband and making Zeitun her beneficiary.

Davies returned to Rome and once more stirred society there by instituting a search for his wife. He went on to London and failed to find her. He heard she had sailed. He followed her to New York, where a reconciliation took place late in the summer of 1921. Davies and his wife came on to Excelsior Springs, where they maintained an apartment and servants at the Elms Hotel. Davies later returned to New York in the fall for appearance in grand opera. He was called back to Excelsior Springs early in December by the critical illness of his wife. She died Dec. 11 of last year at the Elms Hotel. A short time previously a guardian had been appointed to handle her affairs as the result of her mental condition.

The final story of Julia Woods' varying life and experiences will be told in the Clay County courts.

Harry Zeitun has announced in London that he proposes to come to this country, it is said, to fight out his claims with the American opera singer for the heiress' estate.

Whether or not Zeitun is a heroic figure in the drama, as he now pretends, then will be determined.

His portraits show him a dashing dandy, hat set rakishly on his head, gloves and cane held nonchalantly in one hand. He has piercing black eyes and a black mustache. Born in Tunis, West Africa, of Arabic parentage, he claims a thrillingly romantic career as a Captain in the British army and as a detective of Scotland Yard. It was a detective mission for a member of the British nobility that took him to Rome, he says. Mrs. Davies was attracted to him because he was a detective, and she employed him to do some private investigating for her, he says. Their friendship was platonic, he maintains, and the news that he was a beneficiary in her will came as a surprise.

Davies, on the other hand, and his attorney, Thomas O. Stokes of St. Louis, say they will prove that Zeitun is an unscrupulous adventurer who frequented European resorts to prey upon the hearts of wealthy elderly and impressionable women. Davies charges that the Egyptian by hypnotism and the "use of a strange white powder," influenced Mrs. Davies to do his bidding, and that at the same time he made "passionate love" to her.

JULIA WOODS' ROMANCES AND THE COURT FIGHT TO WHICH THEY LED

Zeitun Only Teasing His Creditors.

Zeitun, who was an interpreter in a London Police Court, also is an undischarged bankrupt, and London creditors are anxiously watching his efforts to obtain a share in the estate of the Missouri banker. The Fleet street reports have it that Mrs. Davies' wealth varies from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000. One London publisher, W. B. Tattershall, was so interested as to journey from London to Excelsior Springs in behalf of Capt. Zeitun, who had been regaling the readers of the London Sketch with his life story which he highly romanticized. However, the London editor and Zeitun's creditors understand by this time that Mrs. Davies' estate alone is involved and it will not run $600,000, if that much. All she had from the Woods estate was an income, and that ceased with his death.

When the case comes to trial in Liberty, the county seat of Clay County, depositions will be introduced from the East, from London, Rome and varying parts of the world by the contestants in their efforts to prove their claims.

If Zeitun's wills are produced the final issue will center around the mental responsibility of Mrs. Davies at the time she made them.

Only 50 when she died, the once beautiful Julia Woods had become broken in health and in mind. Her life, "50 years of Europe," that of her parents, a "cycle of Cathay." Lawyers will write the finis to the dramatic succession of romances of this Missouri belle and heiress and probably get most of what is left of her estate.

UNWED MOTHER WINS BACK LOVE - CHILD FROM ADOPTION

"We never had a child of our own," she said, "and for a long time we thought of adopting one. About four years ago we began watching the advertisements and answered one, but got no reply. Then, two years later, in November, 1920, we got a letter from a doctor at a sanitarium on Laclede avenue, saying that there was a baby girl in the hospital that we could have, and we went to investigate the matter at once.

"There she was, a weak, sickly little thing, with a twisted foot, without a name, so far as we knew, and without a rag of clothing. I had to buy clothes for her before I could even bring her home, but I was glad to do that, for I was taking her for love, and I planned that I would never let her know that she had no name to begin with. We called her Ida Georgine Boening.

"I'll never believe that Miss Dunlap was too ill to know what she was doing when she gave her consent to the adoption. In a few days she was able to go home, and she didn't make any further provision for the baby before she left. Then, three months later, she came back here offering me money to give up Ida Georgine. I told her I took the baby for love and wouldn't give her up for money. I have had all the trouble of bringing her through babyhood and I have done all for her that any mother could do. Many has been the time that I have walked the floor with her at night and rocked her to sleep, for she was a mighty sick baby when I got her. Things will never be the same without her. She has been about the only joy in our household, for my husband has been sick for more than a year and at times is in the hospital. He is attached to Ida Georgine just as I am and it will be lonely for him, too, when she is gone."

Before his illness, Boening was a huckster, but for a year and a half has been unable to work. The family resides in a small story and a half frame residence, of which they occupy the lower floor, renting out the second. Mrs. Boening's mother, Mrs. Minnie Weber, a woman of some means, lives across the street.

A New Name and a New Mother.

"We haven't as much money as the mother probably has," Mrs. Boening continued, "but we have enough to take good care of Ida Georgine and educate her. If I had to start out without a cent and without a home and work by the day to support her, I would be glad to do it if they would let me keep her. If I were sure that I could win I would appeal the case, but now that this ruling is against me it seems unlikely that I could win on an appeal and that would only prolong the case. In the meantime, the child would be growing older and it would be harder for her to go away than it is now. Even now it will be hard enough for her. She is a bright little thing and can tell you her name, Ida Georgine Boening, as well as anybody and knows where she lives. Now she will have to learn a new name and a new mother, but if she has to go it is better that she go now while she is small and can forget those she loves now."

Of course, her mother will let her come back to see you, the reporter suggested.

"I hardly hope for it," Mrs. Boening replied with some bitterness. "They will try to make her forget all of us and the home of her babyhood, and, after all, it may be the best for her. To remember would only make it harder for her to adjust herself to her new home. But

Syrup Pepsin Loved By Hosts of Babies

Half a teaspoonful will make a fretful youngster happy and playful

THE mother has her choice of many remedies for her baby's minor ills, but she should be careful which remedy she selects lest she do the child harm. What might be safe for herself may do injury to an infant. You will find that if the little one cries and doesn't want to play that its bowels are constipated. First look carefully to the diet and give the child one-half teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You will then see results in a few hours. You will not have to force it on babies or children: they actually ask for it, it is so pleasant-tasting and free from griping.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. The ingredients are stated on the package. It is a mild, gentle vegetable laxative that everyone finds effective and pleasant. It is better for you and yours than purgatives, coal-tar drugs, or salt waters and powders, which may concentrate the blood and dry up the skin; or mercurial calomel, which may salivate and loosen the teeth.

Use a safe laxative like Syrup Pepsin, and especially for the children, for invalids, growing girls, nursing mothers, elderly people, and persons recently operated upon who need bowel action with the least strain. Mrs. Lillian Brenington of Woodruff, S. C., always gives her children Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and Mrs. A. E. Blondin of Muskegon, Mich., will not have any other laxative in her home. Your druggist will supply you, and it only costs a cent a dose. Try it in constipation, colic, biliousness, flatulency, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Pure Food Containers

Madam, as you often say, "straws show which way the wind blows," Little things do tell big truths. And your Grocer's ambition to give you 100% service is reflected in the terse, friendly little "Victory Service Signs" which you see hanging in his store.

Here is one of them, reproduced in miniature. It's typical:

Purity!
This Store takes just as much pains to keep groceries pure and clean from counter to kitchen, as to buy them clean in the first place. That's why we protect them in clean, Sanitary VICTORY FOOD CONTAINERS

Victory Food Containers come in three popular brands. All three reach the dealer in sanitary, sealed cartons, as pictured below.

"Classic" Square
Best of the square containers on the market today.

"Kant-Tear"
Universal Standing Automatic.

"Pedigree"
Universal Standing Automatic. Known to the trade as "The Food Container De Luxe."

Your Grocer used to have to put up with tattered, dilapidated bundles of paper bags, but Victory Food Containers have thrown old methods into the discard. Instead of intrusting these clean, fresh food containers to ordinary wrapping paper and string, the Victory factory makes a special point of packing them in sealed, sanitary shipping cartons.

A great convenience and saving to your Grocer—and an added protection to you.

Look for the Victory Signs at your Grocer's—they are signs of up-to-date standards and service.

UNWED MOTHER WINS BACK LOVE - CHILD FROM ADOPTION

if she ever needs a home and wants to come back, she shall have it here. I will give back all her toys and playthings and the two insurance policies I have taken out on her if her mother wants them. It is only for her own good that I am willing to part with her. Some day she might blame me if I didn't. I would never part with her for money. They tried to show at the trial that I offered to surrender her for $10,000, but that is ridiculous. I wouldn't give her up for any sum.

"It will be terrible to see her cry, as she will do when they come for her. Since the trial I have told her that she is going away with a new mamma and she is afraid of everybody that comes on the place."

While Mrs. Boening talked, the little girl, unaware of the conflict of hearts raging over her, slept beside a big new doll.

Real Mother's Plan for Baby.

Thus as the contest ends, on one side is heard a note of joy; on the other the voice of sorrow.

"It is the happiest day of my life," says Miss Dunlap.

"My home and life are ruined, broken up," sobs Mrs. Boening.

In a few days the mother and Ida Georgine, now called Mildred, will be on their way back to Van Buren, where they will reside in a home that Miss Dunlap has prepared. There they will await the outcome of the suit that is expected to establish the baby's right to her father's estate.

"My one aim," the mother says, "is to give my little girl an education and a chance in life that I didn't have. My mother died when I was 2 years old and my father when I was 3. From that time on until I was 14 I lived with my aunt and since then have had to make my own living, and sometimes it was not easy. I know what hardship in the life of a young girl means and I am going to see that my Mildred does not have to suffer as I suffered. On my place in Van Buren I have lots of little chickens and ducklings and with these as pets, and the new toys I have already bought for her, I am certain that she won't be long in getting adapted to the new surroundings."

How Alexander's Fortune Was Made.

The fortune of Alexander to which the little girl hopes to establish her right as his daughter, was made chiefly in the production of potatoes on the rich bottom land just west of Fort Smith on the Oklahoma side of the boundary line. Starting with a 50-acre allotment he received from the Government because of his Cherokee blood, Alexander gradually built up his holdings from his potato profits until he owned something like 10,000 acres of the fertile loam, deposited by the overflows of the Arkansas River.

Then, not satisfied with his acreage, he organized and carried out a drainage project that reclaimed several thousand acres of land formerly covered by a grassy lake, once known as a sportsman's paradise because of the great flocks of game fowl it attracted in the shooting season. All of this land is now in cultivation and is affected by the suit filed at Muskogee.

Edgar H. McCulloch, attorney for Miss Dunlap in the recent action to recover the child, said that he did not know what arrangement would be made with the Boenings' counsel for carrying out the inheritance suit. The Boenings were represented by E. A. Halter.

Alexander Figured in Kidnaping Case.

Alexander, the "potato king," it will be recalled, figured prominently in the news here in October, 1920, in connection with a kidnaping case, in which he was alleged to have been held a prisoner at a house on the Olive street road for five days by a gang who forced him to sign a check for $25,000. His escape, however, frustrated the plans of his captors and he succeeded in stopping payment on the check.

According to his story told to the police at that time, he had come here "to place a young woman in a private hospital." This young woman is now known to have been Audie Dunlap. He returned home, he said, but almost immediately was called back by mysterious telegrams saying that there was "trouble on Laclede avenue."

On his arrival at Union Station, he related, several men met him and then took him, bound, to a house on the Olive street road near the Walton road. There, under the threat of death, he said, he was forced to draw a check payable to Mrs. Margaret Taber, of 724 Bayard avenue, a woman acquaintance who was also held prisoner at the house. Mrs. Taber later told a similar story of being kidnaped and forced to deposit the check in the Savings Trust Co. at Delmar boulevard and Aubert avenue.

It was early on the morning of Oct. 30, 1920, that Alexander's remarkable story of the kidnaping became public when he was found wandering at 3 a. m. on the Olive street road barefoot and in his night clothing after escaping from his captors while his guard slept. He was taken to the home of Sheriff Bopp in Clayton where he related his experiences and a search for the captors was begun but none of the gang was ever apprehended. Mrs. Taber, according to her story, was released by the gang after Alexander escaped.

SIBERIAN FLAX PRODUCTION

By the Associated Press.

VLADIVOSTOK, May 28.—Energetic steps are being taken by the Government to increase the number of acres under flax in the Primoria. The country is pre-eminently suited for this fiber, and it is hoped thus to win back the markets which Russia once had.

The Russian authorities state that three-fifths of the former flax used in the markets of the world was exported from Russia and, with the vast amount of land at present lying uncultivated in the Russian Far East flax can be produced so cheaply here that it will be able to compete favorably with the output of all other countries.

FOUND—THE STORY OF THE 2 MISSING YEARS IN JESSE JAMES' LIFE

"Pretty fair," said White with elaborate casualness.

Howard turned to a trunk and lifted from it a box and raised the lid. The Sheriff's eyes popped. It was full of watches and jewelry. There was a man's fine double-case watch and a lady's watch set with diamonds, rings, breastpins and a lot of things that White did not know the names of. The display made the watch which had been his pride look like a Waterbury. He voiced his amazement and wanted to know why Howard and his wife did not wear the watches and jewelry.

"Oh," said Howard, "we used to sport these things when we were younger but we don't care for them now."

On Sunday he took his family and went to church and joined with the brethren in song and praise. And, which is perhaps more to the point, when the hat was passed he gave liberally, as he became a leading man of the community. If he sat near the door and kept one eye leveled in that direction it was no more than the natural prudence of a man who might be called upon at any moment to give an account of his stewardship of fine watches and jewelry and the other accumulations of an adventurous and haphazard career.

Afraid of Being Shot in the Back.

He was squeamish about being shot in the back. Fishing one day under a steep river bank, and preoccupied as a fisherman is prone to become, he did not note the approach of another fisherman, behind him, until the other was very close. He sprang up then, with his hand on his ready pistol, only to find himself confronting a friend. But it upset him.

"Why," he said, "you could have shot me in the back."

As if there was any reason for one honest fisherman to shoot another honest fisherman in the back.

There was a dispute with another citizen over payment for some cattle and this citizen went in search of him, with a double-barrel shotgun across his lap, and, when he met up with Citizen Howard, he berated that person in vernacular suited to his own view of the merits of the case. Howard walked back and forth, keeping a wary eye on the shotgun. When it came to his turn to talk he said:

"All I ask of you is that you do not shoot me in the back."

Not a doubt but that he was laughing in his sleeve, thinking of the fat chance that man would have to shoot him in the back when he had his eye on that shotgun. Just as fat a chance as Bob Ford would have had, a few years later, if Jesse James had been looking Ford's way.

But there is a limit to the cussings that a man will take, just because he happens to be incognito. Howard reached his limit when he got into a dispute at the fair grounds with a man from Hickman, whose name has been lost to fame, but who is remembered as the owner of the gray horse which competed with "Red Fox." This man used speech which no gentleman could abide, even if he did go to church on Sunday. Not more than once, anyway. Howard mounted his horse, with his saddlebags under him and his hand under his saddlebags and spurred to where the man from Hickman was standing. There was no laughter in his eyes now. It was Jesse James speaking. "You gave me a cussin' just now," he said. "I guess you didn't know who you was cussin.' Now cuss me again."

Knew Tricks of Racing Game.

Death lay in wait under the flap of Jesse James' saddlebags, for the man from Hickman, who seemed to sense it and held his peace. With a little sniff of contempt Jesse James rode away.

It is as a horseman, riding "Red Fox" at the county fairs, that Howard is best remembered in this and adjoining counties. He was a lithe, handsome fellow, in spite of chin whiskers which would have ruined a less virile face, and he rode like a Centaur. Racing was serious business with him. He stood up for his rights, and there is a suspicion now that he knew some of the tricks of the trade. Uncle Dan and Uncle Jake, sitting on the porch at Uncle Dan's were talking about one of the races at the fair grounds.

"Did you see that race?" asked Uncle Dan of Uncle Jake.

"I was looking right at it," answered Uncle Jake.

Howard lost that race and as soon as he could check "Red Fox" he came tearing back shouting: "Hold that stake. There was no drum."

Instead of a gong the starter used a drum, which he whacked as the signal to go. Howard insisted that W. H. McCutcheon, who was doing the starting, had not whacked it that time. McCutcheon supposed he had whacked it mechanically, as was his wont when the horses passed the wire well bunched, and in all probability he had, but for the life of him he could not remember whether

WHY BE FAT?

Would You Like to Lose a Pound a Day? Then Try the New Simple Way Which Thousands Say Is Giving Them the Slender, Graceful Figure Dictated by Fashion—No Exercise or Starvation Dieting.

Excess weight or fat, its attendant embarrassments and danger to the heart need be dreaded no longer, since the underlying cause of most cases has been revealed through the investigation of several widely known American and European scientists. Now it is possible for some of the worst cases to start reducing at the rate of a half pound to a pound a day through the use of a new formula which is meeting with wide success.

Mrs. Gertrude Williams, a well-known resident of Virginia, says, "I not only lost forty-one pounds the first month, but feel like a new person." In fact hundreds of users say that their health is vastly improved, in addition to the pleasing loss of weight.

This treatment, which is known as Rid-O-Fat, is easily used at home, and seems to give remarkable results for both men and women of all ages. No exercise or starvation diet is necessary, as you merely take one pleasant tablet after each meal. After you have lost all you wish, simply stop taking the treatment.

To prove that this wonderful formula will succeed where everything else has failed, the Whinton Laboratories, 2106 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., offer to send a free sample under plain wrapper and postpaid to anyone who will write for it. In fact the free treatment is really more than a sample, as it is usually sufficient to bring a reduction of several pounds.

As this is an introductory offer, which does not obligate you in any way and never costs anything, you should write for your free supply today. All correspondence considered strictly confidential.

FOUND—THE STORY OF THE 3 MISSING YEARS IN JESSE JAMES' LIFE

he had. Neither could anybody else. So Howard had his way and the race was run over and he won it.

There is another story, so little to Citizen Howard's credit as a sportsman that his old friends hope it is not true. Being a bandit and killing a man now and then is one thing, but cheating in a horse race is quite another thing. Well, the story is that "Red Fox" had a way of falling sometimes in a race. A match was arranged between the Fox and the white horse from Hickman. "Red Fox" was the favorite. The track was a little heavy. Howard was riding his horse. Out of the quarter stretch "Red Fox" was well in the lead. But before the track had been half circled "Red Fox" stumbled and fell to his knees and Howard went over his head. The gray swerved and went past and won the race. There was talk that Howard had bet on the gray, but to this day it has not been proven.

Did He Cheat in This Horse Race?

The men who played poker with him, remembering the consistency with which he lost, cannot bring themselves to believe that he ever cheated in a horse race. He liked nothing better than a friendly game with Henry Harris and J. C. Nelson and Jeff Forrest and Dave Rudolph and John Murray and maybe a few others. It was something of a puzzle to the others that he was so fond of a game that he played so poorly. He hardly ever won anything and he laughed at his lossses.

With Frank James, who came sometimes to visit his brother and was introduced as B. J. Woodson, it was different. Although Frank looked like a preacher he played poker like a politician and the local members of the poker coterie always felt better though they had less money after he went away.

Cole Younger, too, spent part of his time here. Howard had a mare, "Maddox," younger than "Red Fox," which was a bad starter. Younger, known as Roddy, was the only one who could handle her and he always rode her when she raced.

If Howard was a poor poker player, he was a skillful bettor on the races. It suited him, maybe in remembrance of that $10 that Henry Harris loaned him when his goods came, to "stand in" with him in the betting game. When the fair was going on Howard would say to Harris: "I'll stand in with you today." "All right," Harris would say, and they would go their ways and bet, each according to his own judgment, and at the end of the day they would get together and divide their winnings, if they had won, and split their losses if they had lost. Almost always they won and most of the winnings were made by Howard.

In his business dealings Howard seems to have been square with everybody but E. M. Cooley. He had bought some cattle from Cooley and had given a mortgage on his horses to secure a balance of $500. He had lived on the Link farm for two years and had taken it for another year

HOW TO GIVE YOURSELF A PERFECT MASSAGE AT HOME EASILY NOW

Beauty Expert Gives Simple Way to Keep the Face Lovely and Cheeks Rosy.

The impression you make at the party, dance or when you meet new acquaintances depends almost entirely on your complexion. Most any fault is overcome by a clear, rosy, pleasing and overwhelming complexion. Therefore follow this advice, and benefit by the experience of thousands of girls and women who are doing it.

First, clean your skin thoroughly by using Black and White Cleansing Cream. When all the powder and accumulated dirt has been rubbed out, wring out a towel in water as hot as your hands can stand. Put this over the face and let it steam for a few seconds. Repeat this several times. Then rub into the skin a little Cold Cream with a circular motion of the finger tips. Wipe off that which is not quickly absorbed by the pores, and rinse the face with cold water. This will close the pores, keep in all the oils which the Cold Cream supplies to the skin, and starts the circulation in your face which brings out the roses in your cheeks.

Now use a little Black and White Peroxide Cream as a protection for just what you have done and as a base for your powder. Get your looking glass and see what a lovely, youthful and charming complexion you have and you didn't have to go to an expensive Beauty Parlor, or take up near as much of your time as some women do who use expensive treatments, but don't get any better results than you will here

SOVIET COMMISSAR BEATEN TO DEATH BY RUSSIAN PEASANTS

Tax Collector, Who Had Them Flogged, Tortured for Five Hours With 500 Lashes.

(Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.)

BERLIN, June 1.—The Russian peasants may be communists when it comes to getting rid of autocratic government, but they have no love for a Czar's knout when disguised as a commissar's lash. The peasants of the Province of Tamboff demonstrated this fact the other day, when Comrade Vinokuroff appeared with a demand for the payment of taxes past due. They balked and Comrade Vinokuroff ordered some of Comrade Trotzky's cavalrymen to flog the recalcitrant peasants.

When the order was executed, the peasants revolted and overpowered the soldiers. The local soviet tried the commissar and sentenced him to be beaten to death by the peasants who had been flogged by his orders.

Vinokuroff received 500 lashes and was eight times restored to consciousness by cold water before, after five hours' torture, he died.

and everybody thought he was going to be a permanent resident.

Identity Established Through Dead Twins.

Joy and sorrow had come to Big Bottom, joy when twins were born and sorrow when they died. They sleep under the apple trees, with a stone marking the spot.

But the time came, as it was certain to come, for Howard, farmer, to give up his life of gentlemanly enjoyment, and become again the bandit, with his hand against every man and the hands of all men against him. In the middle of winter and in the middle of the coldest night of that winter he returned from Memphis and left the train at Johnsonville and before daylight Big Bottom was evacuated and his wagons, a goodly caravan, rumbled through Waverly on the way to Nashville.

He did not take the trouble to pay Cooley for the cattle, either because, as Jesse James, he did not feel bound to discharge the obligations of Mr. Howard, or because, as has been suggested, he had a grudge against Cooley and took that way of getting even.

It was not until Jesse James was killed at St. Joseph, Mo., in April, 1882, that anybody here suspected that Humphreys County had been entertaining the bandit unawares. His picture, printed then in the Nashville papers, was instantly recognized. Confirmation has accumulated through the years. When Frank James was at Dixon with a wild West show Henry Harris and others went over to see him and renewed acquaintance with the poker player who looked like a preacher and played like a politician.

J. Ben Fuqua, from time to time, had correspondence with relatives and associates of Jesse James which removed all doubt, if there was any, about his identity. He has a letter from Jesse James Jr. of Kansas City, in part as follows:

"I know that my father lived on a farm some place in the neighborhood of Nashville, Tenn., in about the years 1876, 1877, 1878 and 1879. He lived in Nashville some time during the year of 1875. He also lived in Nashville, I believe, during the winter of 1879 and 1880. He went under the name of Tom Howard. My uncle went under the name of Ben Woodson. I do not know whether the farm on which he lived was situated in Humphreys County, but I do know that there were two children, same being twins, born on said farm. They lived but a few weeks. I can remember the death of said twins, but I cannot remember where they were buried. He requested that the graves be cared for.

So the old timers, cherishing the memory of a man who walked worthily among them, no matter what his faults may have been at other times and places, oddly enough feel a certain pride that America's greatest bandit saw fit to honor them by dwelling among them for a while.

ELIMINATION OF MILWAUKEE PUBLIC DEBT IS UNDERTAKEN

Estimated That City Tax Rate Will Be Reduced One-Third in 40 Years.

MADISON, Wis., June 23. — The gradual elimination of its public debt with a consequent reduction of taxes, is to be undertaken by the City of Milwaukee as the result of the enactment by the Wisconisn Legislature of a bill creating a public debt amortization fund. The Wisconsin city is said to be the first in the United States to take such a step.

Under the new Milwaukee plan the city is compelled annually to set aside $250,000. This growing fund is allowed to accumulate with compound interest until it reaches an amount equal to three-fourths of the city's bonded indebtedness. After that time, the law provides, three-fourths of the annual income from the accumulated fund is paid to the city treasury, with the principal still allowed to grow by the amount of the city's contribution and one-fourth of the interest.

To start the plan the present administration has deposited $400,000 in the amortization fund. Another $250,000 is to be deposited next January 1. With this rate continued, it is estimated that Milwaukee's debt will disappear in 40 years, and the city tax rate will have been reduced one-third.

MRS. DWYER BUYS CORNER AT 9TH AND MARKET STREETS

Reported to Have Declined $40,000 for Property She Bought for Approximately $35,000.

ATTENTION DRAWN TO THOROUGHFARE

Woman Has Long Record of Speculative Ventures in Real Estate, Virtually All Yielding Profit.

By Berry Moore.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dwyer is reported to have declined an offer of $40,000 for the southwest corner of Ninth and Market streets, which she bought several days ago for approximately $35,000. The offer is noteworthy as being virtually equivalent to a profit of $5000 overnight.

Mrs. Dwyer acquired the corner on a basis of $1000 a foot for the Market street frontage, while the offer of $40,000 is at the rate of more than $1400 a foot, which is important as showing a decided change of sentiment towards this thoroughfare, which was devoid of interest prior to the passage of the $88,000,000 bond issue, which provides for the widening of this thoroughfare from Jefferson avenue to Fourth street.

Third Owner in Month.

This is the second time that this corner has changed hands within the last month, Mrs. Dwyer having made the purchase from Howard Pratt, who had just acquired it from a client of the Mercantile Trust Co. The resale to Mrs. Dwyer was made at a slight profit, she having signed earnest money contracts with Pratt before he had received the deed to the property.

The John P. Herrmann Jr. Real Estate Co. acted for Pratt in both transactions. Mrs. Dwyer was represented by the Mullen-Walters Real Estate Co., at whose instance she made the purchase.

The site has a frontage on Market street of 35 feet by a depth on Ninth street of 135 feet, and is improved with two three-story buildings on Market, and tenements with five stores on Ninth.

Mrs. Dwyer has a long record of speculative adventures in the real estate field, virtually all of which have been vindicated by large profits. These included the purchase a number of years ago of the northeast corner of Jefferson avenue and Pine street, occupied by the former Loretto School building, which she recently sold to Frank Yawitz at a good profit. Both transactions were made through the Mercantile Trust Co.

Draws Attention to District.

The fact that Mrs. Dwyer has bought on Market street doubtless will bestir interest in this thoroughfare on the part of both speculators and investors, according to real estate men. She is a woman of keen perception.

The 12-story Pontiac Building at the northwest corner of Seventh and Market streets, whose erection was promoted by the John P. Herrmann Jr. Real Estate Co., and the 12-story American Hotel at the northeast corner of Seventh and Market streets, and the American Hotel Annex at the northetst carner of Sixth and Market streets, erected by the Southern Realty Co., controlled by the Cella interests, have been the only large structures to be erected on Market street during the last 25 years.

The Frank Dubinsky Realty Co. yesterday purchasbed, through John Grether & Co., 913-15 Market street, owned by Robert and Laura Kissack. The lot has a frontage on Market of 33½ feet by a depth of 106 feet to a 16-foot alley, and is improved with a three-story and basement building, 14,000 square feet, with a loading platform and electric elevator. The Dubinsky company represented a client in the purchase.

W. J. Bartling announced the sale of the northeast corner of Market street and Jefferson avenue, from the Rossier brothers to Samuel C. Abrams. The reported consideration was $50,000. The lot has 72½ feet on Market by 73½ feet on Jefferson. The improvements consist of five stores and five flats, the annual rental of which aggregates $7000.

Reports of real estate agents are replete with precedents for higher prices. This refers especially to ground valuations in both the city and the suburbs. A notable transaction of the week was that by which the Pierce Oil Co. acquired a lease of a vacant plot, 30x135 feet, at the southwest corner of Lindell and Theresa avenues, owned by Abe Slupsky. The lease provides for a rental of $1800 a year, or $150 a month, and was acquired for a filling station.

While the rental is regarded as extraordinary, the corner occupies a decidedly strategic position for the purpose for which it is acquired. The frontage on Lindell is 30 feet.

Purchase in Darstmoor.

The Automobile Gasoline Co. has purchased the southeast corner of the Clayton and North and South roads, which it has occupied under a lease as a filling station. The sale was made by the Joseph Darst Realty Co., which recently purchased 20 acres embracing this site from Mrs. Anne Gay Price, and now being marketed as a subdivision known as Darstmoor.

According to Darst, the Automobile company already has been offered an advance of $35 a front foot for its purchase, which has a frontage of 100 feet on Clayton road by a depth of 125 feet on the North and South road. The price paid was not disclosed.

Many automobiles pass at this intersection, which is obviously a business corner. Under the restrictions, business buildings will be permissible on the Clayton road frontage.

ST. LOUIS IMPROVEMENTS TO BE BROADCAST BY REALTORS

Delegation to National Convention, to Leave on Special Train Tuesday.

The 88 Million St. Louis delegation to the Realtors' National Convention in Cleveland will leave on a special train via the Big Four Tuesday evening. The delegation takes its name from the amount of the public improvement bond issue voted by the citizens of St. Louis last winter. The success of the bond issue was heralded over the country at the time the vote was cast, but the real estate men do not propose to let anyone forget or overlook it.

The badges, banners and souvenirs of the delegation which will be displayed in Cleveland, and distributed among realty men from other cities, will be set to the tune of Eighty-eight Million.

More than 100 members of the Real Estate Exchange, many of them accompanied by their wives, have made their plans to go to the convention. Accompanying the delegation will be the St. Louis Police Department band. What the band can do, in advertising St. Louis, after it gets to Cleveland, will be manifest to St. Louisans who saw the Joliet, Springfield, Mo., Independence, Kan., and other bands which were here last week for the Rotary convention.

Oreon E. Scott, of the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Real Estate Co., is to speak at the convention on "The Operation of a Renting Department."

A group which will go in advance of the St. Louis delegation includes A. R. Schollmeyer, Joseph M. Ebeling, Joseph W. Hannauer and W. W. Kay, executive secretary of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange. John J. Dowling is chairman of the delegation committee, which will have its headquarters at Hotel Cleveland, and John J. Reardon, E. M. Thornhill and Secretary Kay are the other members.

HOME BUILDING ACTIVE IN SOUTH KING'S HIGHWAY PLOT

Throughout the spring the Mederacke-Barth Real Estate and Investment Co. aggressively carried forward its scheme of high-grade improvements in South King's highway terrace, which has its start at 5000 South King's highway boulevard, with the result that today 85 per cent of all the improvements have been installed.

Grading of the land was completed some time ago, city sewers, water and concrete streets have been installed and the biulding of granitoid sidewalks is being pushed. Beautification of the terrace has not been overlooked and in front of each and every homesite are growing trees.

Over $250,000 in construction is now in progress, this list is comprised largely of flats and bungalows of the most modern type.. Of these, the Mederacke-Barth company is building five single apartment flats of the three-room and sun parlor efficiency type, which will have every modern feature and convenience. The Mederacke-Barth company is also in position to finance and erect homes for all lot purchasers who may desire those services on easy terms.

CONSTRUCTION COMPANY ERECTING TWENTY BUNGALOWS

The Geraghty Building Corporation have finished two of the 10 houses started in Arbor Terrace, at 6500 Natural Bridge road, and have started 10 more in Dartmoor at the corner of North and South road and Clayton road.

Stix, Baer & Fuller have furnished one of the completed bungalows now on exhibition in Arbor Terrace.

These bungalows are all stuccoed, inside walls lathed and plastered, hardwood floors throughout, have modern plumbing fixtures, up-to-date electric fixtures, built-in fire place, modern heater and a 7-foot granitoid basement.

The sample house will be open for inspection on Sunday.

WASHINGTON AVENUE BUILDING LEASED BY J. H. LOVENHART

Through Martin & Breitt, J. H. Lovenhart has acquired a long lease of the five-story building at the southwest corner of Sixth and Washington avenue, which will be subdivided and sublet.

The Remoh Jewelry Co., of which Lovenhart is proprietor, will retain the corner store of the building, which it has occupied for a number of years. The remainder of the first floor will be sublet, in connection with the upper floors, if desired.

The corner is one of the strongest on retail Washington avenue, being directly opposite the Grand Leader and in the thick of theretail district.

Martin & Breitt will have charge of the property.

ALBERT J. FRANCIS FXPECTS SOON TO SAIL FOR EUROPE

Albert J. Francis has departed for New York, preparatory to taking passage for Europe, where he will join friends on a tour. He is one of the largest apartment house owners in the city.

AUCTION OF LOTS TO CONTINUE TOMORROW

The auction sale of lots at Pasadena, a subdivision of Webster Groves, which started yesterday afternoon, will be continued tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Many lots were disposed of Friday and Saturday afternoons. Purchasers disclosed a notable number of plans for high-class homes and apartments. Many lots were also purchased as a speculation or as an investment, the plat being one of the most attractively situated in Webster Groves. The prices at which the lots are being knocked down include all street and sewer improvements. The sale is being conducted by the Alfred Baker Realty Co., with the Seber-Harter Co. of New York as auctioneers.

FEDERAL HOME BUILDING CORPORATION EXPANDS

Plans and specifications for 83 homes, flats, bungalows and six family apartments have been completed in the past three weeks by the architectural division of the Federal Home Building Corporation. These structures will be completed and ready for occupancy this fall. Among the buildings now under construction for clients are for: Charles O. Peterman, Thurman boulevard and DeTonty street; William P. Keller, 4140 Taft avenue; C. H. Steinkamp, 4887 Sacramento avenue; P. Scully, 4575 Cote Brilliante avenue; A. A. Goldbery, 5011 Bancroft avenue; W. J. Krupp, 6503 Morganford road; J. E. Denny, 4530 Clayton avenue; G. E. Vorderbruegge, 5223 Loughborough avenue; B. and M. Jansen, 4546 Ray avenue; A. W. Kehr, Alamo avenue and DeMun park, and George Schindler, 14 Sunset avenue, St. Louis county. The bungalows erected at San Francisco avenue and Marcus avenue for Mrs. Florence Kleinhoffer and Mrs. Frances Pewter will be ready for occupancy this week.

Eugene Paulus, superintendent of construction for the corporation, will take out building permits for a number of other buildings.

When the corporation moved its general offices from the Carleton building to the new Tower building, it was thought by Manager Barrett that it would have adequate space, but, owing to the increase of business, it was necessary last week to lease additional rooms for the drafting forces.

Federal Home Building Corporation
Complete Building Service
Contractors and Builders Not a Housing Trust

WHY not move into your OWN home this Fall? Rents will NOT be lower—this is an assured fact.

If you will let us build you a flat—your tenant will help pay your obligations. We can show you how a double flat under our plan will PAY for itself.

A NOMINAL first payment and small monthly installments, after your building is completed, is all that is needed to make you a LANDLORD.

We were the FIRST in the field to combine financing, drafting of plans and supervision of construction.

You do not EVEN have to OWN a lot—we will buy you a LOT anywhere you desire.

We can build BETTER and at a LOWER cost than any contractor in St. Louis.

We can save you MONEY because we eliminate many overhead charges that other contractors do not.

QUALITY, DISTINCTIVENESS AND ORIGINALITY are paramount features in our work of construction.

LAST DAYS

Of the Virginia Park building lot auction will be Sunday and Monday, June 24th and 25th. This will positively be the last days to take advantage of this great opportunity. Remember that this property is located in the fastest growing residential section of this city.

Every lot faces on a paved street, with sidewalks, sewer, water, gas and electricity. The improvements are now being completed in this section, and the entire cost is paid by the Paul Jones Realty Co. This property at absolute

AUCTION

Is going for a fraction of its real value. You take no risk as the homes that are located on this property are increasing the value of this property. Reasonable building restrictions protect you against a depreciation in value in the future. These lots are selling at from one-half to one-third of their actual value. The easy terms of one-tenth cash and the balance in easy monthly payments make it possible for anyone to buy. The Paul Jones Realty Co. will furnish up to $8000.00 to build a home when lots are paid for.

There will be a sale each day at 2:00 P. M. ON THE PROPERTY

To reach the property take Wellston or Hodiamont car to Wellston and take free car to Virginia Park or transfer to Lucas and Hunt Road.

By auto, drive Union Bl. or King's highway to Easton Av., then west to Lucas and Hunt Road and turn right to sign.

WE WILL BUILD ACCORDING TO YOUR IDEAS IN ANY OF THE VARIOUS SUBDIVISIONS OWNED BY THE JOSEPH DARST REALTY CO.

The grouping and building of 8 to 10 houses in one locality (we are now building 18 bungalows); the standardization of inside doors, hardware, plumbing fixtures, heating plants, etc.; the low price for which we paid for 200 carloads of high-class lumber; the elimination of architects' fees, contractors' profits, commission for making loans and numerous other charges represent in lower building costs

A SAVING OF MANY THOUSAND DOLLARS WHICH OUR BUYERS GET THE BENEFIT OF.

This plan is so safe, sound and conservative that we invite you to have your banker examine it.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

J. O. E.—The City of St. Louis is not located in any county.

HALLIE.—One thousand thousands make one million.

L. R.—No doubt a stone cutter could supply you with a piece of flint such as you desire.

H. H. W.—Chauncey Olcott did not appear on the stage during the 1922-23 season.

J. H. M.—Write to the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Interior Department, Washington, D. C., for the information you requested as to the translation of Indian sign writing.

R. G.—If you will look in the telephone book under "dressmaking" you will find listed there schools and colleges where dressmaking is taught.

L. E. S.—Submit your stories to the various newspapers and magazines which publish stories of the type which you have written. Send with them a stamped addressed envelope and if they are accepted you will receive a check for them or otherwise the manuscript will be returned to you.

C. P. G.—A verb must always agree with its subject in number. The sentence "One of these apples is rotten" is correct, because the verb "is" must agree with its subject "one," and does not agree with the principal word of the prepositional phrase "apples" which merely modifies the subject "one."

MRS. A. P.—The following process will remove mildew and iron mold from clothing and household linen, and will not rot dainty lingerie. Cover the article to be cleaned with a paste of salt and lemon juice and lay it in the sun all day, wetting every hour with lemon juice. At night wash with clean water and hang it up. Next day renew the application. The process is slow, but sure and safe. Javelle water will dispose of the mildew and rust speedily.

B. T. B.—If a caterer is not called in to furnish the wedding breakfast the following menu is suggested: Bouillon, lobster Newburg, supreme of chicken, peas, aspic of foie gras, celery salad, ices and coffee. Instead of bouillon there may be caviar or melon or grape fruit, or a puree of clam broth. For lobtser Newburg there may be the soft shelled crabs, or oyster pates, or boiled chicken or squab. Individual ices are accompanied by little cakes. Grape juice and ginger ale may also be offered.

P.-D. CUSTOMER.—Thme Most Holy Trinity Cemetery was a Catholic one and was located near Florissant avenue adjoining O'Fallon Park. It was chiefly for poor people. It was abandoned and the tract of seven acres which had been the cemetery was deeded by Archbishop Glennon to the St. Louis Board of Public Service. This enabled the city to establish an entrance to the O'Fallon Park on the extension of the Taylor line. In making the donation which occurred Jan. 23, 1918, the Archbishop stipulated that three years be allowed in which relatives of persons buried there might disinter the bodies.

FARMER.—The Missouri State Fair will be held at Sedalia, Aug. 18 to 25. Missouri is preparing for the greatest assemblage of educational exhibits and big amusement features in her history. Prospects at present justify a prediction of a record crowd of between 100,000 and 350,000 persons drawn to the great festival by the $75,000 offered in premiums, prizes and specials ($20,000 greater than last year) and by the mammoth amusement program the features of which are a big circus performance and a $200,000 style show staged twice daily for five days in front of the race track grandstand, 29 horse races and a magnificent carnival. Entries in the agriculture exhibits are already numerous enough to assure the biggest and finest displays of farm products that the country has ever seen. In many countries agriculturalists are preparing to send the best that their industry, aided by the rich soil of Missouri, can produce.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

J. T. C.—Hunters have no right to enter your premises to hunt wolves without your consent. You can have them prosecuted and you can also sue them for any damages which you have sustained.

R. W.—The school can hold you for the full amount of the note for the full year, unless they consented to your leaving the school at the end of the 9½ weeks and agreed that you should pay them only for that period. However, you can probably settle with them for a smaller amount. If they sue you, you should consult a lawyer.

G. L. A.—All Missouri bonus claims numbered up to 111,000 were paid, then the bonus money was exhausted. A special election to vote on an additional bond issue for the purpose of paying the remaining bonus claims will probably be called for about Sept. 1. If the bond issue is approved all remaining claims will probably be paid by July, 1924.

ADA.—It would be advisable to inform the insurance company that a mistake was made in giving your age when taking out the insurance policy. Changing the age would probably change the amount of premiums, if you were older than you stated, you would have to pay larger premiums, if you were younger you would pay smaller premiums.

TRUE BLUE.—A law which took effect June 29, 1921, provides that suits of the kind described must be brought into action within two years from the date of the negligence or of the malpractice, complained of. However, in your case the two-year period would not commence until you became 21 years of age. If that was less than two years ago, we suggest that you consult a lawyer.

R. F. N.—The business firm which sent the employe to their office in another state to work is not compelled to pay his traveling expenses back to his original place of employment, unless there was an agreement either expressed or implied, that they would do so. If they paid his traveling expenses out, that would be some evidence of an implied agreement to pay his traveling expenses back also.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

READER OF P.-D.—We do not know of any method of reducing the bust, excepting reduction of the general body fat.

SICK.—Judging from your description and illustration we take this to be a fatty tumor. If so surgical removal is necessary.

J. S.—Blood pressure is measured by an instrument known as a sphygmomanometer. The cause of high blood pressure is some organic or functional disorder. The remedy is the correction of the cause.

H. O. H.—Just what this condition is, that you describe, only an examination could determine. Crab lice should be excluded. If present they may be seen as little brownlike specks clinging to the hairs and if found blue ointment should be applied or tincture of stavesacre.

CARD OF THANKS

Heartfelt thanks extended to relatives and friends in our late bereavement of husband and father.
MRS. J. STOCKER AND FAMILY. (c)

I wish to extend my thanks to the priests and sisters of St. Michael's Church, the Little Sisters of the Poor, our relatives and many friends, Teamsters' Local, 600, for their kindness and sympathy, and beautiful floral offerings during the illness and death of my dear husband.
MRS. GEORGE GOHRMAN

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for the kindness and sympathy shown us in our late bereavement in the loss of our dear husband and father, Bernard Albers; also to the reverend clergy at St. Anthony's Church, to the pallbearers and for the beautiful floral offerings.
MARIA ALBERS AND FAMILY,
2202 Chippewa street.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our relatives, friends, neighbors and schoolmates for the kindness shown us in the sad hour of bereavement in the loss of our dear daughter and sister, Erline Garnet Kadlowski. We especially thank the Rev. Poth for his consoling words, the pallbearers and Peetz Bros., undertakers, and for the many beautiful floral offerings.
MRS. CHAS. KADLOWSKI AND FAMILY.

We sincerely thank our friends for the many beautiful floral offerings and sympathy shown us in our sad bereavement in the loss of my dear husband and our dear father, August Guerke, also thank the Rev. Leibner of New St. Marcus Church for the consoling words, the pallbearers and Wacker-Helderle Undertaking Co. for their kind and efficient service.
MRS. E. GUERKE AND FAMILY.

We wish to thank our relatives and friends for their sympathy and kindness shown us in our sad bereavement in the loss of our dear father and father-in-law, Rudolph H. Althoff Sr. We thank the Rev. Paul Press for the kind words spoken and the singers and pallbearers and the Provost and Drehman undertakers and for the many beautiful floral offerings.
THE BEREAVED FAMILY.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our friends and relatives for the kindness and sympathy shown us in our late sad bereavement in the loss of our dear husband, son and brother, James V. McCann Jr., also to the Rev. Clergy of St. Cronan's and St. Bridget's churches, the pall bearers and Arthur J. Donnelly, undertaker, and for the many beautiful floral offerings.
McCANN FAMILY. (c)

We desire to thank our relatives and friends for their kindness and sympathy shown us in our sad bereavement in the loss of our beloved husband and father, Joseph Trautmann, our father-in-law, grandfather, brother and uncle. We also wish to thank the pallbearers, Liberty Lodge, No. 22, O. M. P., Austrian Verein, Marble and Tile Fitters' Union, Local No. 19, and Wacker-Helderle, undertakers, and for the beautiful floral offerings.
MRS. EMMA TRAUTMANN AND FAMILY.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our relatives and many friends who so kindly extended their sympathy and condolences in our sad bereavement in the loss of my dear husband and our dear father, John Bucher. We especially thank the Rev. George Haukap of the Holy Ghost parish, the Rev. Henry Kister of St. Liborius' parish and the Rev. Bernard O'Riely. We also thank the pallbearers, C. K. of A., Branch 306; the Bavarian Society and the Bromschwig & Willmering company for their kind and efficient services; also for the many beautiful floral offerings.
THE BEREAVED FAMILY. (c)

To all our relatives and friends we wish to extend our heartfelt gratitude and sincerest thanks for their kind condolence and the beautiful floral offerings tendered us in the time of sorrow caused by the death of our beloved husband and father, Sergeant Anton Meisinger. Especially do we thank Rev. Carl Haas for his address of consolation and prayers, the St. Louis Police Relief Association and the police band for their attendance and assistance and Ziegenhein Bros., undertakers, for their friendly and efficient services.
MRS. KATHERINE MEISINGER AND DAUGHTER.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Hiram Richard Snow, who left us one year ago today. Sadly missed by his wife, children and grandchildren.

In loving memory of our dear father, Chas. H. Blumentritt, who departed this life one year ago today, June 24.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Catherine Runge, who passed away June 25, 1918.
Sadly missed by all.

In loving memory of our darling baby, Janice M. Nolan, who departed this life three years ago June 26:
Gone but not forgotten,
By her mother and all those who loved her.

In loving memory of our dear mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, Mrs. F. Stock, who departed this life three years ago, June 22, 1920. Sadly missed by FAMILY AND FRIENDS.

In everlasting remembrance of our dear mother, Cora Burns Killoren, who departed 10 years ago, June 26th, 1913. Sadly missed by SONS, PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In memory of my dear son, Robert P. Nelson, who departed this life one year ago, June 12, 1922. Sadly missed by WIFE, DAUGHTER, BROTHER AND SISTER.

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Saul Hartman, who departed this life one year ago June 26th
You are gone, but not forgotten,
Nor shall you ever be,
As long as life and memory last,
We shall remember thee.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

In sad, sweet memory of Cora Burns Killoren, who died June 26, 1913:
Peaceful be your rest, dear Cora;
'Tis sweet to breathe your name;
I loved you very dear in life;
In death I do the same.
Forever missed by her friend,
HATTIE.

In loving memory of my dear wife and our mother, Josephine Feckar, who departed this life one year ago today:
You are gone, but not forgotten;
Nor shall you ever be, as long as life and memory lasts,
Shall we remember thee.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Lillian Fuerst (nee Johnson), who departed this life June 21, 1921.
Today we call sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest.
And the ones who think of her today
Are the ones who lover her best.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHER.

In sweetest memory of my darling boy, Thomas J. McCutchen, who died June 23, 1921, in his twenty-seventh year:
My greatest sorrow came to me two years ago;
That sudden blow, like lightning from a cloudless sky;
And when the evening shades are falling,
And I am sitting all alone,
In my heart there comes a longing,
If he only could come home.
Sadly missed by MOTHER.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of George Fleiter, who departed this life June 25, 1922:
We saw you suffer and heard you sigh,
Could do nothing but sit and cry.
We saw you sinking hour by hour, yet we did all was in our power;
But now you calmly sleep the past, while our sorrow for you will always last.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, DAUGHTER, SON-IN-LAW and GRANDSON.

In memory of our dear mother, Emma C. Severin, who passed away one year ago June 23, 1922.
It is just a year since that sad day
We laid you in your grave.
Things don't seem right without you,
But we try hard to be brave.
How we wished we could have kept you,
But I guess that God knows best,
And we know you're spirit will guide us,
Until we are called to rest.
Sadly missed by HER CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our darling mother, grandmother, great-grandmother and great-great-grandmother, Friedericka Zieres, who departed this life June 23, 1922, at the age of 90 years and 2 months:
Dearest mother, how we miss you,
Since from earth you passed away,
And our hearts are aching sorely as we think of you today.
The God, who gave, has taken, and heaven our mother has won,
Although our hearts are aching,
The will of God is done.
Sadly missed by children, Mrs. Henry Ramke, Mrs. August Schmidt and Mr. John Zieres. Grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

YOUNG MEN

To men who will work, a large manufacturer offers an opportunity to sell a well-known and nationally advertised household specialty, one that is lower-priced and more efficient than any of its competitors; no experience is necessary as we prefer to teach you our system, which, if followed, will put you on the road to a district manager's position. Apply 617 Victoria Bldg. (c2)

OPPORTUNITY

One of our men, Mr. Pricer, who lives at 1281 Wagner terrace, started with us four months ago. He had been a hammer-smith and had never sold an article before in his life. After he had mastered our system of selling a well known household specialty, he has averaged $60 per week. If this is better than you are making, you should investigate our offer which promises a permanent position with every opportunity to advance to district manager. Call and see Mr. Rich, 617 Victoria Bldg., 8th and Locust sts. (c2)

An Ambitious Young Man

May read this. We need such a man.

Do you know that good life insurance men are paid better than other salesmen?

Do you know you can build a permanent life income and be your own boss in this business?

We will teach you how to sell. See H. E. Walker or Hamilton Cooke Jr., at NEW YORK LIFE, 600 Compton Bldg., and Locust.

APPLIANCE BRANCH AND DISTRICT MANAGERS.
Owing to our new method of direct selling we are enlarging our sales organization just as rapidly as we develop men to take charge of the territory. The men we want are men who can tell a good thing when they see it, are willing to come into our sales organization, show us what they have, see what we have and grow with the company. If you are a man that believes in yourself, whether you have experience in our line or not, and are willing to come in and show us rather than have us take your word for it, this is the chance of your life. We will give the men selected a concentrated course of training and pay them well while learning. Apply to Mr. Weiss, Sales Manager, the VACUETTE CO., 1110 Arcade Bldg.

SALESMEN

Fortune awaits you in Southern California.

Do you know that Los Angeles is now the fifth largest city in population in the United States and the fastest-growing city in the world; that nearly $700,000,000 are on deposit in its banks and that its building permits have increased from $8,678,862 in the year 1918 to $121,206,787 in the year 1922?

The financial house of H. J. Mallen & Company is one of the largest contributors to the industrial expansion of Southern California. They are the most aggressive and progressive organization on the Pacific Coast, and just now they are opening their doors to new members—men of character and selling ability who want to take a hand in this new era of industrial expansion, build a permanent future for themselves, double and treble their incomes and live in an atmosphere of happiness and contentment.

Members of the Mallen organization—and they now number over 70—are AVERAGING $1500 a month in cash commissions; many are making two and three times this amount, selling securities of the better class to local investors. You don't have to know the West to get a quick start. You should be making good money the second week as a result of the cooperation and direct leads which will be furnished you.

If you would like to know more about this organization and the opportunities which it offers ambitious men, address a letter to H. J. Mallen & Company, Merritt Building, Los Angeles, stating your age, nationality, whether married or single, what your selling experience has been and your average annual income during the past three years. You will receive in return information which may solve the problem of your permanent business future.

A Reconditioned Franklin

Is the One Used Car You Can Afford to Drive

At Our Low Prices and Convenient Terms You Can Afford to Enjoy One Now

The Franklin is famous for long life.

HERE'S THE TEST

Here are two questions to ask any Motor Car salesman:

1. "What percentage of the cars your factory built in the past ten years were licensed in 1923?"
2. "What became of those not licensed?"

Franklin shows over 90 per cent of the last ten years' production licensed in 1923.

Three-fourths of all the Franklins built in 20 years were licensed and running in 1923.

Every used Franklin has the same traits of economical operation—long tire mileage and low gasoline consumption—that every other Franklin has.

Every used Franklin has the wonderful air-cooled motor, that does away entirely with radiator troubles.

Every used Franklin rides comfortably and is handled easily by the driver.

Every used Franklin in our stock has been put into good shape by our own mechanics and painters and is ready to run right now for some lucky buyer.

Its Economy Makes the Franklin the One Car You Can Afford to Own

At present we have on hand to sell, at reduced prices during the last day of the Red Tag Used Car Sale, Franklin Models dating from 1920 to 1923 at prices from

$450 to $1950

including the following types

Touring Chummy Roadster Coupe Brougham Sedan

If you want a bargain in car service, we can immediately deliver a Franklin to you, at terms to suit, and a price that is right.

See the Franklin Used Cars before you buy, for a Franklin will unquestionably give you less trouble, more pleasure and greater mileage and comfort per dollar invested in your machine.

Just talk to a Franklin owner about his car and you will come for your Franklin today.

If You Are Not Satisfied After Three Days' Trial, We Will Gladly Refund Your Money

USED CAR WEEK

Red Tag Sale of Used Cars

Tonight at Midnight

This Sensational Sale Ends

BUY YOUR CAR NOW—USE IT AT ONCE

Promptly at the stroke of twelve tonight, the most sensational sale in St. Louis' automobile history ends.

Today is the last, during which you have the opportunity to secure that car you have so much wanted, from the Weber Motor Car Co., at the sacrifice prices at which we have been offering good, reconditioned automobiles this week.

Take advantage of this big chance.

Come in today and get a car. Use it to take your family out for a drive. They will enjoy it and you will be happy, because you are pleasing them and because you have gotten a real machine at a low price.

Cars have gone fast all week. But there are still many good ones, of most standard makes, left. Here are some:

SAVE—SAVE—SAVE—DON'T MISS THIS CHANCE

This is really the opportunity of your life. It is the best bet in automobile sales that we have ever seen and we have been in the motor car business for twelve years. It gives you a chance to put money in your pocket, because we must clear our floors, with semi-annual inventory time coming in another week.

That's just one reason why you should buy.

EVERY CAR IS READY TO RUN—NOW

Every single car in the sale has had the careful attention of our mechanics and painters and is ready to serve you at once.

Every car sold is guaranteed as to your satisfaction. Try a car three days. Within that time if you are not entirely pleased, bring it back, select another at our sales prices, and we'll allow you credit on the second car for every penny you have already paid us on the first one.

Terms will be made to suit your pocketbook.

Don't neglect looking over these cars. Come this morning. We have salesmen enough to take care of a big crowd and if today is like every other this past week we'll have that crowd.

Drive your family out in a real machine, that will give you lasting pleasure for years to come. Sale ends tonight.

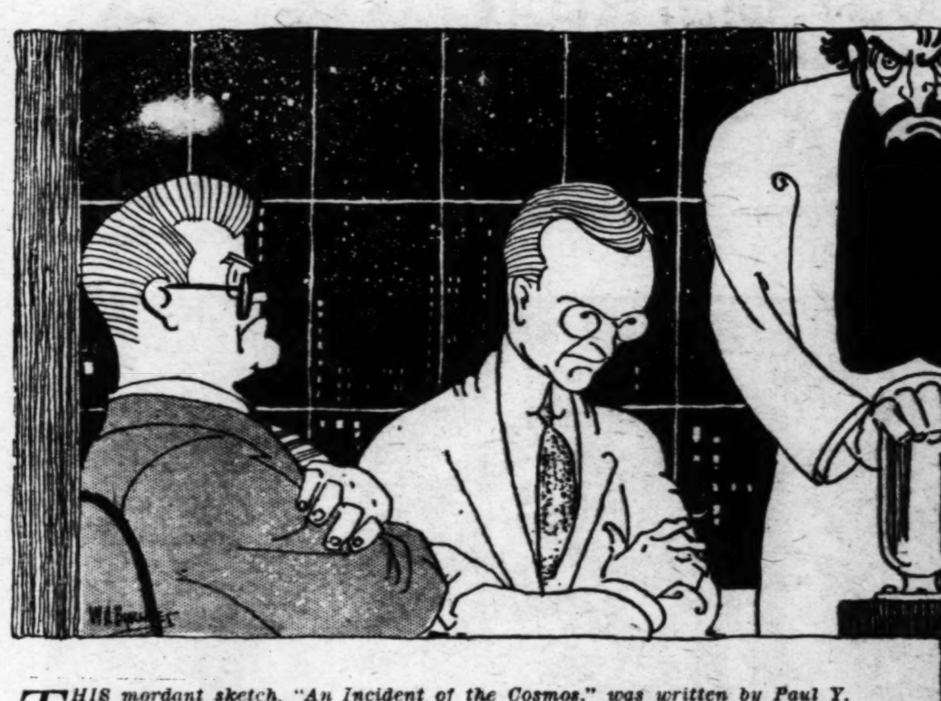
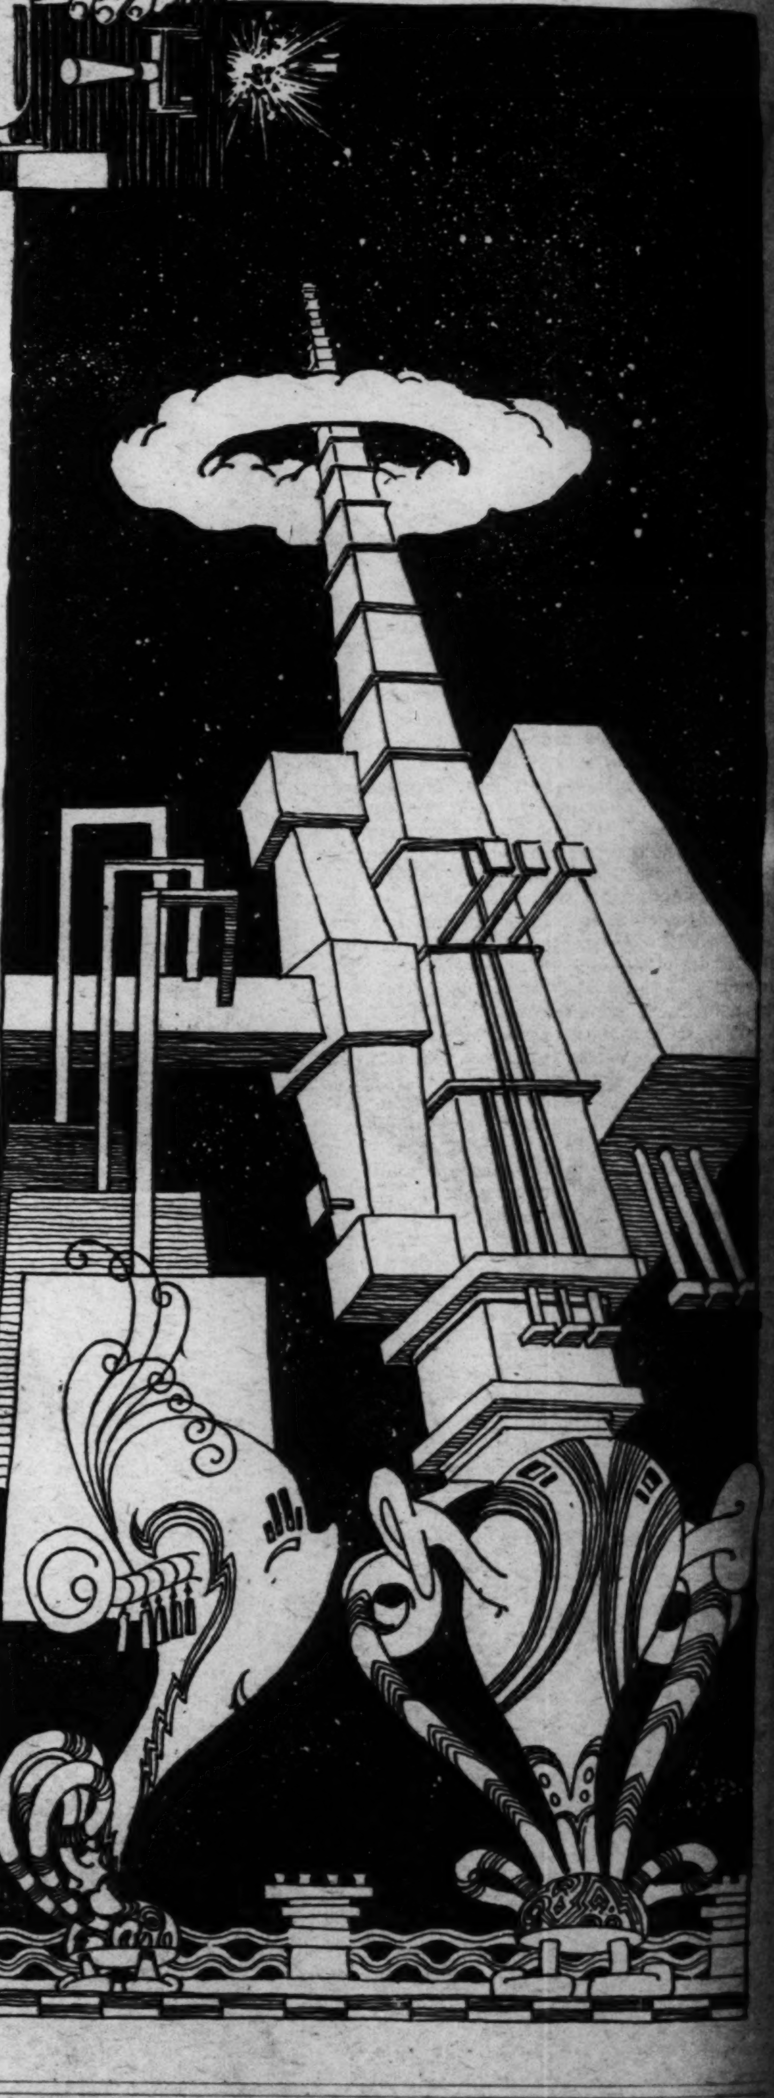
AN INCIDENT OF THE COSMOS

by Paul Y. Anderson





THIS mordant sketch, "An Incident of the Cosmos," was written by Paul Y. Anderson, a member of the Post-Dispatch editorial staff, and was published in the June number of the Smart Set Magazine. By courtesy of that journal, it is reproduced here. In a few succinct paragraphs is expressed a devastating philosophy. What if man achieves the conquest of unlimited energy? What if he strikes from death's hand all power to slay, save in accidents? The race remains so despicable that, in the view of the sage, the noblest act of will would be to exterminate humanity and the planet which it infests. And a catastrophe even so colossal, if witnessed from Betelgeuse, would shrink to the petty dimensions of a mere incident.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

I

THREE famous men sat together—a physicist, a pathologist, a philosopher. A remote star twinkled through the window pane. The physicist, rugged, red-haired, brusque, lifted a cloth and disclosed a machine of simple appearance with a glass vacuum tube and an electric switch.

"I," he said, "have perfected a device for liberating and controlling atomic energy. From a single cubic inch of air sufficient power may be derived to perform the labor of London for a month. At last mankind is emancipated from the curse of labor."

"I," said the pathologist, elderly, ascetic and gentle, "have developed a standard serum which confers immunity to all diseases, together with a formula for arresting physical decay. Save for accident, man is redeemed forever from the curse of death."

"Life," declared the philosopher, a black-bearded colossus, agleam with intellectual ferocity, "can be justified only by the pursuit of truth. I have found the one truth, which is that truth cannot be found, because there is no means of identifying it."

II

Many blocks away from the University, the colored lights glowed upon the swaying forms of dancers. A saxophone wailed, a drum thudded in monotone, and a girl with black hair and flushed cheeks asked her companions where they had hidden the gin. In a squalid hallroom a woman drank three ounces of carbolic acid, and fell with a gurgling scream. A banker, donning silk pajamas, smiled as he reflected that on the morrow he would make ten thousand dollars by calling an old schoolmate's note. A youth with tremulous lips kissed a girl to seal their engagement; she sighed tenderly, and wondered if he would make as much money as she believed he could.

III

The philosopher stood brooding over the physicist's machine, his right hand touching the vacuum tube, his left near the switch.

"Yes," repeated the physicist, "we have mastered infinite forces. If that tube were smashed, and this switch thrown, the earth would dissolve into electronic dust in approximately one five-thousandth part of a second."

"In me," muttered the philosopher, his eyes burning, "man attains the absolute idea. In me, he achieves the absolute act of will!"

IV

In a vast dwelling located upon an eminence of an outer planet in the solar system of Betelgeuse, a being of enormous stature, with a head as big as a piano, was looking through a telescope, the upper end of which was lost in the clouds.

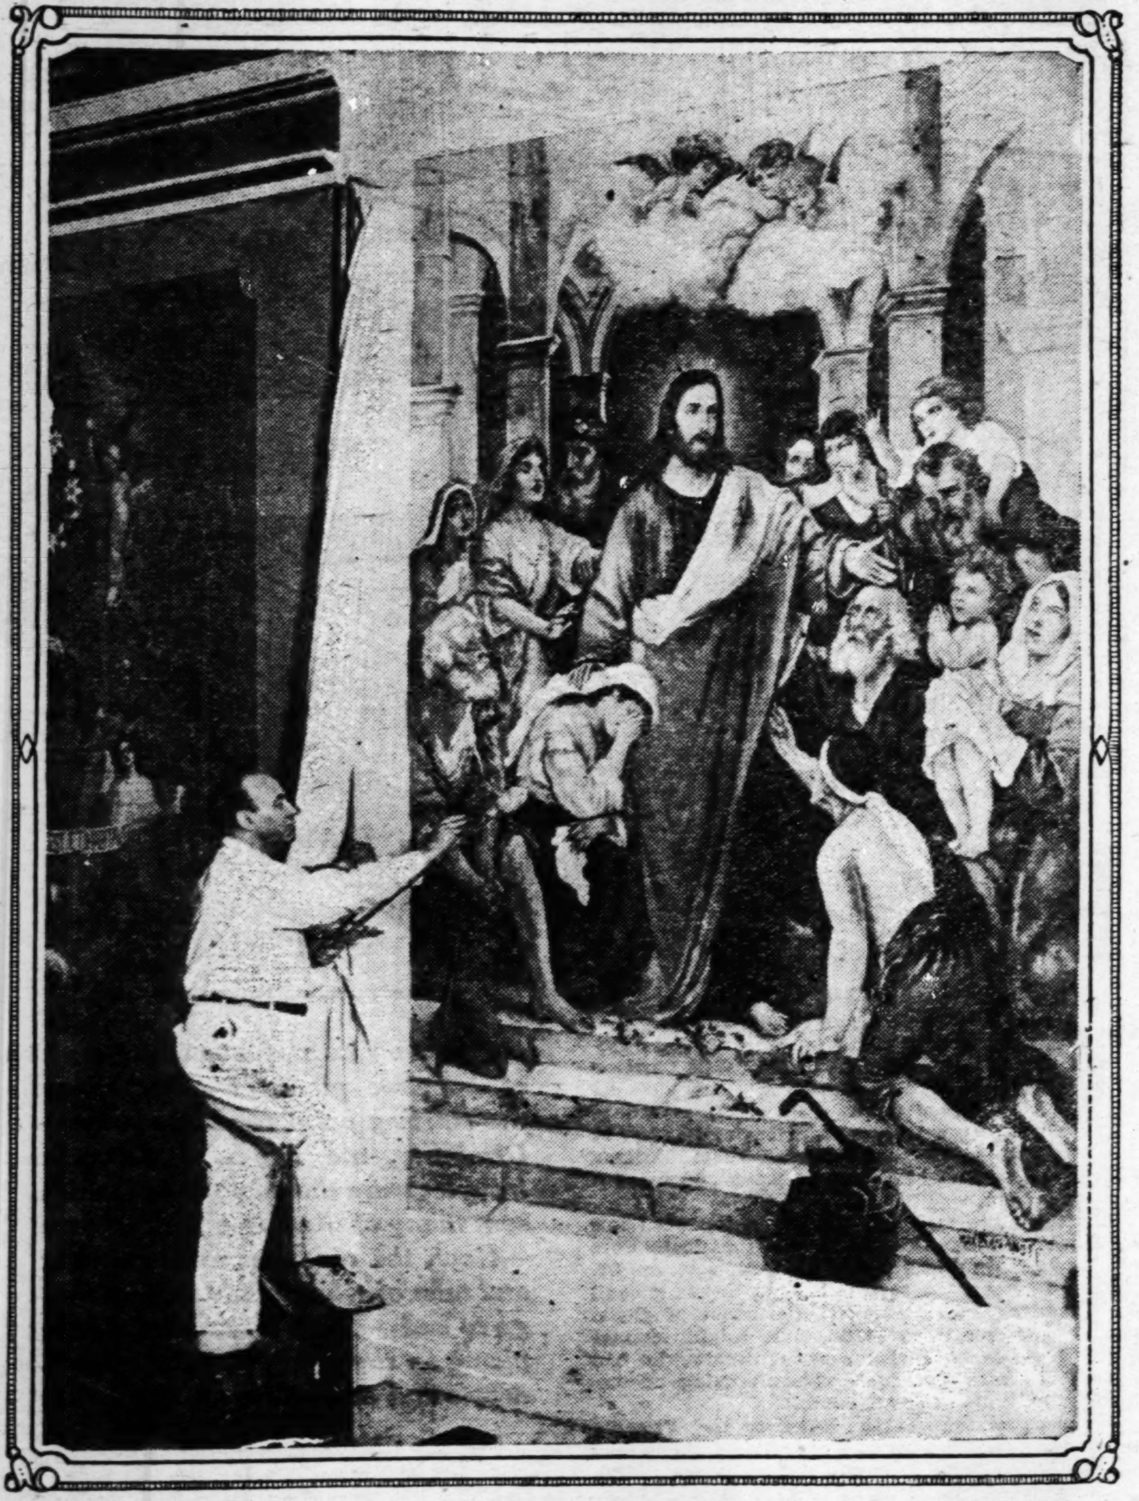
"I was observing," he remarked to a similar being, "a slight disturbance on the fringe of the Minor Area in the adjoining universe. The third concentric satellite of Solar Unit No. 19288X appears to have exploded."

"Has it any particular significance?" she asked, idly.

"Oh, no. It happens about four times a week. How about supper?"

OPERA SINGER IN PRISON PAINTS CHRIST BLESSING THE AFFLICTED

Max Sasanoff, who sang with Caruso in Paris and the United States, has completed a mural painting in the chapel of the Federal Prison at Atlanta which art critics praise highly—Movement on foot to get a pardon for the artist, who declares he was forced at pistol's point to engrave a plate for counterfeiters



Max Sasanoff putting finishing touches on his mural painting, "Christ Blessing the Afflicted," in Atlanta prison.

WHEN Rose O'Neill of Missouri, New York and Italy once described herself as "an incorrigible artist," she expressed somewhat facetiously a state of mental and spiritual obsession recognized by all competent observers. "Once an artist, always an artist." If by circumstantial stress prevented from being or continuing to be an artist in one line, then an artist in another line.

Sometimes the "incorrigible artist," even as in the case of Miss O'Neill, is an artist in several lines simultaneously. Truth of this interesting fact is illustrated just now by the duo-artistic, perhaps even tri-artistic, abilities of an inmate of the Federal Prison at Atlanta, who has executed a mural painting pronounced by art critics a great work.

Max Sasanoff is the name of this incorrigible artist—so incorrigible in his devotion to art that not even the gray walls of a prison can make altogether drab the daily round of his years of incarceration. The name may be familiar to you. It is quite possible that you have heard the announcer of Station WSB, Atlanta Journal, mention the name frequently in the past year when telling radio listeners-in what's the next number on the program. If you have been in recent years a devotee of grand opera, it is probable that you have read the name in the casts of performances headed by the great Caruso. And if you have followed the crime stories in the press, very likely you have encountered the same name in accounts of the arrest, trial and conviction of its bearer as the engraver of an artistic plate for the counterfeiting of United States money.

The art to which Max Sasanoff has devoted himself most assiduously is that of singing. Painting in oils may be described in relation to him as a side art. Plate engraving for counterfeiters, a vocation quite capable of artistic excellence, is declared by him and his friends as a third art that was thrust upon him—at the point of a loaded revolver! Whatever may turn out to be truth as to that, it is not to be denied that the artist already has won repute in singing and in engraving; and now, according to observers said to be competent, he is about to win a wider repute and probably his freedom from imprisonment, through his achievement in the high art of painting.

This former associate of Caruso and of Chaliapin, said to have been a tenor singer with the Metropolitan Opera Company for two years and to have toured this country and Europe as an opera singer, has served about half of a three-year term in prison. About the first of last December he obtained permission of the prison authorities, through the good efforts of the Rev. Father Hayden, pastor of the Catholic chapel in that institution, to embellish a wall of the chapel with a painting of Jesus ministering to the helpless. For six months, working from early morning until late evening, nearly every day, Sasanoff plied his brushes. He painted directly on the wall. The picture is eight feet wide and feet high. The Savior is shown on the rose-[illegible] steps of a temple, surrounded by supplicants, the blind, the lame, the sick. His hand rests on the head of the Magdalene, kneeling and weeping. Above, in an environment of clouds, are three cherubic figures symbolic of the angels of mercy.

Several figures in the group were painted from life, other convicts serving the artist as models. They were permitted by the Warden to pose for Sasanoff, who selected each because of certain aspects of face or figure deemed desirable in the execution of his artistic conception.

Sasanoff says the inspiration for the painting came chiefly from Father Hayden. The familiar Scripture text, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," figured also in the inspirational impulse. Prisoners who posed as models, sometimes sitting or occupying far less comfortable attitudes for hours, seemed to take a deep and reverent interest in the progress of the work. Some of them evinced profound religious emotion.

From time to time visitors to the prison were ushered into the chapel to watch the convict-artist at his task. Sasanoff paid no attention to them. His undivided attention was bestowed upon the work in hand. Despite his environment, he was the incorrigible artist. Concentration being the secret of success in any creative effort, Sasanoff concentrated.

From time to time Station WSB was permitted to broadcast the trained tenor voice of Sasanoff, who rendered numbers from grand operas and occasionally a simpler song. He had studied both music and painting in Paris and other European centers of art. Virtually all his adult years had been lived in artistic associations. Thus this extraordinary convict was privileged to practice two of the arts which he had cultivated in days of liberty. His voice, by radio, was heard thousands of miles away; and the work of his hand, the sacred mural painting, was seen and studied by a comparative few who returned to their distant homes and spoke in praise of the man of alleged sin who was limning the Man of Sorrows.

"Sometimes as late as 8 or 9 o'clock at night," said Father Hayden to a writer for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, "I found Max at work on the painting. So enthusiastic was he that it was almost necessary to drag him away from the chapel to eat and sleep. He would forget about meal times unless somebody happened along and reminded him. He worked tirelessly, it seemed, with mind and soul centered on his task.

"Max should get a pardon," suggested the priest. "An investigation has disclosed that he was ignorant of what he was doing when he made a plate to be used in counterfeiting money. I honestly believe he is innocent of any crime. He has told me that he tried to quit when he found out what he was doing, but that the gang of counterfeiters in New York who, he declares, had engaged him to make the plate, forced him to continue, at the point of a gun. I really think he deserves a pardon."

So much for that! Father Hayden is a kindly soul. Incidentally, it may be mentioned, without the slightest intention to influence the public mind one way or another, that in St. Louis a few weeks ago a practitioner of the art of writing stood trial in a State court on the charge of having committed forgery when arranging for the manufacture of a plate and the printing therefrom of certain certificates in counterfeit of French bonds, and was acquitted by a jury. This is mentioned here because the defendant in the St. Louis case, as Max Sasanoff has done, declared that he was hired to attend to the bit of business under discussion and had no idea that he was party to a violation of law.

In the Catholic chapel in the Federal Prison at Leavenworth is a series of sacred mural paintings done by a prisoner there who won a pardon because of his profoundly reverent artistry. Father Hayden, who has studied the Leavenworth paintings, says:

"They cannot compare with Sasanoff's work here at Atlanta, which I regard as one of the finest mural decorations I have seen anywhere."

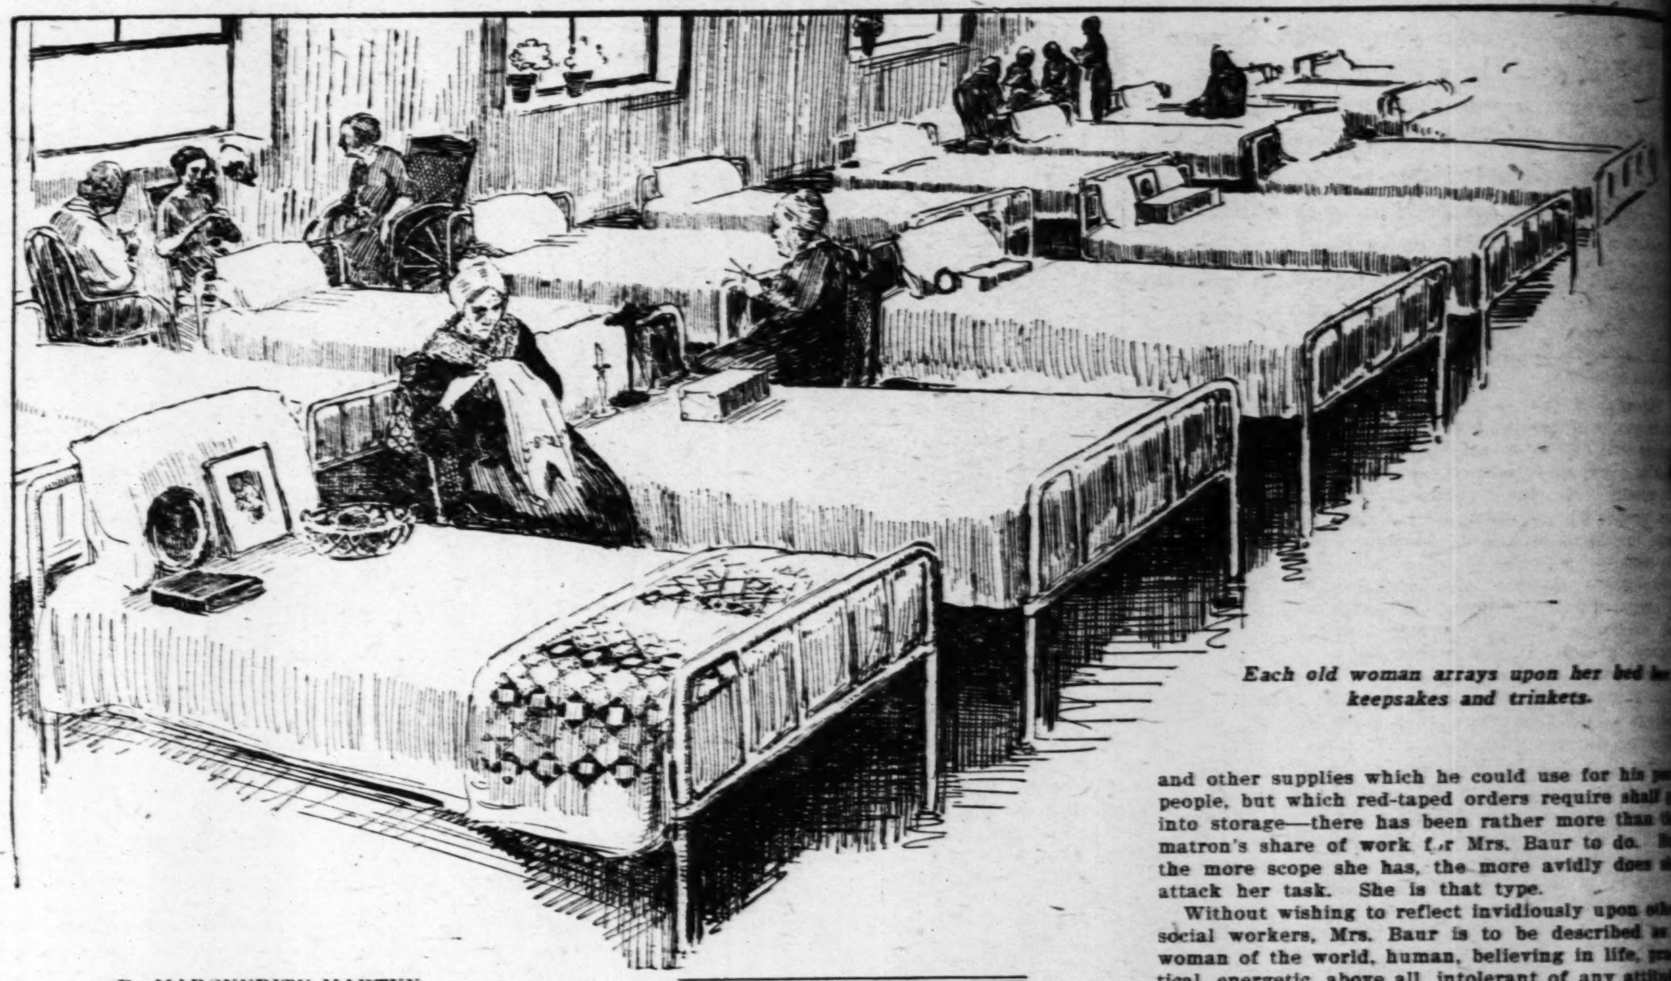
One Atlanta prisoner, "J. F. B.," dropped into poetry when he saw Sasanoff's painting, writing a piece of verse in praise of it and of its creator.

Max Sasanoff is by no means an amateur in this branch of art. He is said to have canvases hung in several well-known art galleries. His acclaimed masterpiece, other than the prison mural group, is a painting with a World War setting. This picture hangs now in the Library of Congress, at Washington. Thousands of copies of it were printed for distribution during the war.

In the two years Sasanoff sang with the Metropolitan Opera Company his tenor voice won much favorable comment from New York critics. He has appeared also with the Boston Opera Company. He made a tour of the United States with the American Society of Singers. One of the most delightful features of the chapel services in the Federal prison is his singing. He is a willing soloist and always eager to please his audience.

Father Hayden and others have started a movement to get a pardon for Sasanoff.

Over The Hills To A Poorhouse Where They Have Straw



Each old woman arrays upon her bed her keepsakes and trinkets.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

"OVER the Hills to the Poorhouse," that poem of mournful cadences and hopeless sentiments which Will Carleton wrote a generation ago, may have deserved its wide fame. It may have been true, with a fearful fidelity, as to the unfortunates whom Carleton had in mind. And been true of many and many a case since then.

But there are men and women in the St. Louis poorhouse to whom this sad poem emphatically does not apply. One poorhouse, or infirmary, as Dr. Charles E. Baur, the superintendent, insists it shall be called, far from serving as the abode of gloom and despair is a lively place, these bright summer days. Even jazzy, a visitor might decide who had gone there with Carleton's verses stirring uncomfortably in the back of his mind.

Women's clubs, church societies, the Friendly Neighbors—residents in the vicinity of Union and Easton avenues who organized as soon as the infirmary was moved into the old Christian Brothers' College for temporary quarters—are in competition to see which can have the merriest strawberry festival and the most frequent auto outing. Then there is the annual June picnic, a real picnic with everything, right on the grounds.

Some persons may be tempted to remark that "a lot of old bums are in danger of being spoiled," though they would better not make such a remark in the presence of the superintendent's wife, who is also the matron.

It is a fact which those most coldly critical of pauperization will be glad to know, that, instead of being the end of hope, residence in this infirmary is the beginning of hope in more than one instance, as I shall relate. The stories of some of them I heard from Mrs. Baur.

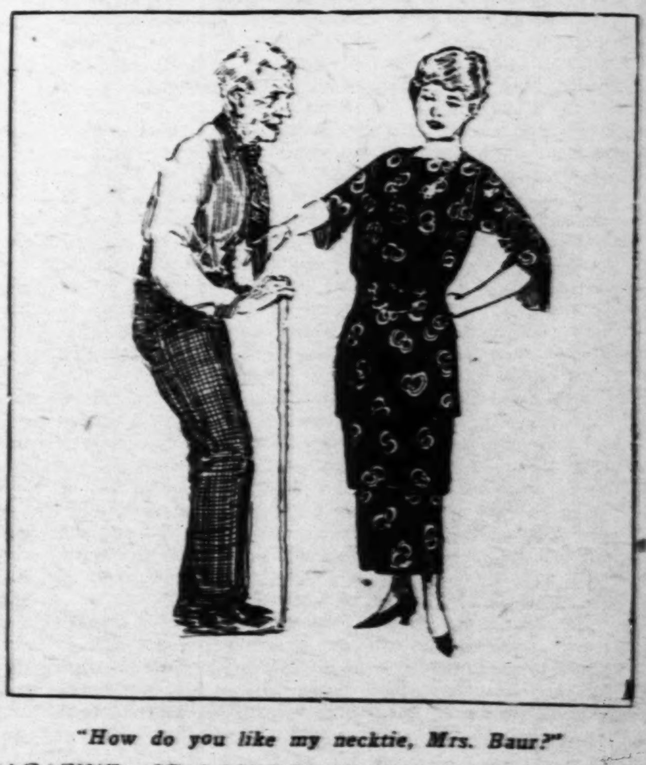
There are some 300 old and incapacitated, or younger but disabled, men and women in the institution—I venture to say Mrs. Baur knows how each happens to be there and why, and it isn't always because they have wasted their opportunities. Not by any means, she will tell you. Anyway, now they are all her "boys" and "girls." She never utters the word "inmates."

I have know, since I first visited the institution several years ago, how close Dr. Baur's charges are to his heart, but I did not know his interest in them would extend to influencing him in his choice of a wife. Perhaps it didn't. Nevertheless, when he married somewhat over a year ago, no doubt he selected as a mate the ideal lady of his dreams, but incidentally he secured to the institution a most devoted and efficient matron.

Mrs. Baur had been an enthusiastic social worker with the Provident Association. Automatically, irresistibly, upon marrying the superintendent of the almshouse, she would have slipped into the position of matron, whether she had been paid for it or not. She just couldn't have kept her hands out of it, and as a result her especial womanly touch is being felt and responded to most heartily everywhere throughout the institution.

The infirmary in St. Louis is not a place of hopeless gloom but sometimes the starting point for better days—Disability, old age and domestic troubles were the misfortunes which sent many of them to the almshouse—Now, the old men wear neckties and take off their clothes when they go to bed—There is an annual June picnic on the grounds, with refreshments and everything :: ::

Incidentally, while Dr. Baur has been so busy rehabilitating the old infirmary buildings on Arsenal street now relinquished from their wartime usages by the Government, trying to retrieve something from the waste, and wistfully eyeing all the beds and other supplies which he could use for his people, but which red-taped orders require shall go into storage—there has been rather more than the matron's share of work for Mrs. Baur to do. But the more scope she has, the more avidly does she attack her task. She is that type.



"How do you like my necktie, Mrs. Baur?"

Without wishing to reflect invidiously upon other social workers, Mrs. Baur is to be described as a woman of the world, human, believing in life, practical, energetic, above all, intolerant of any attitude or philosophy that includes despair.

She maintains an office on the ground floor, though she is likely to be found anywhere about the huge old building and grounds. Never off duty, she nevertheless finds moments to entertain charmingly a wide circle of personal friends in a suite of living rooms she has caused to emerge in one wing of the old fire-ravaged building.

And few of her guests escape without finding themselves enlisted in one of the organizations of friends of the institution.

Up three long flights of stairs, built 50 years ago when high ceilings were so well thought of and saving space no object, the oaken floors showing the heel marks of successive generations of students, you enter the private apartments of the superintendent.

"How almost magnificent!" you think until you are shown how, by means of temporary partitions disguised by paint and stencils and bits of moulding, the spacious rooms have been evolved from what formerly was a huge dormitory, and how most of the furnishings so tastefully disposed, likewise are patched up remnants, the handiwork of the house carpenter, adding his pride in workmanship to the ingenuity of his directress.

She thinks it really is fun, making something out of nothing. Making the best of any situation seems to be a first principle with Mrs. Baur and the principle communicates itself to every department of the old makeshift building as well as to every bit of human wreckage which the departments shelter.

An outward evidence of this is the spruced-up appearance of the old men, compared to their former indifference to appearances. They all wear neckties now. One, who had somehow got possession of a particularly gaudy necktie, stopped us in the corridor, if, indeed, it wasn't the giddy patch of red and orange that arrested us.

"How do you like my necktie?" he asked, beaming in anticipation of her approval.

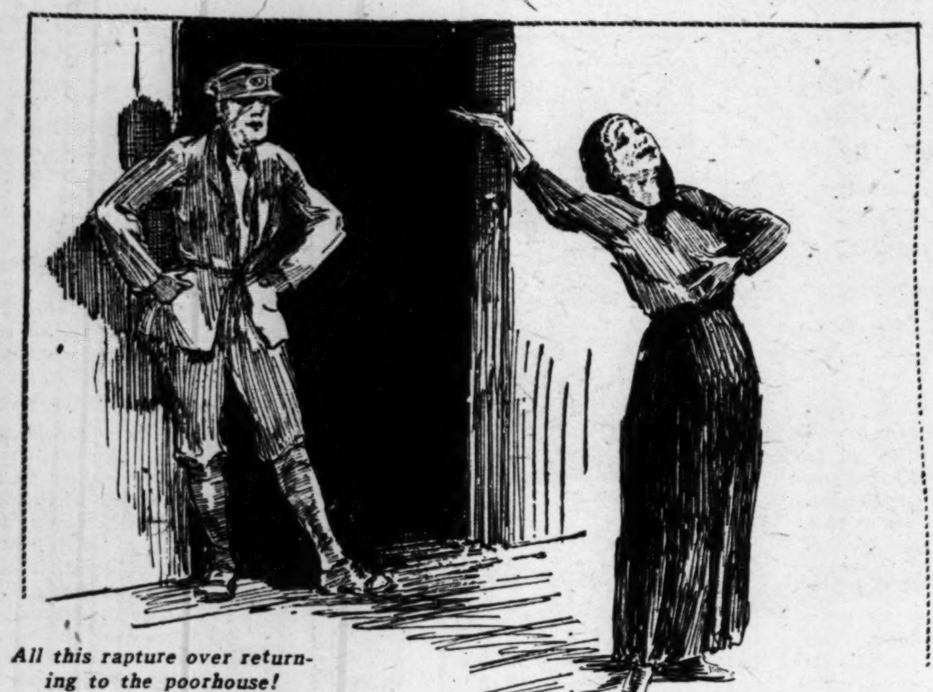
When Mrs. Baur stood off, eyed it critically and pronounced it worthy of its wearer, one could see him grow an inch or two in stature and self-esteem. And that retrieving of the [illegible] of self-respect is, of course, the object the matron is striving for.

Also, as we passed along, it was noticeable that the old men touched their caps to the women visitors, and I knew this to be, generally speaking, a new accomplishment inspired by the same motive of inculcating self-respect.

Shortly after Mrs. Baur assumed her present position, some women friends were driving her home from a bridge party. Away off at the further end of the grounds they heard a shout.

"Hey! Hey!" And peering off in the direction of the voice they could see an old fellow postured with his feet wide apart and his hat held aloft at arm's length.

Have Strawberry Festivals And Auto Outings



All this rapture over returning to the poorhouse!

"See, Mrs. Baur; I've got it off!" megaphoned with his other hand. Which showed an eagerness to cooperate with a new order of things, surely!

Of course, these results have not been accomplished without opposition. But the old men do not go to bed with their clothes on any more, declaring: "What's the use taking 'em off; I'll only have to put them on again in the morning?" An attendant promptly reports such a dereliction and the offender knows that like as not the matron herself will come down and remonstrate, telling him: "Each day is a new day and you must be prepared to greet it refreshed by a comfortable sleep." She has done that.

Throughout the entire building there was evidence of painful adaptations that had to be resorted to in making quarters originally designed for totally different purposes fit new needs; the supreme effort to make the most of a bad bargain. The dormitories are so crowded that several rows of beds have had to be placed in the women's dining hall. Where, at the former infirmary, groups of old women of comparatively congenial tastes had small rooms in which they could each establish their separate belongings about them, now they must all live out in the large dormitories, with beds placed so closely together that you scarcely can walk between them. Nevertheless, all is spotless, immaculate neatness and order, and each old woman is encouraged in her attempt to array upon her bed her pathetic little keepsakes and trinkets, her photographs, her crucifix, her Bible, her workbasket, her patchwork quilt or other handiwork.

A movement is on foot to purchase bedside tables and cabinets. To this end a sewing society has been organized by the Friendly Neighbors, who will hold bazaars at which the handiwork of the old ladies will be sold. This incentive has thrown the women's wards into a frenzy of activity of needles and crochet hooks.

But I was going to tell you about some of the "boys" and "girls."

"So many of them ought not to be here at all," said Mrs. Baur. "There is one who has a pension which might be enough to support her, but every quarter when the remittance comes, her children send out a notary to whom she signs it over and she never sees a cent of it. You would be surprised to know how many have children well able to take care of them. But while there are laws compelling parents to care for their children, there is none compelling children to support their parents."

On the other hand, there are others to whom the infirmary is a blessed refuge. Whatever, otherwise, would have become of Josephine, who has been in the institution 48 years? Everyone who ever belonged to her long ago has been forgotten. Helplessly crippled and said to be mentally defective, she nevertheless can recall each superintendent who has come and gone. They seem to be the landmarks in her career.

Then there is the mother of a poorly paid city employe. His wife's mother and his own mother could not get along under the same roof and there was no money to provide separate establishments. His own mother, a paralytic and completely absorbed in her own miseries, insisted upon making life miserable for all concerned. When the rupture finally came, the infirmary was resorted to as a temporary domicile for the invalid.

Result, a captious old lady found so many companions in misery, so many worse off than herself and bravely struggling to overcome physical handicaps, that she has been aroused to a sense of her own well-being. She rolls about in her wheeled chair and watches a neighbor with a crippled hand crocheting yards and yards of linen thread and is inspired to learn to do something useful herself. She won't hear of her son finding another home for her until she has exhausted the interest of this one, at least.

The old men get a world of entertainment out of boasting and recalling the grandeur and the exploits of their past, and if there is much brooding among the old women over the might-have-beens there was small evidence of it in the excitement of entertaining the visitors. Mercifully a certain amount of mental deterioration overtakes them. "You have to treat them just like children," is Mrs. Baur's theory.

A system of rewards of merit for tasks performed and good behavior works as admirably as in a schoolroom. One old lady was pointed out as the victim of her own incurable generosity. "You give her anything and her first impulse is to share it with somebody else," remarked our guide. "It is easy to see by what route she arrived here."

Glancing into the locker room where each inmate keeps a treasure chest with his name painted upon it, there was a noticeable number of Irish names. Is improvidence sometimes a racial characteristic?

Being a holiday afternoon, all the old ladies were attired in prim, shiny black sateen dresses with bits of lace at the neck. Each received one as a Christmas present, we were told. Apropos, Mrs. Baur related an incident that illustrates how the poorhouse was made an avenue of renewed hope to one inmate.

"She came to us with a regulation permit for entrance. Soon we began to get telephone calls from persons who said they were her daughters. Apparently they had been writing to their mother, but received no response. Their attitude began to be threatening. They would see what could be done about our harboring a woman who had no right to be here.

"We asked the old lady how she happened to come when she had daughters anxious to care for her. 'I disowned them,' she replied. The daughters came one by one and there were six of them, but with each one she remained obdurate in her determination to remain here. Finally a big, brusque son-in-law came with two of the daughters. We called them all together for a conference and the little old mother explained why she preferred the poorhouse to the homes of her relatives.

"I am treated as if I was somebody here. We have church and we have music and we dance the Virginia reel. When we are sick we are taken to the clinics. Fine ladies come and take us for auto rides and we go to all the nice parks"——

" 'Why, there's always a seat for you in my car and you know it,' burst forth the son-in-law. 'Yes, a seat,' sneered the old mother. 'A seat, but no attention. And there's kindness here, and quiet, and rest,' she went on at great length when we had commanded the daughters and son-in-law to hold their sharp, unruly tongues and let the mother for once have her say. We had to keep warning them to be silent.

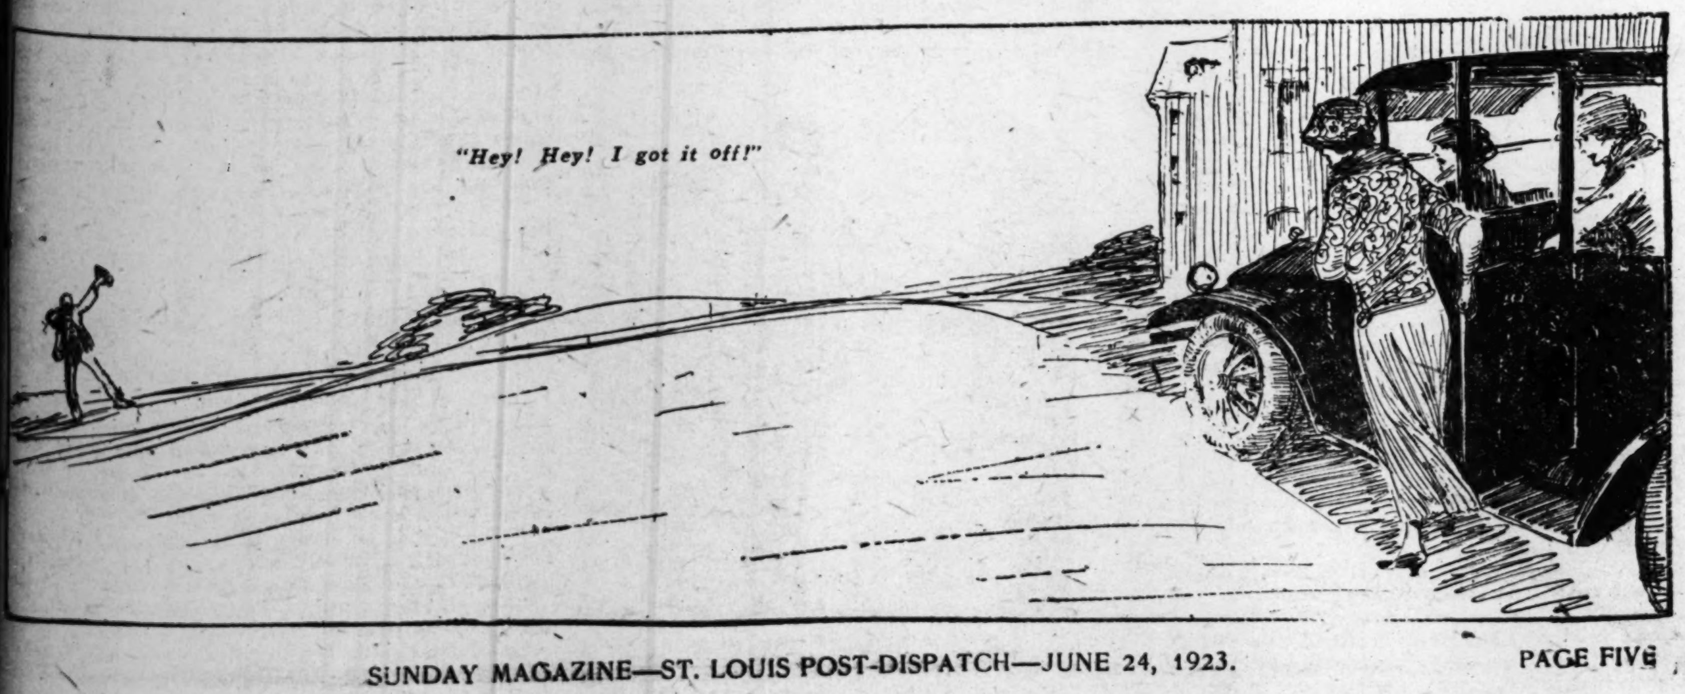
"The younger relatives were quite subdued when she had got through comparing the peace and quiet she had found in the poorhouse to the strife and turmoil of their homes. Crestfallen they departed, for she still refused to accompany them. Finally, though, after many visits and much correspondence, she was persuaded to return to them. She realized she was humiliating them. But she still comes back to visit the friends she made here and she tells us conditions are better with her now.

"When she departed she asked if she might keep the black sateen dress. 'It's the first whole new dress I've had of my own since I can remember,' she said. 'All the time I was raising those six girls I never had a new dress and since they've had money of their own they never seem to think I would care for a whole new dress that wasn't made over at all.' We couldn't let her keep it. It belonged to the city. 'But it's got my name on it,' she argued. Still, she had to be resigned to parting with it."

There was a former actress in the women's ward. One scarcely needed to be told she had been an actress. Other faces lighted up at the sight of Mrs. Baur and though their regard for her was evident, it was more or less inarticulate. But this ancient footlight queen stepped forth as if into the spotlight and delivered an oration extolling the virtues and endearing qualities of the matron. They say that upon this woman's return from the City Hospital the other day, her "homecoming," as she expressed it, was made the occasion for a dramatic entrance and a speech so high-flown and ornate in verbiage that the ambulance driver, the only auditor unaccustomed to her oratorical flights, stood spellbound.

When he awoke to the fact that all this ardor was over returning to the almshouse, he exclaimed, almost reverently:

"Well, I'll be damned!"



"Hey! Hey! I got it off!"

AROUND THE WIT AND HUMOR CIRCUIT WITH O. HENRY

Turning a blooded horse into a worthless nag at short notice—Why little Willie was crowded out at the make-believe party—The fat man and the spooners next door—Woman's ruling passion strong in disaster—The wife who guessed wrong—What the X-ray showed to a pair of lovers :: :: ::

HEREWITH the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine prints another collection of stories and sketches by O. Henry, not to be found in any published edition of his works. They were written more than 25 years ago for the Houston Post and lay buried and forgotten in the files of that paper until recently they were resurrected. This is the fifth installment. More will follow.

TOO WISE.

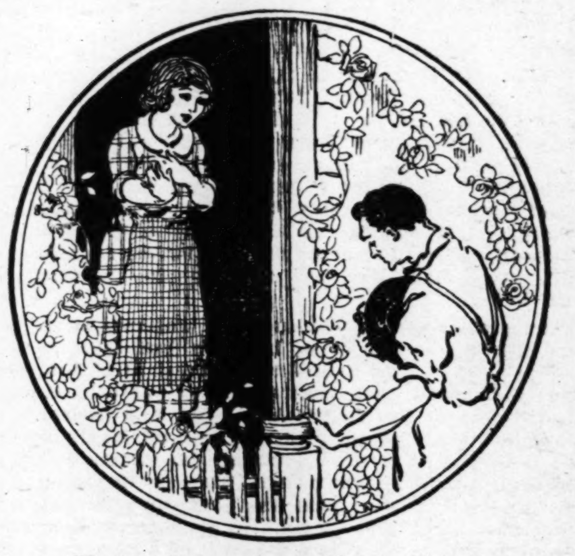
"THAT seems to be a fine animal you have there," said a man on Travis street yesterday to a Houston sport who was about to get into his buggy.

"Fine? There's nothing finer in the United States. That horse has got Hambletonian, Jay Eye See and Nancy Hanks blood in him. You won't find a better animal in Texas. He's made it time and again in 2:10. I wouldn't take a thousand dollars for him. I think more of that horse than anything I've got. Thinking of buying a horse?"

"No," said the man, "I just thought I'd ask. I'm the tax assessor, and I'm kinder looking around at things."

The sport got out of his buggy and went up quite close to the other man.

"See here," he said. "That's a fancy price I put on that horse. He ain't worth nothing like that. You see, he ran away with my mother-in-law some time ago and broke her jaw. Naturally, I think a heap of him. It's sentiment, sir, pure sentiment. You can put that horse's actual value at one fifty—one fifty and not a cent more. Now, don't forget."



"I thought sure it would be whisky!"

NO CHANCE.

THE other day at one of the graded schools, while the children were out at recess, the teacher heard a wail of sorrow go up from one of the little boys. She went out to comfort him and, drawing him to one side asked him what the trouble was.

"I want to play with Sally Rogers and the other boys won't let me. They won't let me talk to her, and they won't let me sit down by her, or have anything to do with her."

"Why is that?"

"Well, we're playing society, and we make out like we're all at a big party or ball."

"And why can't you make yourself agreeable to Sally as well as the others?"

"Why, they make me play that I'm Sally's husband every time."

HIS LIMIT.

A FAT, bald-headed men sat on a rustic bench on a lawn in his shirtsleeves, on a hot night, in a perspiration, at a late hour, in Houston. That sentence sounds queer, but upon examination it proves to be all right.

The man was 52, impatient, hot, married and had prickly heat. It was on one of those balmy nights last week when dogs dug holes under the fence, and girls carried their puff boxes to the ice cream parlors with them.

The man leaned over and fanned himself and allowed the perspiration to run off the end of his nose in a puddle at his feet.

Occasionally he would say things in a low tone of voice without separating his teeth.

Ten feet away was a fence, and the other side of the fence was another lawn, and voices.

The fat man listened.

One voice suggested toothpick shoes, a curled mustache and a silk shirt. The other was redolent of white duck, open-work stockings and a trusting heart. The white duck voice said: "Hug me, Wootsy, as tight as um wuvs um."

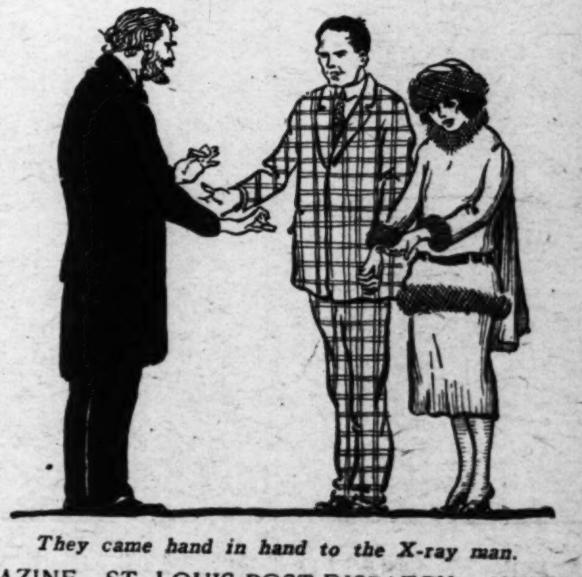
The fat man, aged 52, with prickly heat, tore open his collar, fanned himself furiously and muttered something to the starry night.

Then the toothpick voice was heard to exclaim: "What's the matter wiv my li'l pet? What ums crying for?"

"That ain't cry," said the white duck voice, "that's perspiration."

The fat man uttered a howl of despair, sprang to his feet and made a bee line for the refrigerator.

And high in the heavens the goddess of night paused a moment and scratched her back against the rays of the evening star.



They came hand in hand to the X-ray man.

NO TIME TO LOSE.

A YOUNG Houston mother rushed into the house the other day in the utmost excitement, calling out to her mother to put an iron on the fire as quick as possible.

"What is the matter?" asked the old lady.

"A dog has just bitten Tommy, and I am afraid it was mad. Oh, hurry up, mother. Be as quick as you can."

"Are you going to try to cauterize the wound?"

"No—I've got to iron that blue skirt before I can wear it to go after the doctor. Do be in a hurry."

A SPORTING INTEREST.

IT IS a busy scene in the rear of one of Houston's greatest manufacturing establishments. A number of workmen are busy raising some heavy object by means of blocks and tackles. Somehow, a rope is worn in two by friction, and a derrick falls. There is a hurried scrambling out of the way, a loud jarring crash, a cloud of dust, and a man stretched out dead beneath the heavy timbers.

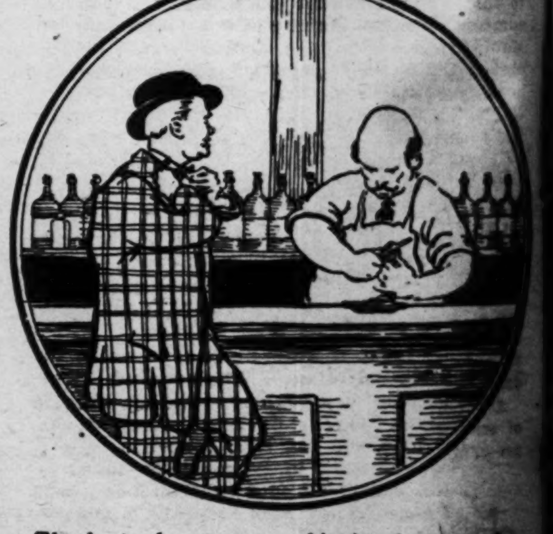
The others gather round and with Herculean efforts drag the beams from across his mangled form. There is a hoarse murmur of pity from rough but kind breasts, and the question runs around the group: "Who is to tell her?"

In a neat little cottage near the railroad, within their sight as they stand, a bright-eyed, brown-haired young woman is singing at her work, not knowing that death has snatched away her husband in the twinkling of an eye.

Singing happily at her work while the hand that she had chosen to protect and comfort her through life lies stilled and fast turning to the coldness of the grave!

These rough men shrink like children from telling her. They dread to bear the news that will change her smiles to awful sorrow and lamentation.

"You go, Mike," three or four of them say at once. "'Tis more larnin' ye have than any av us, whatever, and ye'll be afther brakin' the news to her as aisy as ye can. Be off wid ye now, and explain gently to Tim's poor lassie while we thry to get the corpse in shape."



The bartender went on chipping lemon peel.

Mike is a pleasant-faced man, young and stalwart, and with a last look at his unfortunate comrade he goes slowly down the street towards the cottage where the fair young wife—alas! now a widow—lives.

When he arrives, he does not hesitate. He is tender-hearted, but strong. He lifts the gate latch and walks firmly to the door.

There is something in his face, before he speaks, that tells her the truth.

"What was it?" she asks. "Spontaneous combustion or snakes?"

"Derrick fell," says Mike.

"Then I've lost my bet," she says. "I thought sure it would be whisky."

Life, messieurs, is full of disappointments!

WILLING TO COMPROMISE.

AS HE walked up to the bar he pulled up his collar with both hands and straightened the old red tie that was trying to creep around under one ear.

The bartender glanced at him and then went on chipping lemon peel into a saucer.

"Why," said the man with the red tie, "it makes me right sick to think about it."

"What?" asked the bartender. "Water?"

"No, sir, the apathy displayed by the people of the State in regard to presenting the battleship

Light Without Heat? One of Nature's Great Secrets Unfolding

Scientists' study of luminous protozoa and bacteria has largely solved the chemistry and biology of light-bearing animals —They secrete a substance called "luciferin" which is oxidized in the presence of another substance called "luciferase," and less than one per cent of the energy is converted into heat—An insect in South America, with a headlight and a tail-light, is known as the "automobile bug"

By PROF. F. B. HANSON, Ph. D.

Department of Zoology, Washington University.

THE sparkling of the fireflies over the field or meadow has been observed by nearly everyone; and many also have seen the phosphorescence of the sea in the wake of a vessel at night. The same effect is seen also in the woods at night, from the so-called "fox-fire" in rotten wood.

While these instances are common enough and known to most people, it is not known, except to the few, that a very large number of animals and plants can emit light.

More than 30 widely scattered groups of animals produce light by means of external or internal organs. These include many species of jellyfishes, starfishes, worms, mollusks, crustaceans, tunicates, and fishes; and, among the plants, bacteria and fungi have these peculiar light-producing powers.

Some of these animals produce light continuously, while others light up only upon the proper occasion, such as serving as a lantern for the deep sea fishes that live in stygian darkness, or, as in the case of the common firefly, where the light acts as an aid in mating. One peculiar light-producing animal recently described from South America has a white "headlight" and a rear "tail-light," and is consequently known as the automobile bug!

Dr. Ulric Dahlgren, professor of biology in Princeton University, is the foremost authority in America on light-bearing animals. He has devoted many years to this work, most of which has been done in the summer time at the Harpswell Laboratory on the Maine coast. Professor Dahlgren has kindly furnished the three remarkable photographs of light-bearing animals which accompany this article.

The difficulties in this kind of work are many and formidable. In the first place, the light emitted by these animals is masked by that of daylight or even by a lantern or torch. Again, many of the most spectacular and interesting phosphorescent forms live hundreds and thousands of feet under the sea. To see these forms necessitates the most arduous kind of dredging work, night after night.

It is only the very eager scientist, in search of one of Nature's most interesting and baffling manifestations who will leave the warmth and comfort of home to go out in the night and grope in the darkness and depths of ocean.

Light without heat is one of the unattained goals of science. In all artificial lighting, such a large per cent of the energy released goes not into the light which is wanted, but into heat which is not wanted, that the slogan, "Light without heat," is luring scientists in many different fields of endeavor to its solution.

But what man in all his superwisdom has never learned to do, the simplest of the animals and plants, the protozoa and the bacteria, have known for millions of years.

In these light-bearing animals, strange to say, almost no heat is generated. In nearly every case, Dr. Dahlgren has found that the light amounts to more than 99 per cent of the energy released, while only a fraction of 1 per cent of heat is generated.

Why do certain animals shine? What is the explanation of the ghostly "fox-fire" in the heart of the forest at midnight? All who have observed the phosphorescence of the sea have marveled at this strange phenomenon of nature.

But physical science and biological science, working together, have pretty largely explained the fundamental chemistry and biology of light-bearing animals. Doubtless some of the romance has been taken away; the mystery is no longer mysterious to him who runs and reads.

In very simple terms it may be explained that all of this animal-produced light is due to the oxidation or burning up of a complex substance called by the chemist "luciferin." The luciferin is secreted by the cells of the animals or plants that shine. This secretion of the living cells is stored in the body for future use, or it may be used at once, according to the needs of the animal.

The burning of luciferin alone, however, will not produce light. This requires the presence of a second substance, which is also secreted by the animal body, and called "luciferase." The burning of luciferin, then, in the presence of luciferase is the chemical explanation of why the glow-worm glows, and why the firefly fires, and why the ocean phosphoresces on a dark night.

It takes unbelievably small amounts of these substances to produce light. Some recent experiments show that one part of pure luciferin in between four and forty billion parts of sea water gives, upon oxidation, light visible to the unaided eye. Another experiment with luciferase shows that one part of pure luciferase in between 800,000,000 and 8,000,000,000 parts of sea water will oxidize a stock solution of luciferin with visible luminescence.

There are hundreds or even thousands of species of fishes that shine in the water by their own light. Most of them live at great depths of the sea where stygian darkness prevails day and night. In the American Museum in New York City the visitor is taken into a perfectly dark room where conditions approximating those on or near the sea bottom prevail. Here the various species of fish are arranged, each with its luminous organs electrically lighted, which shows clearly the appearance of these fish under natural conditions at great ocean depths.

A few examples of light-bearing fishes are described by Dr. Dahlgren in the following paragraphs:

"Certain small, black sharks living in very deep water have the lower surface studded with thousands of small, even microscopic, lights that give the effect of a bright steady glow all over this surface. The animals are found in nearly all seas at depths of from 500 to more than 1500 fathoms. The glands are epithelial, but of an internal form of combustion.

"Another common luminous fish is found in all seas on the surface, sometimes in large schools, at other times singly or scattered in groups. This is Maurolica, a genus including species all much alike. It has a small, herring-like form, usually about three inches long, and shows several close-set rows of light organs, round in shape, on its ventral surface. These organs are typical of so many other teleost fishes that we are impelled to describe them:

"The outer surface, composed of the outer epi-

At certain definite times during the summer, however, it issues forth and comes to the surface of the sea. There the female, as she swims, deposits her eggs. These eggs are themselves mildly luminous, but, in addition, the female discharges from her light-producing glands a secretion that glows for about fifteen seconds and apprises the male of her presence. WINE : HOW, WHEAND W
RELIGION, HIBITI

Recent action of Jewish rabbis in petitioning the President and Congress to revoke their privilege of issuing wine for religious use to families of their congregations, because of abuse of the practice by bootleggers, leads to discussion of the origin of wine—Distinguished physician's theory that it originated in prehistoric times because a substitute was required for polluted water is cited.

STRANGE as the fact may seem at first flash, a considerable body of men authorized under the Federal prohibition laws to supply genuine wine by the gallon to many thousands of families has petitioned President Harding and the United States Congress to withdraw that permission.

Possibly even stranger yet, it is a fact that here in St. Louis lives a man who in the past two years might have supplied, without violating any law, 5200 gallons of wine to 260 St. Louis families, and who has limited his privilege to about 140 gallons in all.

Throughout the country it is said that similarly slight use of this authorization is being made by those entitled to supply wine to families. These men may or may not be prohibitionists. Some of them undoubtedly are, others undoubtedly are not. But they appear to be virtually a unit in the feeling that, because of certain circumstances, their legal permission to distribute wine in any quantity should be revoked.

Let a portion of your curiosity be appeased forthwith. These men are Jewish rabbis.

It is a tradition of Judaism that any 10 men may form a synagogue, choosing one of their number as rabbi, or pastor. Under the prohibition laws of the United States, rabbis may supply wine to members of their congregations, for religious use in their homes, not more than 10 gallons a year to a family.

The request of the rabbis for revocation of the wine-issuing privilege is merely one of the side-line events in the grand arena where "wets" and "drys" are supposed to be joined for a finish fight. It bears but an insignificant relation to the main bout, and yet it possesses high human interest because it serves to open discussion on the engaging question, "Why is wine?" Who invented wine, or discovered it? When and how was it invented or discovered? What is, or has been, its paramount province in the human economy?

The discussion takes us back beyond King Tutankhamen, far back beyond, even into the inchoate mists of an antiquity perhaps antedating the cave man. Science, religion and politics are concerned in the discussion.

But first, further to appease your curiosity, let it be explained briefly just why the Jewish rabbis request that their wine-distributing privilege be revoked. Instances have been known in which wine, obtained by persons qualified to act as rabbis, has been sold commercially by persons who are not Jews. This form of bootlegging has aroused the religious leaders of Judaism, both reformed and orthodox, causing them to demand a change in the law that will make such abuse impossible.

The Jewish Congregations of America, in recent conference, voted to petition the President and Congress to revoke the authority for sale of wine through rabbis. The Conference of Liberal Rabbis, represented in St. Louis by Rabbis Harrison, Thurman, Witt and Miller, did likewise. The matter now is up to the White House and the Capitol.

Nonalcoholic grape juice, the rabbis aver, will answer all the requirements of the Jewish religion.

This simple statement of the proposition with respect to religion leads to a consideration of the scientific aspect of wine. It leads back through our hundred years of antialcoholic agitation in America, which resulted three years ago in the adoption of the prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution, followed by the enactment of the Volstead act for enforcement of that amendment; back through all the wine-bibbing centuries, past St. Paul, with his admonition to take a little wine for thy stomach's sake, past old Father Noah of the relapse from sobriety as recorded in the Hebrew Scripture, past the bibulous feast of King Nebuchadnezzar of like record, past all instances of the use of alcoholic drink recorded in ancient profane history; back and beyond, to the dim, unbugled era of the human emerging from the brute.

A St. Louisan who harks back to first principles in the matter of wine took occasion recently to cite a paper written a few years ago by one of the noted Drs. Mayo of Minnesota. The theory advanced was that wine was invented or discovered by the prehistoric man who still clothed himself in skins and hardly yet had acquired the habit of walking altogether erect. His fingers still were longer than the normal digits of today, and their capability of grasping limbs of trees for climbing and for arboreal transportation far surpassed that of the tree-climbing lad of this age. His toes also, perhaps, remained much more prehensile than are those of civilized man.

Faint glimmerings of reason began to inform the brain behind the hairy brows of this very early man. He was beginning to think. Like all of his innumerable progeny of this era, he required some kind of drink for the moistening of his interior economy. There was plenty of water then as now, but it was not always pure water, also then as now. The water supply of the early human race became polluted for lack of modern sanitary arrangements and any of the comforts of home as we conceive them. Disease, pestilence and premature death overtook many members of a community group.

The early man put on his thinking cap. He began to notice things more closely. He noticed that the drinking water seemed to have something to do with the matter of health. Quite naturally, the name and identity of the one prominent and desirable citizen who first made these observations are lost utterly in the miasma of the ages. But according to Dr. Mayo he deserved a bugle to immortal fame, for he it was who doctored his community by prescribing a substitute for water.

It was not wine that he prescribed. It was a prescription that even Mr. Bryan must indorse. It was grape juice.

The grape is the oldest fruit known to history. It flourished on the hillside of Galilee, and in lands antedating Judea it was cultivated. No man knows its first beginnings. The theory of Dr. Mayo is that the skin-clad "doctor" of antiquity conceived the happy notion that the juice of the grape, squeezed out into a rude vessel, might make a satisfactory substitute for polluted water. No sooner thought than done. Grape juice was imbibed instead of aqua impura. Presto! the ravages of typhoid were stayed. Grape juice had won its championship as the first substitute for impure water.

But those early humans were nomadic. They wandered about from place to place. They found it wise, therefore, to store up the juice of the grape for transportation. They made vessels of dried hides, the pioneer demijohns. In these they carried grape juice to their new and temporary homes. Automatically the juice underwent the well-known process of fermentation. Wine was born!

The ancients drank the fermented juice, the wine, emptying many a skin thereof and filling their own skins therewith; and they found it pleasant, both in taste and effect. Thus it came about that the human race adopted wine as a regular drink—not necessarily as a beverage, but in the beginning at any rate as a necessary moistener in place of germ-laden water. Good wine for bad water!

So much for the Mayo theory, and our St. Louis theorist applies similar lines of thought to the beginnings of tea and coffee as human drinks. He assumes that the ancient Chinese, for instance, lived pretty much in crowded herds, as do their descendants. Their drinking water suffered pollution. To overcome this they tried the experiment of boiling out in the water the essence of some vegetable leaves which they found growing abundantly. These happened to be tea leaves. The Chinese ancients drank the boiled tea and rejoiced because their health was restored. They thought the tea leaves did the beneficent work, not knowing that by boiling the water they had killed the germs. It was a great many centuries later when Louis Pasteur advanced and proved the germ theory.

Coffee, which as a popular drink is believed to have originated in Abyssinia and Arabia, owes its origin as such to the same necessity attending the circumstances of the prehistoric man and the early Chinese, according to this theory.

All of which leads us back to now and here, to St. Louis and A. D. 1923, to survey the religious aspect of wine. A writer for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine outlined to Rabbi Samuel Thurman of the United Hebrew Temple the Mayo theory of the origin of wine.

"It is an interesting theory," said the rabbi, "and at least as good as any. However, you will find that Darwin, Spencer, Huxley and the other great evolutionists, in their investigations, did not discover that ancient barbarian peoples used wine. And, for that matter," added the rabbi, "I do not use it myself."

Rabbi Thurman, commenting on the request of American Judaism that the wine-issuing privileges of the rabbis be revoked, expressed the belief that such revocation would find little if any opposition from leaders of the faith. He accepted the grape-juice substitute as a happy settlement of the whole matter.

"I solemnized three marriages last Sunday," he remarked, "and in each instance grape juice was used instead of wine. The Israelitish faith does not require the fermented juice in its religious observances.

"Wine," continued Rabbi Thurman, "has an interesting history. It has been used for ages as a sacrificial element. Barbaric men emerging into a state of worship drank blood; those following them substituted wine, which resembled blood and was a less barbaric element. The symbol, however, remained. It is the sacerdotal use of wine with which religion is concerned. In earlier times, instead of being drank, it was poured out on the altars as a libation."

As to the politico-religious aspect of the matter, Rabbi Louis Witt of Temple Shaare Emeth stated the official position of the rabbinate.

"Ever since the prohibition laws went into effect," Rabbi Witt said, in substance, "we have been aware of the possibility of abuse and scandal, due to the fact that any 10 men, organized as a synagogue, can name a rabbi who then can proceed to exercise the right to dispense wine.

"The first step was to declare officially that fermented wine was not required by the Jewish ritual, and that grape juice would do. There was little difference of opinion as to this. The Bible provisions for the use of wine were in connection with sacrifices; and modern Jews, whether orthodox or reformed, do not offer sacrifices. That ended with the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem.

"So the Conference of Liberal Rabbis, in which Rabbis Harrison, Thurman, Miller and myself represent St. Louis congregations, made an official declaration that fermented wine was not required for the proper observance of Jewish ceremonies. The Convention of Orthodox Rabbis later did the same.

"This, however, was not enough to stop the abuse, which in some places has grown, into actual bootlegging under the cloak of distribution of wine for ritual use. It is true that the Jewish ritual prohibits the use of wine made by Gentiles, but men who are unscrupulous enough to misuse their legal privilege would not pay much attention to this rule.

"At the recent conference it was decided to petition Congress to remove the authority for sale of wine through rabbis. We have not asked that any change be made in the rules for dispensing wine to any Christian bodies for sacramental use, for

Wine in Jewish Religious Ceremonies

(Prof. Louis Ginzberg, in United Synagogue Recorder.)

THE expression, "sacramental wine," as applied to the glass of wine in Jewish ritual, is a misnomer, for the simple reason that Judaism, or at least rabbinical Judaism, knows nothing of sacraments. The use of wine in religious ceremonies of the Jews is, however, manifold, and is of high antiquity. * * * We want to state emphatically that at no time did Jewish law express any preference for fermented above unfermented wine in home ceremonies. With regard to the most frequent use of wine in religious ceremonies, namely, that of ushering in the Sabbath, the undisputed form of the Talmud is: "One may press out a bunch of grapes and recite over it the Kiddush." In the discussion on this point in the Talmud it is made very clear that this statement is to be interpreted not merely as permitting the use of unfermented wine in emergency when none other can be obtained, but even when fermented wine is available new wine may be used. The statement frequently made that fermented wine should preferably be used for religious ceremonies is based on a misunderstanding.

that might be viewed as an interference with religious liberty. There is no such interference in our case, as there is no authority for requiring the use of fermented wine.

"In the case of the Jews, the wine privilege is more open to possible abuse than in Christian bodies, as the Christians have their sacramental services in church, while the Jewish use of wine, or of a substitute for fermented wine, is largely in the home.

"Every Friday night, with the coming in of the Sabbath, a small quantity of wine, or its substitute, is drunk in the home. On the eves of holidays, at weddings and other festal occasions, the same use is made. In the proper carrying out of these customs, and under a conscientious distribution of the wine, no Jew would drink enough at any one time to hurt him. But that is not the point. We do not wish to be in the position of claiming a special privilege on religious grounds, especially as our religion does not really require it; and we do not wish to be blamed for the evasions of the law which some men, posing as rabbis, are carrying on."

Rabbi Witt quoted from an address issued by Rabbi Edward Kalish of Richmond, Va., chairman of the rabbinical conference at Cape May, as to the abuses which have come to light, and as to the sufficiency of grape juice to meet the religious requirements of the Jews.

Rabbi A. E. Halpern of Congregation B'Nai Amoona, orthodox, said he knew of no instances here in which the provisions of the prohibition law, for issuance of wine through rabbis, had been abused.

"The congregations here have all been in existence since a good while before the prohibition period," he said, "and I have not heard of any small group attempting to pose as a synagogue in order to get wine privileges. Apparently there have been such abuses in some cities, for some of the eminent rabbis have taken up the matter.

"My congregation is still using wine, but we will be ready to change to grape juice if necessary. Dr. Louis Ginzberg of the Theological Seminary in New York, who is one of the foremost authorities on our ritual, has declared that fermented wine is not essential, but that the Talmud and codes permit the use of the unfermented.

"In the past two years I have issued about 140 gallons of wine to my congregation, under the provisions of the law. There are 260 families in the congregation, so at the rate of 10 gallons to a family, I might have issued 5200 in that time, if I had been trying to issue as much as possible. In my own family I use wine at the beginning and end of each Sabbath and on festal occasions, and the amount required is perhaps three gallons a year.

"We know that the wine mentioned in the Bible was fermented wine, but most of our leaders do not feel that this fact requires us to seek any special privilege now, yet there are some of the older rabbis who feel that no substitute for wine can be acceptable, and I hope some way can be found to avoid any measures which would work a hardship on them."

Rabbi Julian Miller of Temple B'Nai El, reformed, said he never had occasion to use the legal privilege of issuing wine, as grape juice is used in the ceremonies of the synagogue and in household ceremonies. He said that abuses of the wine privilege, committed by a few persons, tended to discredit Judaism generally, and he strongly favors the movement to do away with the law conferring this privilege, so that the Jewish religionists will not be in the position of asking special favors.

The views of Rabbi Leon Harrison, who was out of the city when these inquiries were made, are said to be in accord with the other rabbis as to the propriety of the use of unfermented grape juice in Jewish religious observances.

FOOLS AND THEIR MONEY: THE SAWDUST SWINDLE AND ITS CROOKED DUPES

NO. 6

Both fools and knaves were they who handed over good U. S. money for what they thought was guaranteed counterfeit currency—Mr. Homan of New York was the chief sawduster—When the man from Missouri or anywhere else paid him $600 for a package supposed to contain $10,000 in bad money to be passed along to others, and it turned out to be only a box of sawdust, wisdom dictated silence :: ::

IN THOSE simple-life days before the automobile put the complexity complex into human affairs, a citizen obsessed with the ambition complex was running a livery stable in a rural Missouri town. Though we employ here some psycho-analytic terms, even psycho-analysis was unknown in those simple times; but there were shrewd individuals here and there who could read human nature without the aid of magnifying glasses, and they were on the trail of just such persons as the Missouri liveryman and horse trader.

The ambitious Missourian had no dream of becoming President, of writing the great American novel, or composing an imperishable poem. His ambition lay in directions far different: he wanted to get rich quickly. Now, it is not to be disputed that the woods of the world are full of those who are ambitious to get rich quickly, so this liveryman seems on the surface of the matter to have been merely an insignificant member of a very large class. But the average person who yearns for quick wealth is willing to let the golden chariot of opulence pass him by unboarded unless he can climb aboard with a clean conscience.

This fellow out in rural Missouri didn't care how he got the money, just so he got it. He had a few hundred dollars in bank, but he wanted thousands for every hundred, and he used to sit in front of his stable on hot summer nights and hate himself because he didn't know how to get rich quickly. His livery business was doing fairly well, and sometimes he turned a handsome profit on a horse trade. All the same, he was a discontented man. There was Jay Gould, who had bought the Iron Mountain Railroad, and had millions left. Why should Jay Gould have all that property and money—and making more millions right along—and John W. Jooks have only $700 in bank, a little old livery stable and a few cheap horses and buggies?

"It ain't fair," said Mr. Jooks, to himself; "it ain't a-tall fair!"

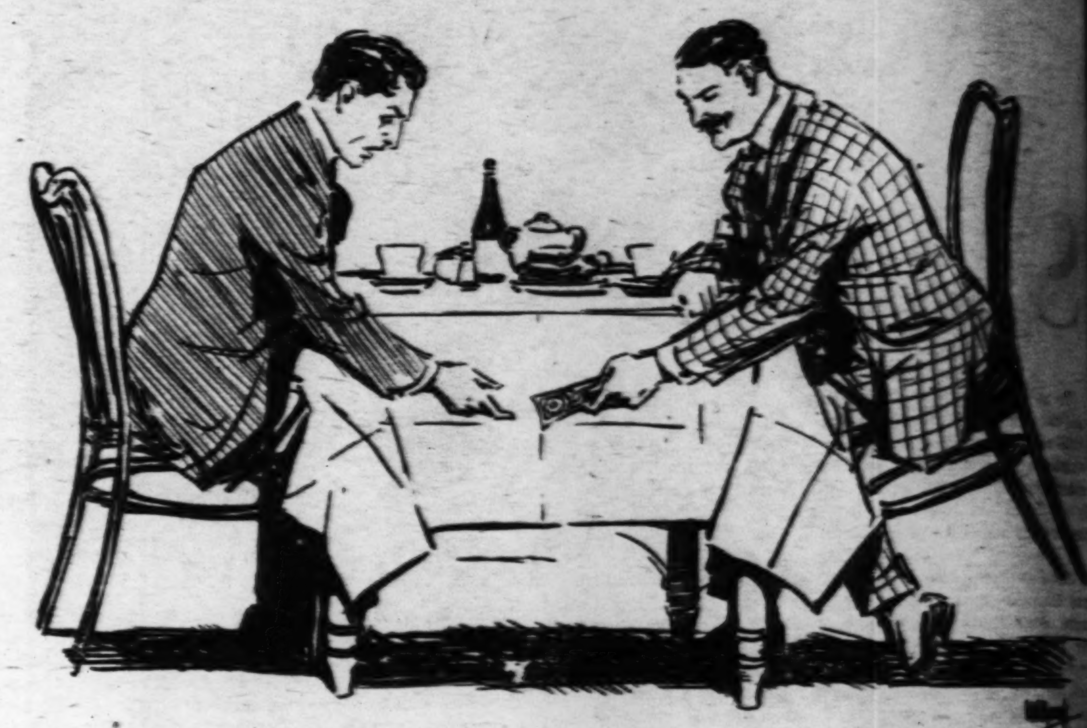
Mr. Jooks had talked it over with the neighbors who loafed about the stable. What was the good of living if you couldn't have money enough to buy what you wanted? Not just food and clothes—anybody could buy them. Farms, and town lots, and maybe some stock in Jay Gould's railroad—those were the things that counted. Be a big man in your community, a person of consequence, one that other folks would look up to—that was the idea. But, having no ability above the average, and being a rather indolent man, Mr. Jooks could think of no way by which he could get rich. And he was downhearted, had the blues, felt grouchy against the world.

One day the liveryman walked to the postoffice after the day's mail train went thundering through. The postal clerk had tossed a bag of mail on the depot platform. One of the letters in the bag was addressed to Mr. John W. Jooks. It was postmarked at New York City, a place far beyond the range of the recipient's dreams.

The envelope was marked "Private" and the writer had put "strictly private" at the top of the letter sheet. Mr. Jooks wondered why. But he retired to the privacy of his little cubbyhole "office" in the livery stable before he read the message. Having read it, he folded the sheet, stuck it back into the envelope, and put the private communication in the privatest pocket he had, his inside vest pocket. He unhitched a horse from a buggy which a shoe drummer from St. Louis had hired to "make" an inland town. He was so excited about something that he was about to shove the horse into the stall tail first. The horse knew better, so the man had to turn him around.

Mr. Jooks, just as soon as he was alone again, retired to his private office, shut the door, sat down and reread his letter. He reread it several times, until he knew it virtually by heart. Then he sat back and thought. In those regions it used to be said that some of the natives sat and thought, while others just sat. On that occasion Mr. Jooks joined the thinking fraternity as a charter member. He thought and thought and thought.

Could he do it? Could he afford to do it? Would it be safe? Well, why not? After a few hours' thought he had determined that he could and would do it and that he could and would get away with it. "Strictly private," of course. Well, wasn't he a man that could keep his mouth shut when his interests so demanded? He was! Nevertheless, he would have to do a little talking before the big change in his fortunes, so that folks around town wouldn't do too much talking afterward.

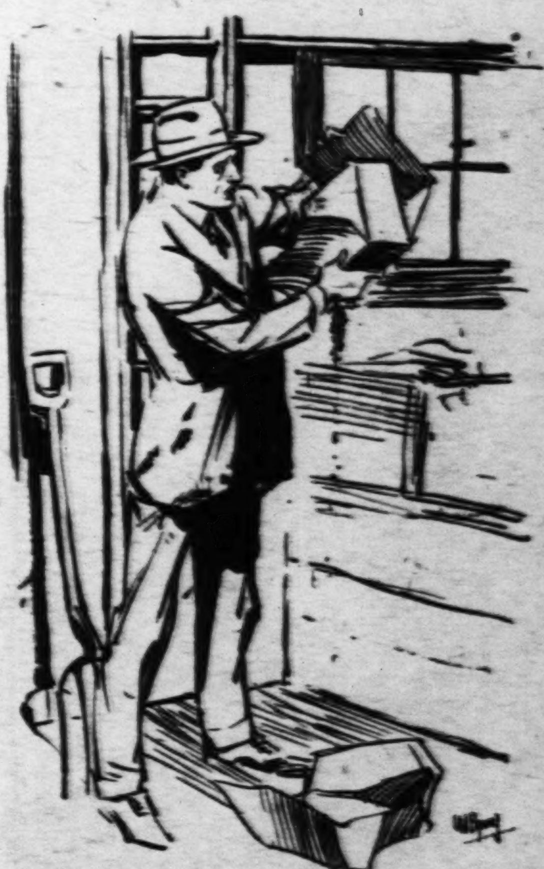


Mr. Homan passed Mr. Jooks a bright new ten-dollar bill, under the corner of the table. Mr. Homan winked as he did so.

That night when the usual crowd gathered in front of the stable Mr. Jooks had lost his grouch, his blues had changed to a lighter hue, he was almost happy.

"Goin' up to St. Louis tomorrow," he remarked. "Need a couple new Banner buggies for the business."

Next day he went to the bank and drew out his $700, leaving in the few dollars to his credit in excess of that sum. He wanted to keep a little balance there, so that the banker wouldn't feel hurt. He took the train for St. Louis, and at the old Union Station on Twelfth street he took another train—for New York. After he got settled down in a corner of the day coach he took from his pocket the private letter and read it over. Thus it ran:



He opened it, and the sawdust ran out all over the floor!

"45 Carmine street, New York.

"Dear Sir: I can put you in the way of [illegible] a fortune. I have just heard of a large [illegible] of counterfeit paper money, ranging in value [illegible] $1 to $50. Every one of the bills I can [illegible] perfect. My friend can furnish the goods [illegible] quantity at the extremely low prices of:

$1200 of assorted goods.........$100
$2500 of assorted goods......... 200
$10,000 of assorted goods....... 600

"Do not call at the above address, but write [illegible] days before starting, telling me when you will [illegible]rive and the hotel you will stay at, so that I can [illegible] on you personally.

"Have nothing to do with any person who [illegible] show you your last letter to me. Then you [illegible] know that you are dealing with the right party.

"If you would like to have a sample of the [illegible] send me $30 cash and I will send you $300 [illegible] these bills, done up in book form.

"J. W. HOMAN."

Mr. Jooks had been altogether too eager [illegible] rich at once, so he had planned to write to Mr. [illegible]man as soon as he arrived in New York and [illegible] a place to stop. As for the samples, he [illegible] to Mr. Homan in the matter of the "goods" [illegible] perfect. This plan he carried out, after [illegible] at a cheap hotel not far from the ferry [illegible] which he was landed in the Empire City. Mr. Homan showed up, right after he got Mr. Jooks' [illegible] and found his customer eagerly awaiting an interview. Mr. Homan insisted on being shown the letter he had sent the Missourian.

"All right," said Mr. Homan. "Now come [illegible] bar and have a drink on me, Mr. Jooks. [illegible] money in my hand. Well, it looks good, doesn't it?"

"Looks good to me," assented Mr. Jooks.

"All right. Order your poison."

The New Yorker tossed a $10 bill, fresh and [illegible] onto the bar. The bartender picked it up and [illegible] it into the till, handing Mr. Homan his [illegible] which he ostentatiously placed in a [illegible] than the one containing the wallet from which he had taken the tenner.

"Now," invited the Gotham host, "let's go [illegible] this restaurant and eat something. I'm [illegible] enough to eat a boiled owl."

They took a table in an obscure corner. Mr. Homan passed Mr. Jooks a bright, new $10 bill, under the corner of the table. Mr. Homan winked as he did so.

"It's on me," said he, "but I want you to pay the bill when the waiter brings it along; and you can keep the change."

"What's the big idee?" innocently inquired Mr. Jooks.

"Mum's the word! Wait till we eat and I'll let you in on the great secret."

The bill for the meal was about seven times what it would have been at the local hotel, the Grand Central, back home, but Mr. Jooks got about [illegible] in change, all of which he returned to his pocket. Mr. Homan tipped the waiter, his guest not being familiar with New York's unwritten law. After the waiter went about his business Mr. Homan went about his. He leaned close to his guest and spoke softly:

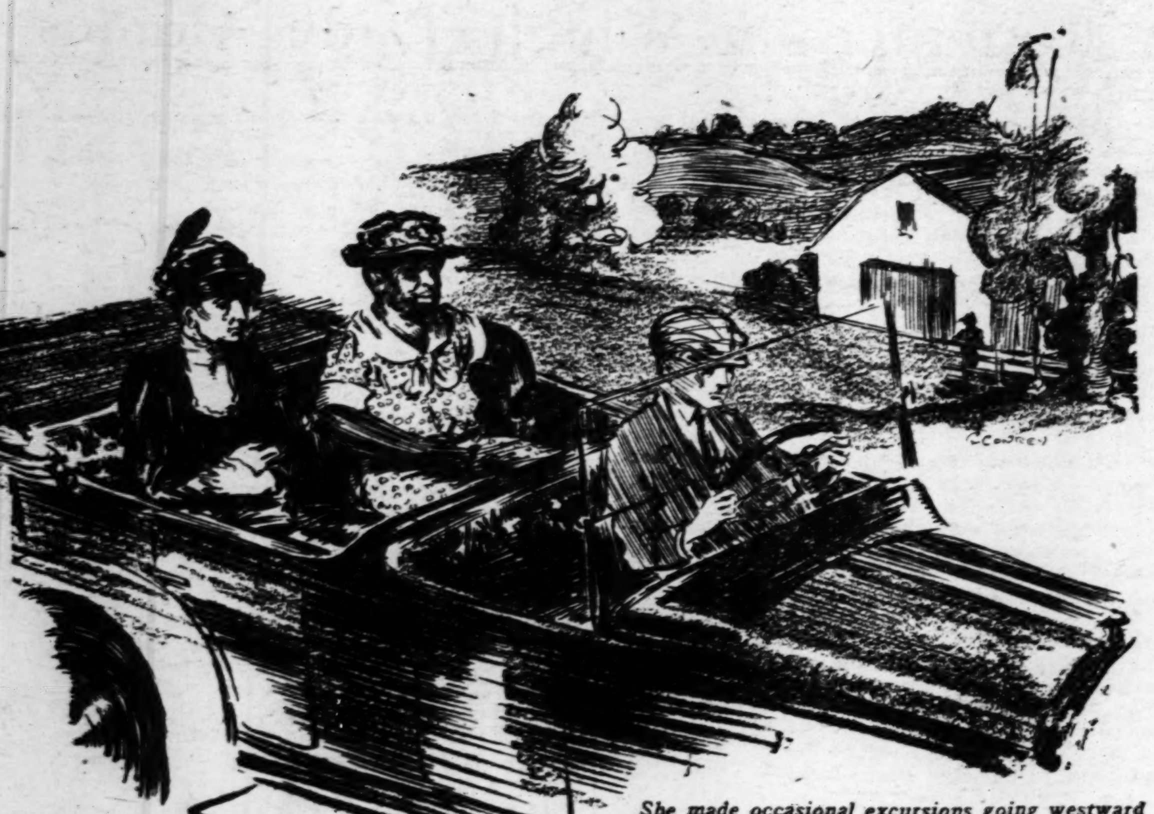
TAZMUN

~by~

SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS



She made occasional excursions going westward and uptown, sometimes actually in an automobile, and always escorted by Old Sally.

STRANGERS in Our Square stop and stare at No. 17. In itself the house is unremarkable; a dull, brown rectangle with a faintly mildewed air about the cornices. It is this sign on the front which attracts the startled notice of the wayfarer:

THE ANGEL OF DEATH
One Flight Up and Ring Bell

To us of the Square the placard is a commonplace, and the Angel of Death just Boggs, a chunky, bristly little man with gold teeth and a weak, meek, peanut-whistle voice, who conducts a worthy though humble enterprise of hygiene and cleanliness more specifically set forth in the legend running, crimson, across the top of his business card:

BOGGS KILLS BUGS

Once in the long ago that explicit announcement had flamed upon the house front. It yielded to the more dignified form when Madam Tallafferr took Mr. Boggs' top floor. She said that she could not live over it, and the landlord sacrificed his prized alliteration rather than lose a lodger so elegant and aristocratic. So the sign came down and she went up. With her went furniture, scanty but magnificent, a silver-inlaid lock box locally credited with safeguarding the Pemberton family diamonds, Sempronius, who was fat and black and a cat, and Old Sally, who was fat and black and a thief.

Mr. Boggs' lodger was all that is most glorious in Southern lineage. Her full style and title was Madam Rachel Pinckney Pemberton Tallafferr, with two ls, two fs and two rs, if you value her favor. She belonged to no less than seven "Daughters-of" organizations with sumptuous stationery, and to a Spirit Guidance Group.

In person Madam Tallafferr was spare, tall and straight. She became known to the locality, behind her back, as the Duchess. She made occasional excursions, going westward and uptown, sometimes actually in an automobile, and always escorted by Old Sally. It was understood (from the boastful Mr. Boggs) that on such occasions his lodger was going into society.

But though aloof she was not alien. She could in time of need descend from her remote Olympus and lend a hand. The first occasion was when a horrid of diseases, diphtheria, swept down upon Our Square, bringing panic in its train. Then the Duchess consulted briefly with the Little Red Doctor. She put on the black silk of splendor, the Pinckney laces and the Pemberton diamonds, and thus girded for the fray went forth, a spare, thin-lipped, female St. George, against our local dragon. Wherever that sane and confident presence appeared, panic gave way to reason and mutiny to obedience. The Little Red Doctor delivered his estimate of her:

"Cold nerve and tradition. Our Square ought to put up a statue to her—in steel."

Against which may be set off the Duchess' summing up of the Little Red Doctor:

"He seems a worthy young man."

Yet she possessed understanding, too, of a subtle, fine and profound kind. Otherwise she could never have done for Schepstein what she did when Schepstein's 20-year-old Metta killed herself through taking poison tablets (by mistake, of course, as the Little Red Doctor perjuriously certified). In his hour of lonely grief and shame, Our Square turned its back upon the little cross-eyed, cross-grained, agnostic trafficker in old debts, old furniture, old books, old stamps, old silver and anything else old which he could buy from the uninformed and sell to the covetous, because we feared his savage and cynical rebuffs. But when the furtive hearse and the one carriage for Schepstein, which was to have been the whole of little Metta's funeral, drew up at night before the Scheptein flat, Madam Rachel Pinckney Pemberton Tallafferr descended her steps and crossed Our Square. Behind her waddled Old Sally, with an armful of white roses. They met Schepstein at the foot of his steps, following his dead. As the casket passed her, Madam Tallafferr took the wealth of bloom from the servant and scattered its snow purity above the girl. At that the face of Schepstein, which had been cold, lead-gray, changed and flushed and softened, and he staggered suddenly where he stood and might have fallen had not that strong old woman thrust an arm under him to help him on his way. So two mourners went in the lone carriage to little Metta's funeral.

Only long afterward was this known to Our Square. What established the Duchess as an Olympian controller of destinies was her handling of MacLachan, the Tailor. MacLachan, on his black, alcoholic days, was wont to sing "The Cork Leg." On this occasion he sang it, sitting on the coping of the fountain, with his legs in the water, and beating time with a revolver. This was a case for Terry the Cop, but Polyglot Elsa of the Elite Restaurant, with more cunning than conscience, had dispatched the intrepid Terry to the farther end of the beat upon a purely fictitious Italian riot. For reasons of her own she did not wish Terry punctured. Hence Our Square lurked about in the night shadows watching the balladist from a respectful distance.

The Duchess rustled stiffly up to the fountain and bade MacLachan hold his peace. Old Sally followed with a market basket. MacLachan elevated his voice a pitch.

"Horror and fright were in his face,
The neighbors thought he was running a race;
He clung to a lamp post to stay his pace,
But the leg broke away and kept up the chase," bellowed MacLachan. "I am not aweer," he added, "that now and here, you possess any legal authority in this squeer!"

The Duchess pointed a stiletto-like finger at MacLachan. "You are a rum wastrel," she pronounced, severely.

MacLachan pointed his revolver at the Duchess, though rather waveringly. "I am," said he, "and proud of it."

"You will do some harm with that firearm."

"I will," said MacLachan, "and glad to do it."

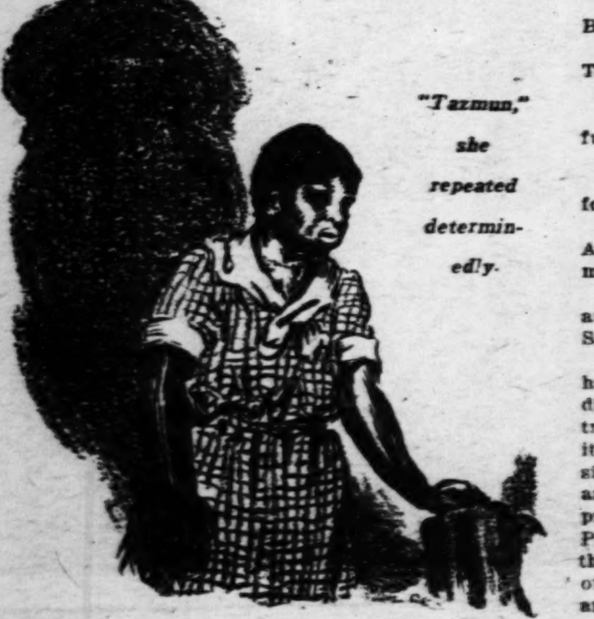
"Go home to your bed and pray," ordered the stiff old lady, contemptuously.

MacLachan regarded her gravely. "Fly, witch," he said. "Awa' wi' ye on yer broomstick. I have a silver bullet for yer life."

"Give me that pistol," she directed.

Quietly but firmly MacLachan shot her. At the same moment Old Sally hit him expertly on the head with a bottle from her market basket. MacLachan slumped forward and took his whirling thoughts between his two hands. "I ha' done wrong," he presently concluded. "I ha' murdered my aged an' respectable aunt in cold blood. Take my weepon an' hale me to the gallus."

He passed his revolver over to a firm grasp. It was that of the Duchess. She was bleeding very slightly from the ear which McLachan's bullet had grazed.



"Tazmun," she repeated determinedly.

"Come home before you get into trouble," was the lady's command to the now cowed and repentant tailor, who suffered himself to be marched back to his Home of Fashion. The following day a deputation of us marched MacLachan around to No. 17 to apologize. We could hear Madam Rachel Pinckney Pemberton Tallafferr directing Old Sally to inform the deputation that she was not at home.

"That's the high-toned way of saying she don't want to see us," chirped the admiring Mr. Boggs, between gratification and apology. "Aristocrat to the finger tips! Haven't I always told you so?"

But there came a time when he boasted less assuredly of his top-floor grandeur. One evening, in a burst of confidence, he unburdened himself to the Little Red Doctor and me. Madam was, he feared, losing interest in the lofty social sphere to which she had been called. Seldom, nowadays, did she go in her full regalia uptown. Automobiles came no more to his flattered door. Worst of all, her fascinating mail had dwindled, so that now there was but one regular communication of the sort, the letter bearing the mystic double circle of the Spirit of Guidance Group. Mr. Boggs surmised sadly that the goddess of his top-floor Olympus was growing old.

Very likely the phenomenon would have gone unexplained to this day had not both the Rosser twins fallen into the fountain simultaneously, contrary to their usual custom, which is for one of them to take the careless plunge while the other dances frantically on terra firma and yells till help comes. Madam Tallafferr once termed them "Death's playmates," because of this ineradicable passion for gamboling on the brink of the pool, which is just deep enough to cover their 2-year-old heads. On this occasion Old Sally was the nearest aid. So she waddled fatly over and hauled them out easily enough. Then, quite inexplicably, she fell in herself and lay gently oscillating at the bottom of three feet of water. Still more inexplicably, she refused to come to properly when Mr. Boggs and I fished her out after not more than 30 seconds' immersion. shapen and unnatural. So we ran her into the Little Red Doctor's office and awaited the verdict.

It was a long wait. When at length the Little Red Doctor emerged there was a wild kind of glint in his eye.

"D'you know what's the matter with that old black idiot?" he demanded.

"Martyr to her own hee-roism," suggested Mr. Boggs, the romantic. "Is she drowned?"

The Little Red Doctor snorted: "She's starved. That's what she is!"

"She's as fat as butter," I protested.

"Fat like a sliver," retorted the doctor, scornfully. "Padded!"

"What on earth should she pad for?" I cried.

"To fool her mistress. She's been going without food so as to buy more for madam."

At this information the eyes of the Destroying Angel bade fair to pop from their sockets. "D'ye meantersay they're poor?" he gasped.

The Little Red Doctor outlined the history of the aristocratic pair, as he had extracted it from Old Sally.

According to what he had learned, the Duchess had left Virginia to save money and appearances, dragging along like a fetter a debt of honor contracted by a worthless scamp of a brother. Of course, it was not in any sense a legal debt, but she had considered it to be a blot upon the family 'scutcheon, and had been paying interests, and bit by bit the principal, from her rigidly conserved little income. Presently an investment which had been indicated through the Spirit of Guidance Group's interpretation of one of madam's dreams reduced its dividends, and madam cut off a few of her filial memberships.

A Romance in Which Pride Comes Out Triumphant

Two items took precedence of all else—the rent and the debt.

"You meantertellme," chirped Mr. Boggs, "that Madam Tallafferr hasn't had enough to eat?"

"I do not," said the Little Red Doctor, emphatically. "She has. Old Sally hasn't. But her mistress doesn't know that."

The Little Red Doctor called Old Sally in.

"Now, Sally," said he, "we're all friends of yours here."

"Yessuh," said Old Sally, gratefully.

"And friends of your mistress."

Old Sally bristled. "My young mist'ess ain' needin' no frien's 'round yeah. She hol's her haid high!"

"Well, admirers, then," the Little Red Doctor amended. "The point is, we want to help. Now, haven't you got some things there you could sell without missing them? Some of that old furniture must be valuable."

"Sell the Tallafeh homestead fuhniture!" cried Old Sally, scandalized.

"Well, perhaps madam has more of that old lace than she needs."

"The Pinckney lace!" said Old Sally, in a tone of flat finality, which settled that point.

"Possibly, then, the diamonds," I suggested, diffidently.

At this Old Sally's lips, which had been pressed firmly inward, inverted themselves. She began to blubber. The blubbering became a sobbing. The sobs waxed to subdued howls. From the midst of the howls one coherent and astounding statement emerged:

"I stole 'em."

"Stole the Pemberton diamonds!" cried Mr. Boggs in consternation. "What did you do with 'em?"

"Hocked," wept that sorry and shrunken old negress. "Gossome cheap trash in deir place to fool my young mist'ess. Her sight ain' good no mo'."

"And the money went for food," I suggested.

"Some. Rest I put on a dream figgah."

"Policy," explained the Little Red Doctor, who is wise in the ways of the world. "She dreamed a number and put her money on it in a policy shop. And it didn't come out. They never do."

"Ef it had," said Old Sally, eagerly, "I'd a-had money to pay dat $1845.50 debt, an' plenty mo' besides. But I must 'a' disremembered my dream figgah."

"Very likely," agreed the Little Red Doctor, gravely. "Come, now, Sally; think. Isn't there anything you could sell out of the house?"

The old face began to work again. "My young mist'ess, she'll like to skin me if I tell," she whimpered.

"I'll cross your eyes like Schepstein's if you don't," threatened the Little Red Doctor, savagely.

A deep breath signified the termination of her struggle between two fears.

"Tazmun," she enunciated in a mystical voice.

We looked at each other, puzzled. "What?" queried Mr. Boggs.

"Tazmun," she repeated determinedly. "Like whut you keep roun' you to fotch luck. Rabbit's foot's a tazmun."

"Talisman," I translated, in a burst of inspiration.

"Dass it, tazmun."

"But you can't sell a talisman," objected the Little Red Doctor.

"Dis tazmun you can," eagerly asserted Old Sally. "Wuth a heap o' money. My young mist'ess keep it locked up in her jool box. Lawzee! How I has tried to get my han's on 'at ol' tazmun lettah. 'Cause we sho' need de money fo' it."

"A letter?"

"Dass it. Aug'graph tazmun letter. Fum Gen'al Stonewall Jackson, wrote to ol' Massah Pemberton, befo' de war."

Mr. Boggs turned to me. "Dominie, wouldn't that kind of a letter be worth real money?"

"It's a fo'tellin' lettah," put in Old Sally, eagerly. "It fo'tells de wah mo' 'an 10 yahs befo' de wah."

In that case, I thought, it might be valuable historically. Anyway, it would do no harm to get an offer from an expert. But could "young mist'ess" be induced to let it out of her hands? Old Sally thought it doubtful. Young mist'ess held that document in sacred veneration. Once a week she took it from its neatly addressed envelope to read it. Her spirit guide had declared that it would eventually bring fortune and happiness to her, if she would await the sign. What sign? Old Sally did not know. But she was certain that a marvelous "tazmun" such as Gen. Stonewall Jackson's foretelling letter would furnish a sign beyond all misconception.

"Sign? She shall have a sign," muttered the Little Red Doctor, who is wholly without a conscience in any matter where he can pamper his insatiable appetite for helping others. Then to Sally: "But don't you say a word to her of what you have told us."

"Cotch me!" said that aged crone. "I don't want to get skint."

* * * * * * *

Mr. Boggs, as emissary, respectfully petitioned that the lady grant a conference to the Little Red Doctor, myself and himself upon a matter of business. We found her a faded and splendid figure amid the faded splendor of her belongings. She was clad in her stiffest black, she sat in the biggest Tallafferr chair, her throat emerged from the delicate and precious Pinckney lace, and there glittered in her innocent ears a grotesque travesty upon the small but time-honored Pemberton diamonds. She said: "To what am I indebted, sirs, for this visit?"

The Little Red Doctor explained that we were interested, historically, in a document which she possessed. The Duchess' sharp glance fixed the spokesman: "How, may I ask, did you learn of this document?"

"Through a dream," replied that shameless one.

Her glance livened. "Strange," she murmured. "You dreamed—what?"

"That there was preserved at the top of this house a prophetic letter of Stonewall Jackson's."

The old lady's eyebrows twitched. He had touched the right chord of superstition. Her voice was quite animated as she asked: "And you actually expect this dream to be confirmed?"

"Pardon me; it is already confirmed. A few days after, I saw a newspaper clipping, stating that such a letter was said to be in existence, but that its whereabouts was unknown."

I shuddered. Couldn't the reckless idiot foresee the next question? It came, straight and sharp:

"Have you the clipping?"

"I have."

I gasped with relief, wonder and admiration. That wise young Ananias had quietly provided for it all by getting Inky Ike to set up and strike off a brief and vague article which the Little Red Doctor himself had composed. Madam Tallafferr read it with heightened color.

"This," she said to Old Sally, calmly, "is without doubt the sign."

From a beautifully inlaid box she reverently took an old buff envelope stamped and postmarked, and put it in the Little Red Doctor's hands. "This, sirs," said she, "is my talisman. It was given to me, as his most prized possession, by my father, to whom it was written."

"What do you value this at, Madam Tallafferr?" asked the physician.

Her reply came without hesitation: "Eighteen hundred and forty-five dollars and fifty cents."

"The Little Red Doctor's jaw fell. "Eighteen—did I understand you to say eighteen hundred?"

"And forty-five dollars and fifty cents. That is the minimum. It is perhaps worth more."

"Er—yes. Certainly. Very likely," said the Little Red Doctor, jerkily.

"I bid you good day, sirs," said the Duchess. "You will, of course, exercise every care of Gen. Jackson's letter."

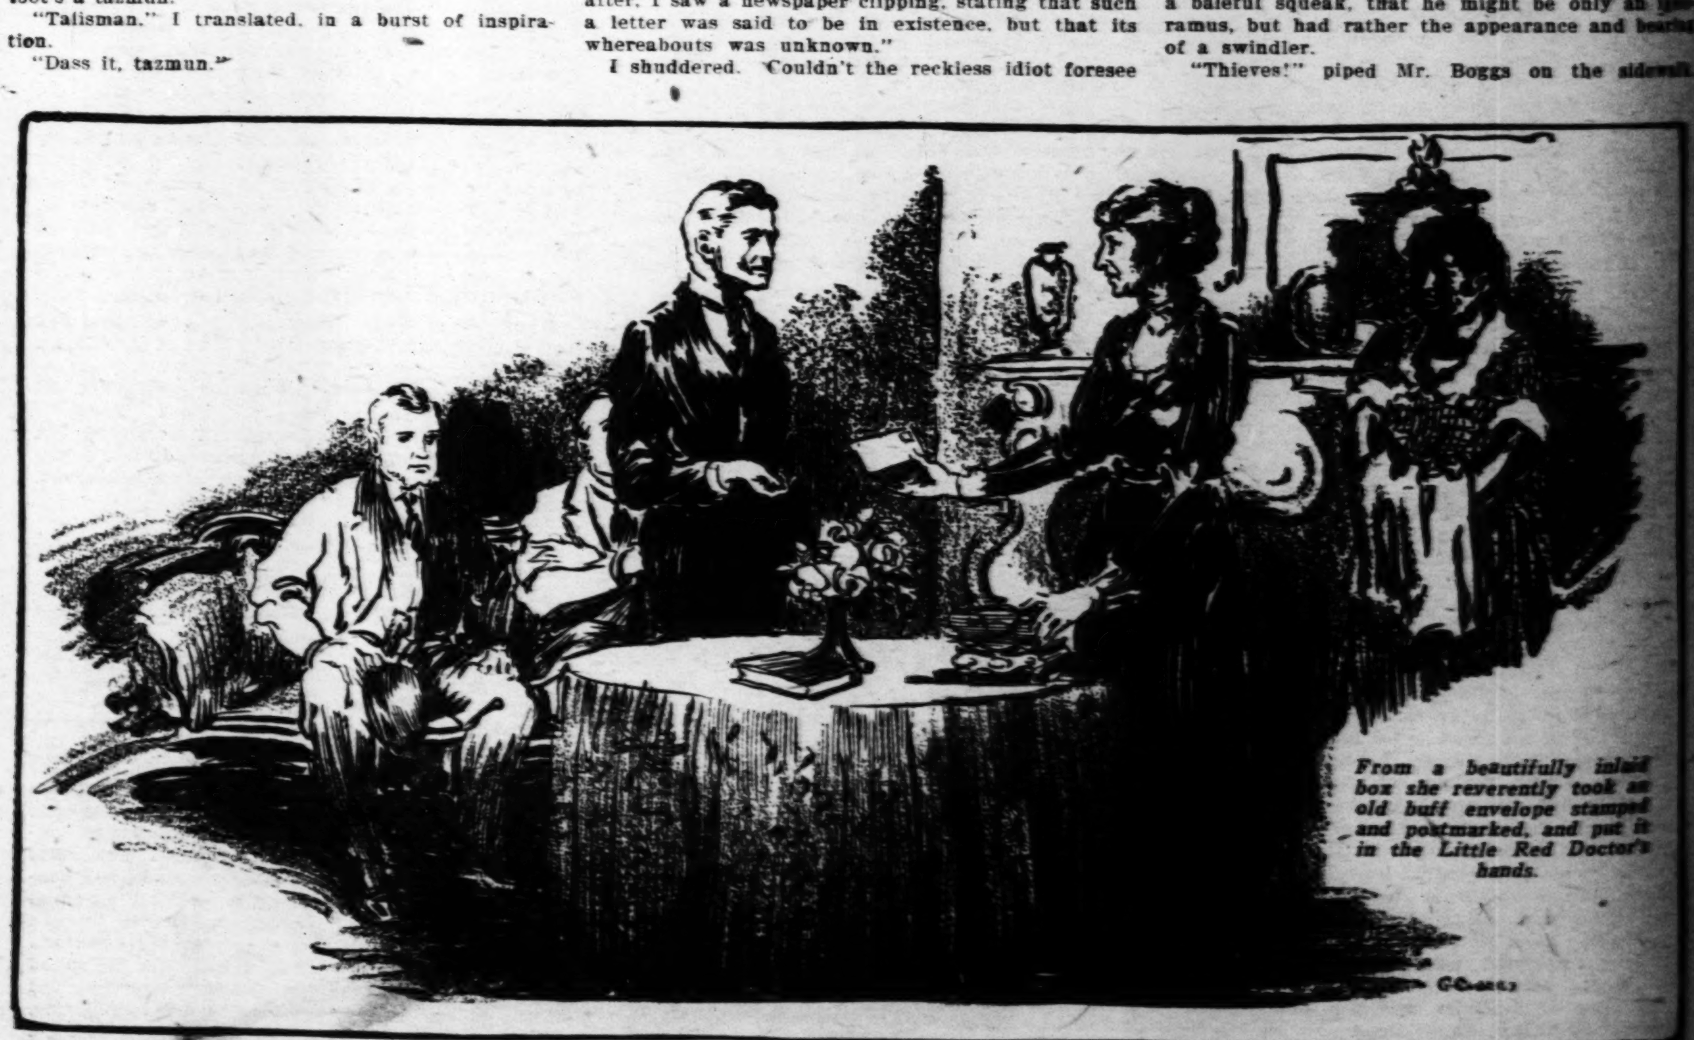
We bowed ourselves out. On the sidewalk we looked upon each other in dismay. "And Old Sally down to the last dollar," said the Little Red Doctor, neglecting to mention that he had given her the dollar.

"Let's try the letter on the trade, anyway," piped Boggs, hopefully. "You can't tell but maybe it might be worth the money. Is there an autograph trade, dominie?"

I chanced, happily, to be informed upon this and to be able to make some definite suggestions. We went to Mr. Barker's small and recherche curio shop with the talisman. Mr. Barker did not bark. He purred. The substance of his purring was that while the letter was authentic beyond question and would be of interest to some Southern historical society, it could claim no special value. As for the prophetic feature, upon which so much stress had been laid, a mere opinion that "Be it sooner or be it later, the moot question of state rights will demand a final settlement," could hardly be regarded as an inspired forecast of the Civil War. However, should we say $25?

As the business brains of our delegation, Mr. Boggs, intrusted with the bargaining, would not say $25. Mr. Boggs would not say anything remotely suggesting $25. Mr. Boggs would say good day, which he forthwith did, in great disgust of spirit. From Mr. Barker we went to Mr. Pompany. Mr. Pompany neither barked nor purred. He mumbled. The upshot of this submaxillary communication was a dim "Twenty dollars, take it or leave it." We left it, and Mr. Pompany, the latter with a Parthian arrow sticking in his soul (if he had one) in the form of Mr. Boggs' firm opinion, delivered in a baleful squeak, that he might be only an ignoramus, but had rather the appearance and bearing of a swindler.

"Thieves!" piped Mr. Boggs on the sidewalk.



From a beautifully inlaid box she reverently took an old buff envelope stamped and postmarked, and put it in the Little Red Doctor's hands.

TAZMUN (Continued)

"Thieves and fatheads, the whole trade. What now?"

"Schepstein," said the Little Red Doctor. "He's a thief, too. But he knows."

Schepstein received us in his grubby, grimy, desolated front room, which did duty as an office, with a malevolent crossfire from his distorted eyes. "Bit of business?" he repeated after Mr. Boggs. "What business? State your business."

"For sale," piped Mr. Boggs, handing him the letter, which he had taken from the envelope.

Hardly a glance did Schepstein give it. "Thomas Jonathan Jackson. Who's he? And who's this Maj. Pemberton?"

Mr. Boggs explained, in indignant piccolo tones, who Thomas Jonathan Jackson was. Not about Maj. Pemberton, however. No authority had been given to our deputation to disclose the ownership of the letter. So far as we were aware at that time, it would have mean nothing to Schepstein, anyway. We had no reason, then, to suppose that he even knew Madam Tallafferr.

"Humph!" grunted Schepstein. "Stonewall Jackson, eh? Might be worth something. Lessee the envelope."

He looked it over carefully, front and back, folded the letter which he had not even read, and slipped it back in. "Leave it with me overnight," he suggested, negligently. "I'll think it over and make you a price in the morning."

"Think as much as you like," returned Mr. Boggs, retrieving the treasure. "We'll keep this. And we'll be back at 11 tomorrow."

• • • • •

Observe, now the advantages of living in a small, self-centered community like Our Square, where everybody has an intimate (if not invariably friendly) interest in everybody else's affairs. Inky Mike had noted with curiosity our visit to Schepstein. As a press tender, the inky one naturally aspires to be a reporter, but his ideal reporter, being derived mainly from journalism as set forth in the movies, is a species of glorified compromises between Sherlock Holmes and Horace Greeley in a rich variety of disguises. He had no disguise handy, but he washed his face and followed Schepstein when that astute bargainer set forth immediately after our visit. Further, he listened outside the booth while the object of his sleuthing phoned a telegram. As he reported it in great excitement to our trio, it was addressed to a gentleman named Olds, in Cincinnati, and read to this esoteric effect:

"Alexandra local five forty-six perfect What price? Answer quick."

"Who's Olds?" asked the Little Red Doctor.

"Olds? Doncher know Olds?" cried Inky Mike. "The oil king? The multimillionaire?"

"What has this to do with us?" I asked. "It seems to be some oil quotation. And what does 'Alexandra local' mean?"

"Search me!" offered the amateur sleuth. "But don'choo fool yourself! It's your business, awright. He snook out after you went, shakin' all over."

Mr. Boggs nodded a sagacious head. "Trust old Schep!" he fluted.

"When I've his money in hand; not before," grunted the Little Red Doctor.

When we called at the dingy and lonely flat on the following morning, Schepstein's face was a mask of smiling craft.

"It's worth, possibly—pos-sib-bly—$15 as a spec," he said.

"No," cheeped Mr. Boggs.

"What's the matter with you?" demanded Schepstein, with rising truculence. "D'you wanta sell or don't cha? What's your price?"

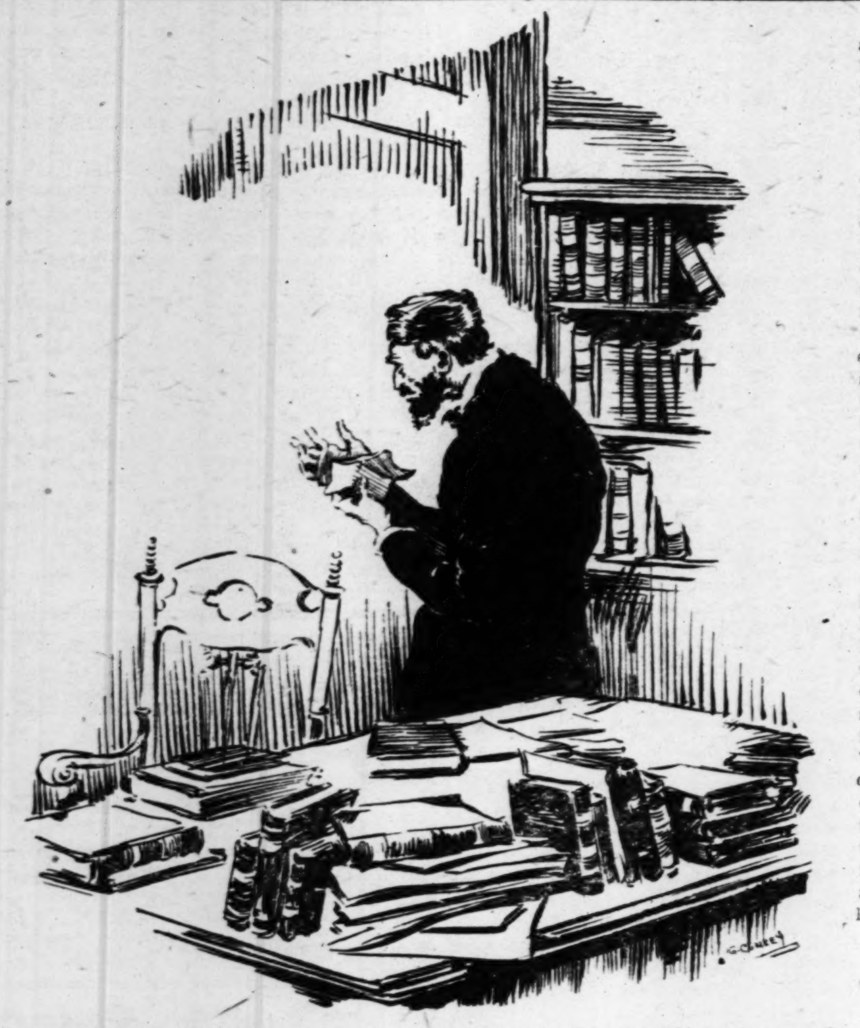
"Eighteen hundred and forty-five dollars and fifty cents," said Mr. Boggs in a clear, businesslike soprano.

Schepstein did not sneer, nor explode, nor curse, nor do any of the things which I confidently expected him to do. His convergent vision seemed to focus on the buff envelope in Mr. Boggs' lumpy hand. He looked thoughtful, and, it seemed to me, almost respectful. "As she stands?" he asked.

"As she stands," assented Mr. Boggs.

"Bought," said Schepstein. And he wrote out a check to "Bearer."

At this the Little Red Doctor lost his head and profoundly altered the situation. "By thunder!" he cried, "Madam Tallafferr knew what she was talking about all the time."



"Humph!" grunted Schepstein. "Stonewall Jackson, eh? Might be worth something. Lessee the envelope."

Schepstein dropped his pen. "Who?" he asked, in a rasping voice

"Madam Tallafferr, across Our Square in 17."

"Was that her letter?"

"Yes. We are acting as her agents."

"Ah, no," said Schepstein, softly.

Then an astounding thing happened. Two small, pinched tears welled out from the ill-matched points of flint which served Schepstein for eyes. They were followed by two more. The little, gnarly, cross-grained Jew drooped over the desk and his shoulders shook. A voice of falsetto anguish roused him:

"Don't cry on that check! You'll smudge it."

Schepstein lifted his head and gloomed at Boggs. "Nevamind that; it's all off," he gulped. "I got something to tell you people."

Between queer, shamed breath-catchings, he told us about his Metta's funeral. At the end he read us a telegram from Quentin Olds. When I was able to assimilate its full meaning, I found myself shaking hands with Schepstein, while Mr. Boggs danced a jig with the Little Red Doctor. Then Schepstein tore up the check for $1845.50 and invited us around to the Elite Restaurant to luncheon, thereby affording a sensational tidbit of news for Polyglot Elsa's relating for a fortnight after. "Mr. Schepstein, he paid the whole compte. Was kennst du about that!"

Three days were required to finish the deal. Then through Old Sally the deputation trio sought and obtained another audience from the Duchess. Mr. Boggs did the talking in terms worthy of his environment. "We have successfully terminated the negotiation, Madam Tallafferr," he began.

The Duchess bowed in silent dignity.

"And I have now the honor of turning over to you $1845.50, as"——

"Hally-loo-yah, tazmun!" bursts out Old Sally. "Hally—hally—hally"——She caught her mistress' austere glance. "I knowed it was comin' so all along," she concluded, heroically compressing herself to a calm if belated assurance.

——"as the minimum price stipulated," pursued Mr. Boggs.

"I thank you," said the Duchess.

"Also," concluded the agent, "a balance of $2153.20."

The Duchess' face never so much as changed. "That is entirely satisfactory," she observed. "I have to thank you all for your successful efforts in securing a suitable price. My only regret," the quiet voice faltered a little, "is that circumstances should have forced me to part with an expression of esteem for my beloved father from one who was the greatest military hero of all history."

"You're in wrong, lady," caroled Mr. Boggs, his rhetoric suddenly melting in his excitement. "We sold the envelope for $4000 net. There's only three other of them 1846 Alexandria Postmaster's stamps in the world today. So here's your Stonewall letter as good as new."

"My Gawsh!" said Old Sally, and fell down upon the floor and rolled and gave praise after the manner of her race, unrebuked this time of her mistress.

That aged and grand dame took back the letter with a hand which, for all that it had been rock-firm when it received MacLachan's revolver, now trembled a little. But her sole comment was: "And yet there are those so obstinate and shortsighted as to deny that the spirits guide us for our own good."

• • • • •

Once more finely embossed stationery came pouring in at No. 17 Our Square, proudly edifying the soul of Mr. Boggs. Once more Madam Tallafferr went forth on missions of social splendor, westward and uptown, sometimes in an automobile. Once more the restored Pemberton diamonds glistened in the fine, withered ears, Old Sally having confessed and been duly forgiven.

Old Sally herself, replete and pompous, trotted to and fro in Our Square, brimful of smiling hints of a great honor that was to come to us. Her young mist'ess, she let it be known, was graciously pleased to be recognizant of the part, useful though humble, which Our Square had played in her re-established fortunes, and she was about to acknowledge it in a manner worthy of her family and her traditions. In Old Sally's own words, she was going to "mo' dan even it up wif you all." Curiosity, speculation and surmise had become almost morbid in Our Square, when one morning there burst upon us, in an effulgence of glory, a mail as splendid as any which had ever brightened Mr. Boggs' worshipping eyes on its passage upward to his top floor. To Mr. Boggs himself it came, to Schepstein, to the Little Red Doctor, to me, to Polyglot Elsa and to many others, even down the scale as far as Inky Mike, this big white envelope, sealed with a square of black sealing wax and inclosing a most gratifyingly proud and stiff pasteboard card. That card still stands, carefully dusted, on many a mantel of Our Square, a guerdon and manifesto of social glory. At the top of it is blazoned the crest of the Tallafferrs, standing between the flag of the Confederacy and the coat of arms of Old Virginia. Below runs this legend—in real engraving, if you please:

Madam Rachel Pinckney
Pemberton Tallafferr
solicits the honor of your presence at

Light Without Heat? The Secret Unfolding

thelial cells of the skin is lens-shaped and slightly protruding. Beneath this comes the main mass of the light cells, which extends downward somewhat below the inner surface of the general epithelial layer and consists of the inner epithelial cells of this region. These epithelial light cells are large and secrete luciferin, which is contained in little pockets in the cytoplasm touching the surface of the cell. The light is produced by internal combustion, the luciferin being oxidized in situ.

"Behind this mass of light cells comes the reflector, which is a cup-shaped layer of connective tissue, the platelike cells of which are filled with tiny crystals of some organic substance, probably guanin, that collectively have the power of reflecting light. Even after fixation, staining and mounting in balsam, this reflector continues to throw back light from a thin section so that it forms a bright silvery layer on the microscope slide. The reflector is lined on its back side with a thin layer of black pigment cells, which further prevent the light from passing into the tissues of the body.

"Light organs of this essential structure, but of various shapes and sizes, and placed on all parts of the body, though usually on the lower surface, are found in nearly all the other luminous teleost fishes. It remains to describe a teleost fish—Photoblephron—which has evolved a method of external combustion. It is found in the Pacific Ocean.

"This fish has two light organs, one under each eye. The light organ is large and is furnished with a reflector and inner pigment mantle almost exactly like the organ just described. The light cells are composed of epithelial cells of the basal layer, and this is invaginated into a series of tubular glands at right angles to the skin. The luciferin is not secreted in the cells, but is found in bacteria living in the tubules and this mass of bacteria passes outward, being continuously expelled into a series of pockets just under the skin, several glands or tubules emptying into each pocket.

"These pockets are not closed, but each has one or more small openings to the exterior admitting a small amount of fresh sea water, which carries with it the free oxygen necessary to combustion and the production of light. Thus the light is in this instance not subject to nerve control, but burns all the time, night as well as day. In order to shut off the light, however, there is a black mantle like a third eyelid, which can be pulled down over the whole organ, the latter turning up and inward to facilitate the operation. In consequence, the light can no longer be seen.

"This organ is often cut out by the fishermen, who use it as a night bait for fishing. It is tough and will stay burning brightly on a fishhook for a long time."

Around the Wit and Humor Circuit With O. Henry

Texas with a suitable present. It is a disgrace to our patriotism. I was talking to W. G. Cleveland this morning and we both agreed that something must be done at once. Would you give $10 towards a silver service to be presented to the ship?"

The bartender reached behind him and took up a glass that was sitting on the shelf.

"I don't know that I would give you $10," he said, "but here's some whisky that I put some turpentine in by mistake this morning and forgot to throw it out. Will that do as well?"

"It will," said the man with the red tie, reaching for the glass, "and I am also soliciting aid for the Cuban patriots. If you want to assist the cause of liberty and can't spare the cash, if you could rustle up a glass of beer with a fly in it, I would"——

"Trot out, now," said the bartender. "There's a prohibitionist looking in the back door, and he won't come in till everybody's out."

RIDICULOUS.

THE following conundrum was left at the office yesterday by a young man, who immediately fled.

"Why is the coming Sunday like a very young baby?"

Answer: Because it's neck's week.

We do not see any reason why this should be the case. It is impossible for Sunday or any other day in the week to have a neck. The thing is printed merely to show what kind of stuff people send in to the paper.

AN X-RAY FABLE.

AND it came to pass that a man with a Cathode Ray went about the country finding out and showing the people, for a consideration, the insides of folks' heads and what they were thinking about. And he never made a mistake.

And in a certain town lived a man whose name was Reuben and a maid whose name was Ruth. And the two were sweethearts and were soon to be married.

And Reuben came to the man and hired him with coin to take a snapshot at Ruth's head, and find out whom she truly loved.

And later on Ruth came and also hired the man to find out whom Reuben truly loved. And the man did so and got two good negatives.

In the meantime Reuben and Ruth confessed to each other what they had done, and the next day they came together, hand in hand, to the man with the ray, for their answer. The man saw them and he wrote two names on two slips of paper and gave them into their hands.

"On these slips of paper," he said, "you will find the name of the one whom each of you loves the best in the world, as truly discovered by my wonderful Cathode Ray."

And the man and the maid opened the pieces of paper and saw written on one "Reuben" and on the other "Ruth," and they were filled with joy and happiness, and went away with arms about each other's waists.

But the man with the ray neglected to mention the fact that the photographs he had taken showed that Reuben's head was full of deep and abiding love for Reuben and Ruth's showed her to be passionately enamored of Ruth.

The moral of this is that the proprietor of the ray probably knew his business.

Wel, see how it goes?"

"See how what goes?"

"The money. Didn't have any trouble ng it, did you?"

"Why, you shorely don't mean"——

"I surely do! That tenner was some the goods you're here to buy from Also, Mr. Jooks, that other tenner, one I got changed at the bar, was tly the same variety of money."

"You don't mean it!"

Mr. Homan really didn't mean it, be- he was lying, but he meant for Jooks to believe what he said. The bills were thoroughly authentic d States currency.

"Never have the least trouble in passing it," declared Mr. Homan; which, for matter, was no lie. "Now, Mr. I'm going to hand you 10 $1 bills, our special brand, you know"—and he winked again—"and you can around town and buy some knick- to take home. Use these dollar so you can make sure they are so that nobody will doubt they are I'll be back at, say 6 p. m., the goods you want—I believe you you would take $10,000 worth?"

"Yes, if they're all like these," con- Mr. Jooks.

At 6 o'clock the customer was wait- for his new-found friend. He had no difficulty in spending the dol- bills Mr. Homan had handed him. had bought himself a new hat that make his home town sit up and notice of John W. Jooks, Esq., he had acquired a few trinkets for Jooks and the little Jookses.

Mr. Homan brought a neat package, which he showed to Mr. Jooks. Undo- the wrapper, he exhibited U. S. backs, or their doubles, and then urged the customer not to car- the goods on his person but to ship home by express. He went to the office with the customer and personally to the shipment. with the Missourian's $600 in his coat pocket, he wished the latter journey homeward, and made his from the scene.

Mr. Jooks reached his home in due and called at the railroad depot for precious express package. It was all right. He put it under his and carried it to the privacy of his stable office. He opened it, and sawdust ran out all over the floor!

Mr. Homan had sold Mr. Jooks a box dust covered with a few bills of small denomination. Mr. of course, had nothing to say.

In the first place, Mr. Homan had not or tried to pass, nor sold or tried any counterfeit money. He had, true, represented that about one- of a cent's worth of sawdust was in counterfeit money, guaran- perfect that it would pass any- for the genuine currency. But in the nature of things, had comeback.

The name John W. Jooks has been in- for use here in illustrating the whereby the man calling him- J. W. Homan and operating from 45 street, New York, fleeced many some of them from Missouri, what came to be known as "the sawdust swindle" of the '70's. 's victims were from various In some way he got lists of he believed would bite at his bait. of them did bite that, it was sometimes Homan had two or three a day awaiting him in New and it was necessary for him to help.

of those to whom he wrote his remarkable offer, like our friend Jooks, went posthaste to New York. Others forwarded the required $30 of good money for the promised $300 in counterfeit. They heard no more from Mr. Homan. He did not care to deal with persons who had sense enough to take such a precaution. They, on the other hand, could not afford to incriminate themselves by informing on Mr. Homan. There are fools who are not knaves and knaves who are not fools. It was the fools who were knaves that appealed to the sawdust swindler.

So successful was Mr. Homan's scheme that other crooks in the New York underworld got to imitating him. One L. E. Luddington opened, so to describe it, an office on Broadway; one James Knox began operating from an address on West street. They offered even greater inducements than Homan did. Still another sawduster, who had a Park Row address, used more caution. He would write to intended victims:

"Read this carefully. I want an active man with a cash capital of from $200 to $500 to assist me in the disposal of a certain class of goods which are manufactured exclusively by myself. They are goods that are used by everyone, and the business is strictly confidential. A mutual friend has asked me to write to you, because he thinks you will like to have some of my goods."

That is said to have brought rich returns to the swindler. In 1876 one David Holler, who kept a store at Woodstock, Shenandoah County, Va., forwarded $500 to one of the so-called sawdust swindlers. David Howard was the reputed name of the latter. Mr. Holler received, instead of the $5000 in counterfeit bills he had expected, and instead of a box of sawdust, a package of cotton waste.

Mr. Holler "hollered," strange to say. He had a friend get into correspondence with Mr. Howard. Together they went to New York and had Mr. Howard arrested. As a witness at the trial of Howard, Mr. Holler's testimony was such that the dignified Judge had a hard time to keep from laughing on the bench.

"When I answered Howard's circular in the first place," said Mr. Holler, "and sent him my $500, I had no thought of passing the counterfeit money along to my customers. It was my intention all along to bring about this fellow's arrest, and I really think I deserve a reward from the Government."

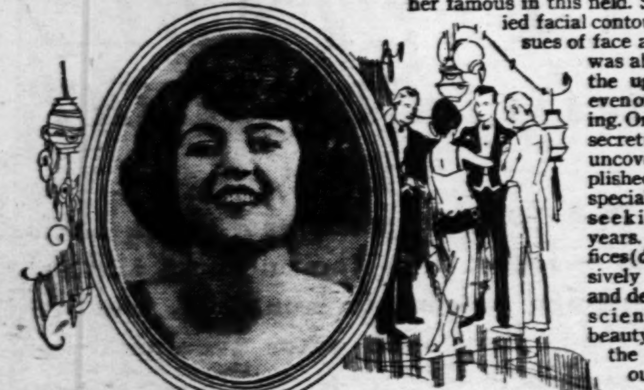
Twins Once, Now Only Sisters!

The Amazing Story of the Crawford twins and how one of them made herself beautiful

Meta and Marie Crawford When Their Resemblance to Each Other Made the Twins "Alike as Two Peas."

"ALIKE as two peas," everyone used to say of the Crawford girls who lived in one of the progressive little cities of Michigan's upper peninsula. "I'm never quite positive whether it's Marie or Meta I'm speaking to," their father would often say. "There's no telling them apart," declared the neighbors when the twins were of pinafore age. And when Meta passed triumphantly in Algebra—a study in which her high school chums freely predicted her failure—there were some who wondered if it really had been Meta who had been present at the examination.

Both girls were liked by their associates. They were gracious girls, and each had friends aplenty. But credit for this must be given their dispositions—for they were far from beautiful. Indeed, they were frankly homely. Then—in an incredibly short time—came the greatest changes. Meta remained the same likable, but severely plain girl; with the same familiar faults of face and figure. But Marie seemed suddenly to blossom forth. Her entire countenance and complexion took on a new aspect. Soon people identified Marie by referring to her as "the pretty Crawford twin." And so great was the transformation that she fully merited the designation "pretty" in any gathering of women.



Marie, Today

Here is how this miraculous change was brought about. It is an interesting and significant story for the woman who would look her best. For almost every woman has beauty possibilities of which she never hoped or dreamed. The reader may here jump to the wrong conclusion. What caused these sisters to grow so far apart in personal appearance was not neglect on the part of one, nor even strenuous cultivation of an attractive face and figure by the other twin. In fact, they started together to remedy faults of complexion, eyes, hair, and the many unlovely features that had combined to make them so utterly plain. Their first efforts were identical; both did anything and everything which either heard or read about on the subject of beautifying. They accepted well-meant advice of friends. But their efforts had all been hit or miss. Both had become discouraged, vowing never to try again.

Then, something happened; Marie Crawford learned of a remarkable woman who had made a twenty-year study of beauty. It is doubtful if anyone else ever went about development of beauty methods in so scientific a manner. This woman had gone to the very bottom of the skin structure; her way of clearing complexions and removing blemishes had already made her famous in this field. She had studied facial contour and the tissues of face and neck; she was able to remove the ugly wrinkles, even of years' standing. One hair-health secret which she had uncovered, accomplished all that scalp specialists had been seeking to do for years. Her large offices (devoted exclusively to discovery and development of scientific aids to beauty) had taken the guesswork out of beauty culture.

"I wonder what this remarkable woman's methods could do for me?" thought Marie. She decided at any rate to ask. So she wrote her—and this simple act proved a turning point in her whole appearance and her very outlook on life. She was told things and given things to do that seemed almost to work magic.

What surprised her at the outset was the utter simplicity of it all. But most surprising was the suddenness with which results were brought about.

The rapid improvements soon proved the new, scientific treatments to be right and showed her why the old-fashioned things which she and her sister had been doing could never accomplish their purpose. Before long her facial blemishes were gone—all of them. Her skin and color were amazingly benefited. Pores of ugly size were invisible now, and blackheads entirely banished. Two particularly ugly lines from nose to mouth had left. The flesh at the point of her chin had been virtually remodelled. An unsightly hollow of the neck was rounded out so perfectly that she no longer had dread of the affairs where gowns revealed neck and shoulders. In time she had brought eyebrows and eyelashes to the point where they were noticeably silken and shapely. There was no denying that Marie Crawford, whatever had been her appearance so short a time back, had stepped into the ranks of women who were deemed "pretty."

About this time came the country club's dance of the season. That brought full realization of the remarkable change Marie had accomplished in her appearance. It was the first affair to find the twins separated the entire evening. Her card was soon full—and men were asking for "half a dance" and "extras." Back of her laughing denials of being "altogether too popular" was a deep joy, clouded only when she caught sight of sister Meta—alone!

Marie had not wilfully withheld from her sister the secret of her new beauty. But she remembered early experiences with beautifying methods, and feared ridicule should this latest effort fail. Thus had matters progressed until now there remained scarcely a facial resemblance between them Meta and she could scarcely be taken for sisters—never for twins. Yet it seemed but yesterday that people were mistaking one for the other!

And now for the part that is of such vital import to maid or matron who would make the most of her beauty possibilities. The expert aid mentioned will work the same wonders for you. The woman who has learned how to bring any type of human skin to practical perfection, rejuvenate the sagging tissues and so remarkably enhance one's looks in every way is Lucille Young, and her offices are in Chicago. She has prepared a book on beauty in which the problems of over 100,000 women have furnished the facts. It tells just how you may learn these principles and apply them with the same swift results. This book is most appropriately called "Making Beauty Yours." If you knew what a single one of the secrets it reveals could mean to your appearance you would send this very hour for your copy! There is no charge, no obligation; just fill out this coupon.

A COMPLETE Daily Newspaper

THE Daily Post-Dispatch has, in St. Louis more readers than the morning and one other evening newspaper combined, and over 50,000 more than both other evening newspapers combined.

The great general public has always been the one infallible judge—and when ONE newspaper holds permanent supremacy for years and years that newspaper must of necessity be far superior to all others in its field.

The Daily Post-Dispatch has many exclusive features—it is the only St. Louis daily newspaper that publishes every day a page of news photographs, a full page of comic features, a double page of features for women, and the only evening newspaper with the service of the Associated Press.

Tired, Tender, FEET

JUST take your shoes off and put your tired, tender, burning, shoe-chafed feet into a "Tiz" bath. Instantly, you will feel pain being drawn out and comfort just soaking in. "Tiz" removes the poisons and acids that puff up your feet and cause aching, burning feet. When your feet are all tired out just try "Tiz"—it's glorious.

Buy a box of "Tiz" for a few cents at any drug or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet, comfortable.

To Neglect the Lips is to Spoil the Ensemble

THE appearance of any type of mouth can be improved by the lip stick, and its use becomes almost a necessity when rouge has been applied to the cheeks.

The restrained and intelligent use of the Pompeian Lip Stick carries with it no suggestion of a "made-up" mouth.

For, so carefully is this preparation formulated that its color and consistency impart only a slightly heightened shade and a delicately increased freshness to the lips.

First, the skin is softened, smoothed, and youth-i-fied with Pompeian Beauty Powder.

Next, the cheeks are given an added glow by a touch of Pompeian Bloom (the rouge).

Finally the mouth is brought into "key" with the rosy flush of the cheeks by a judicious application of Pompeian Lip Stick.

Thus is produced an ensemble, a harmony of color in the features, that imparts an even radiance to the entire complexion.

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

She is No Longer Fat

She found a way to reduce her fat. It was a way far more pleasant than dieting or exercising would have been. This new way allowed her to eat foods without danger of becoming fat again.

She found Marmola Prescription Tablets. They aid the digestive system to obtain the full nutriment of food. They help Nature to turn food into muscle, bone and sinew instead of fat.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are made from the famous Marmola prescription. Thousands have found that these handy tablets give complete relief from obesity. And when the accumulation of fat is checked, reduction to normal, healthy weight soon follows.

All good drug stores the world over sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar a box. Ask your druggist for them, or order direct and they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid.

50% of all diseases start from constipation

—yet this dangerous ailment is becoming more common every day.

It is simply because our concentrated modern diet gives our intestinal muscles too little work to do. They grow soft and flabby—fail to act—and our bodies are flooded with poisons!

Today we realize the folly of trying to whip the weakened system into action with drugs and stimulants. Only the proper food can give the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

That is why so many physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today. Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the intestine, softening them, and increasing their bulk. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils.

Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast—yeast in its natural fresh form. Experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active—that it loses its laxative effect when these cells are "killed" and dried.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action. It is a nourishing food — not a digestion-disturbing medicine—and like any other food, it must be eaten regularly to secure results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk, or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

Send for free booklet, "The New Found Value of Fleischmann's Yeast in Building Health." The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"Nothing equal to it for a strength-builder"

A Louisiana housewife writes: "I have always been somewhat constipated. I started Fleischmann's Yeast last September and when I eat from two to three yeast cakes per day, I am never bothered that way, and since taking have gained in weight, look better and feel wonderfully invigorated. I think there is nothing equal to it for a strength builder and corrector for constipation."

DODGE BROTHERS TOURING CAR

Consider for a moment its low first cost, its exceptionally modest maintenance requirements, its almost negligible repair and replacement needs, and, finally, the long years of hard service it is built to render.

Then it becomes clear at once why the purchase of a Dodge Brothers Touring Car is universally thought of as an exercise of sound business judgment.

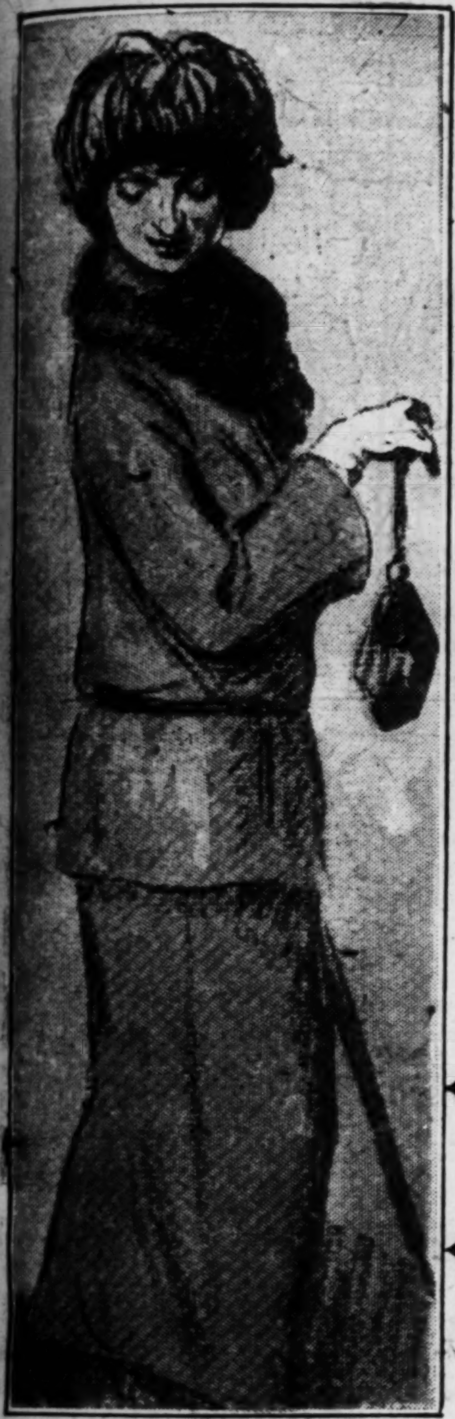
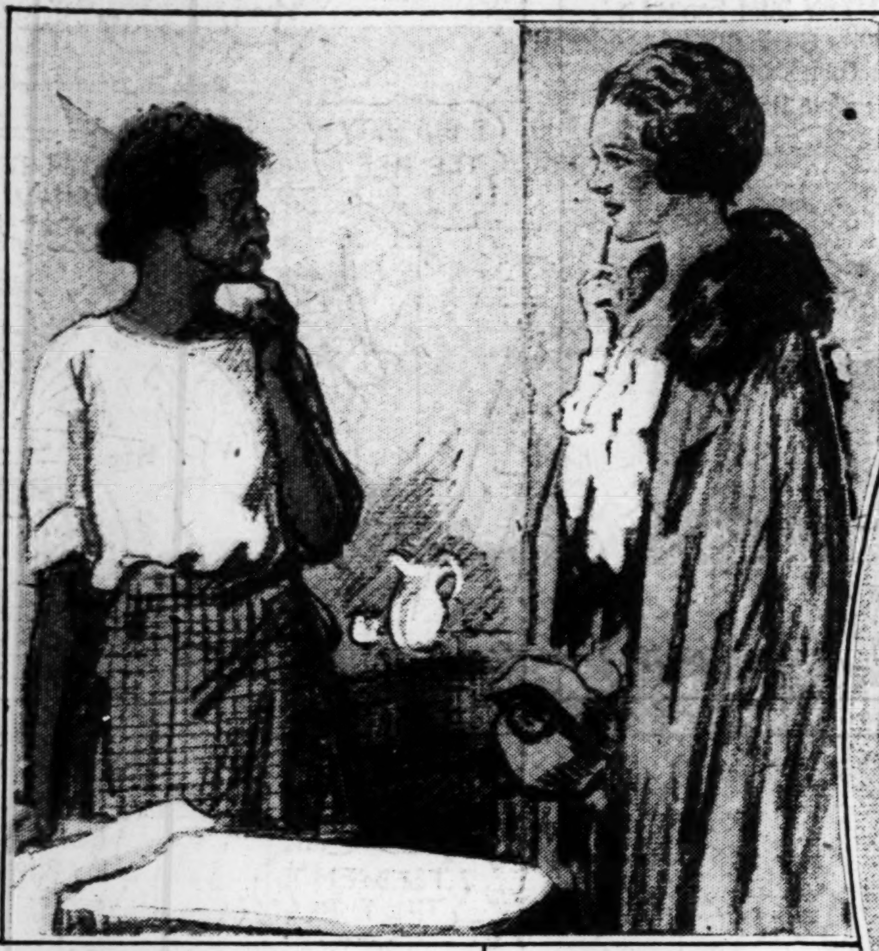
ECONOMY BEGINS AT HOME

(COPYRIGHT)

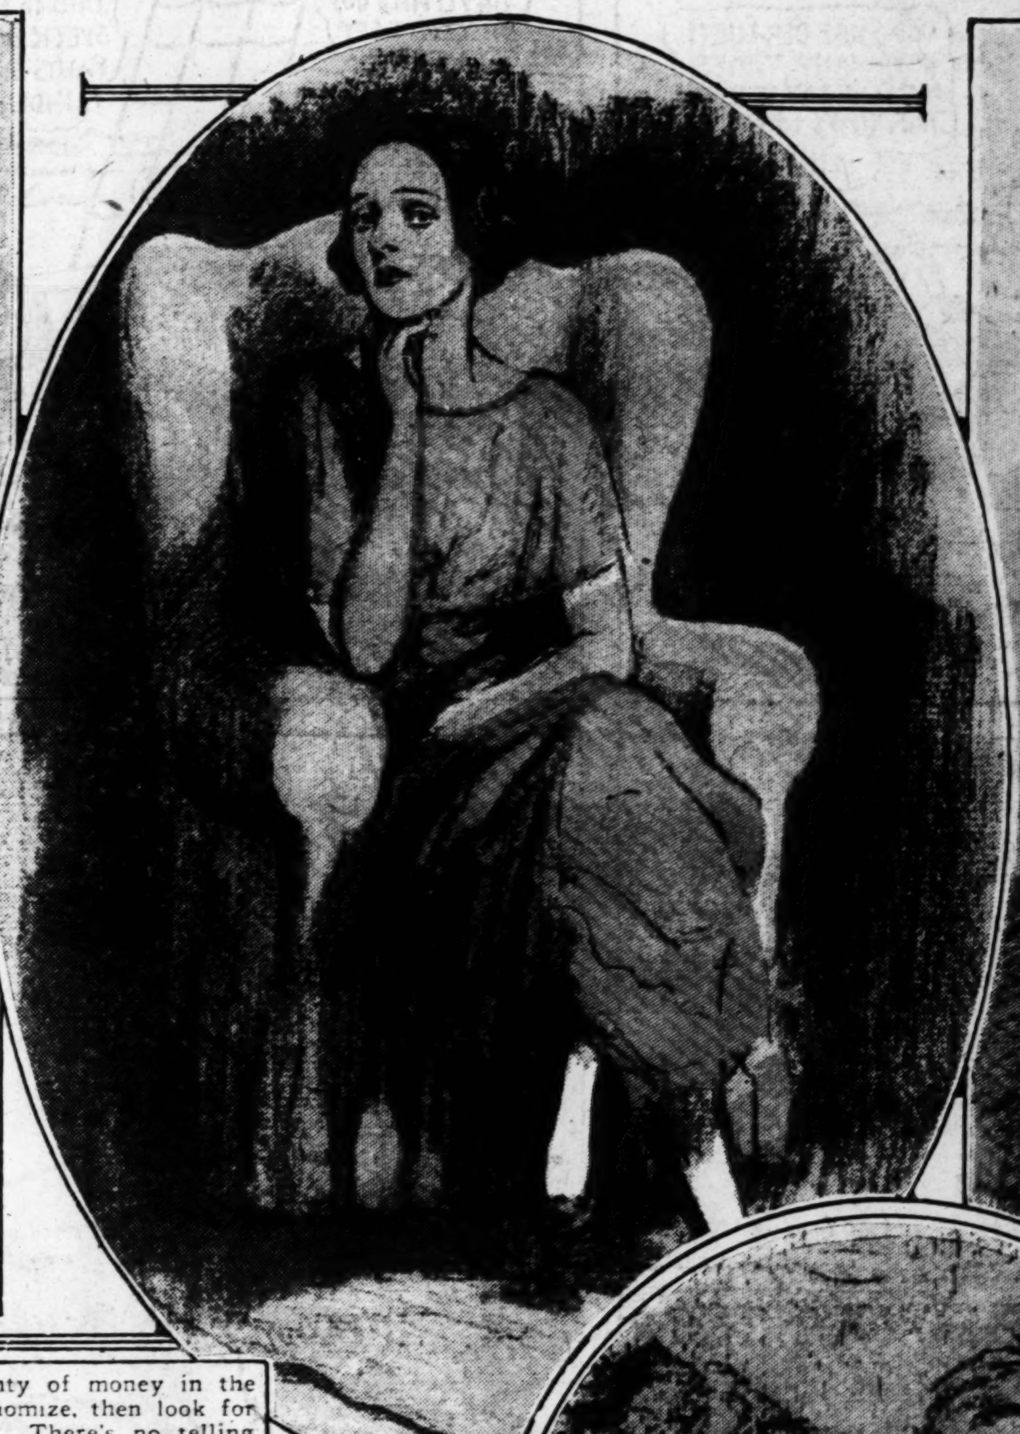
By W. E. HILL



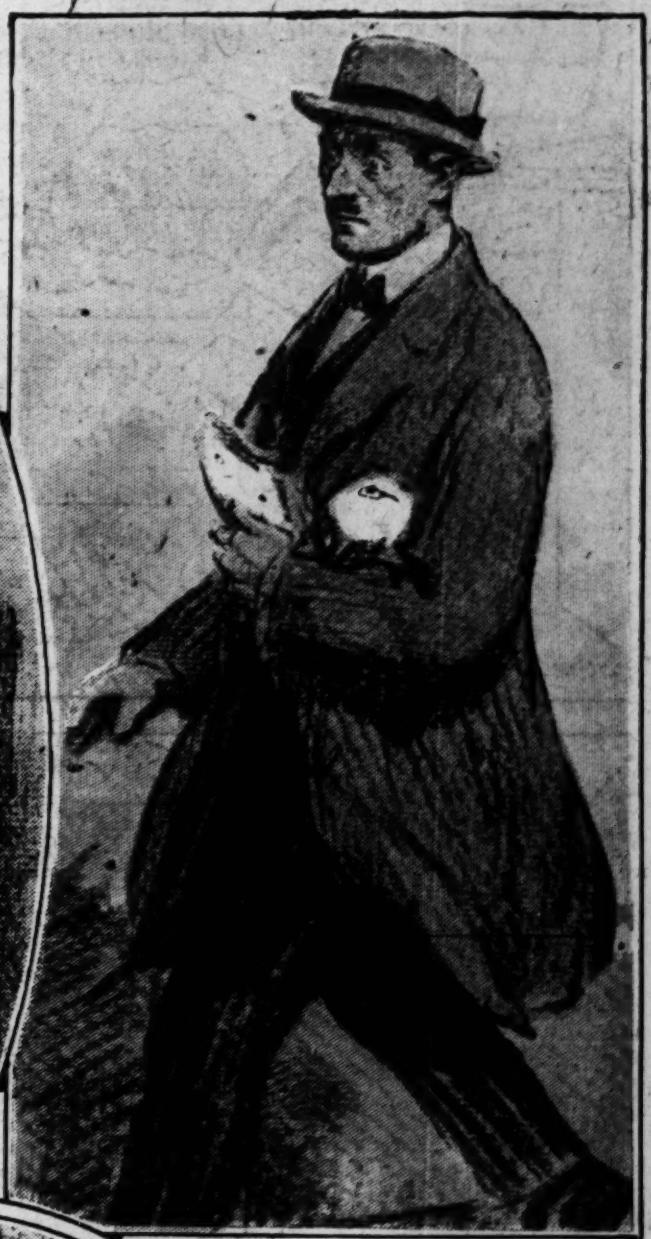
Beautiful lady who economizes in the way of dress hearing something give. Mrs. Wallet knows of a place down in the wholesale hide and hoof district where you can get twenty-two dresses for what the smart shops charge for just one. They look great when worn for a few hours, and then they fall apart.



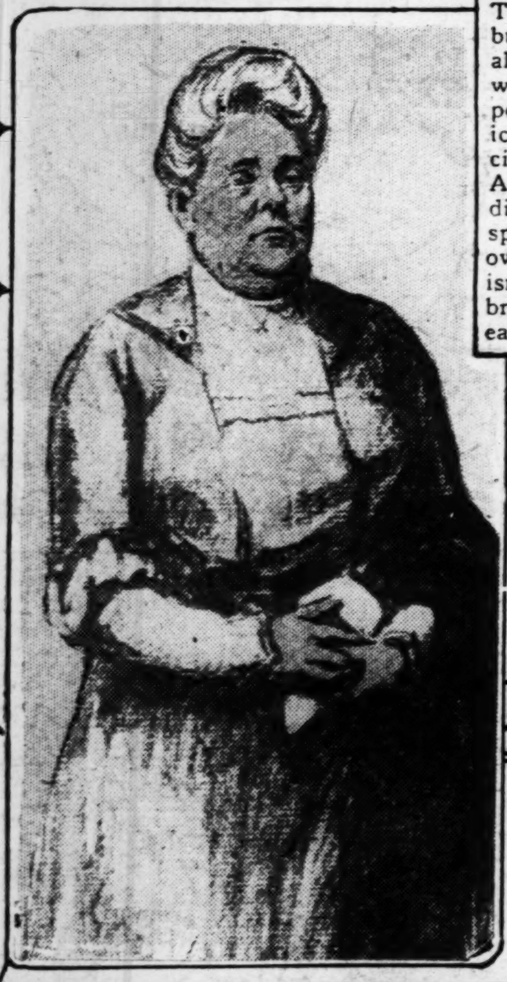
The bride and the household budget The June bride, with all the enthusiasm in the world, is talking over the importance of economy in the ice box with Addie, her precious jewel (The clothes that Addie is sprinkling are Addie's—you won't catch Addie sprinkling anything but her own wash No, siree!) Addie isn't a bit taken with what the bride is saying about going easy with the eggs and butter



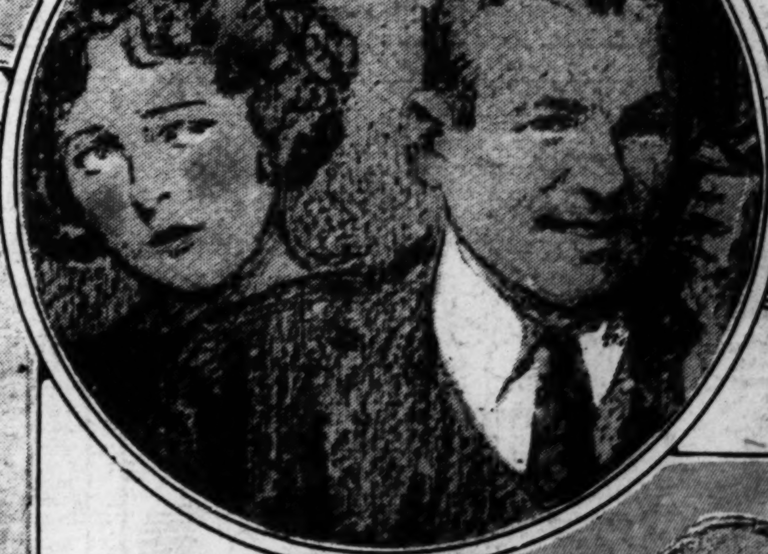
When a person with plenty of money in the background begins to economize, then look for something pretty drastic! There's no telling where they will stop. Here's young Mrs. Swoop, who has been praying every night for extra dividends, wondering whether it wouldn't be cheaper in the end to buy a new fur coat instead of having the old one fixed up. Because, then, you have a new coat And fixed-over things always look fixed over So there you are



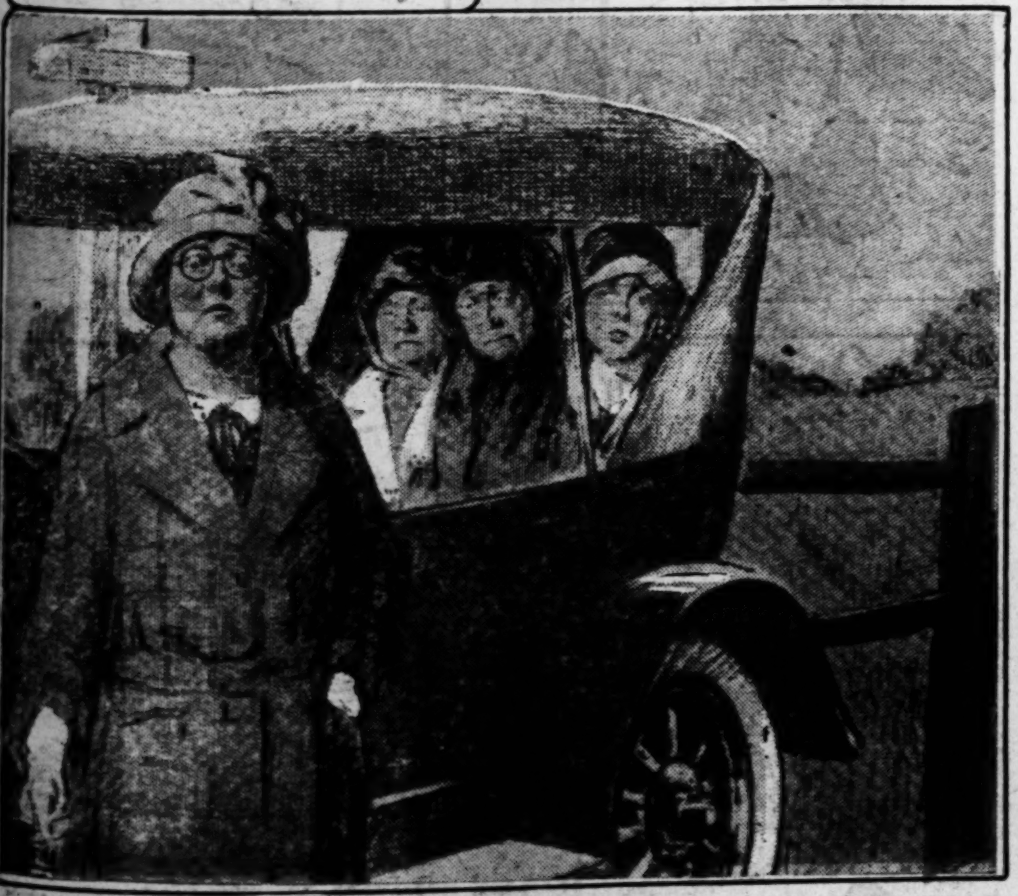
The man who economizes his time about to save three minutes on his schedule by making the 9:18 instead of the 9:21 train to town. What he will do with the three minutes is a question



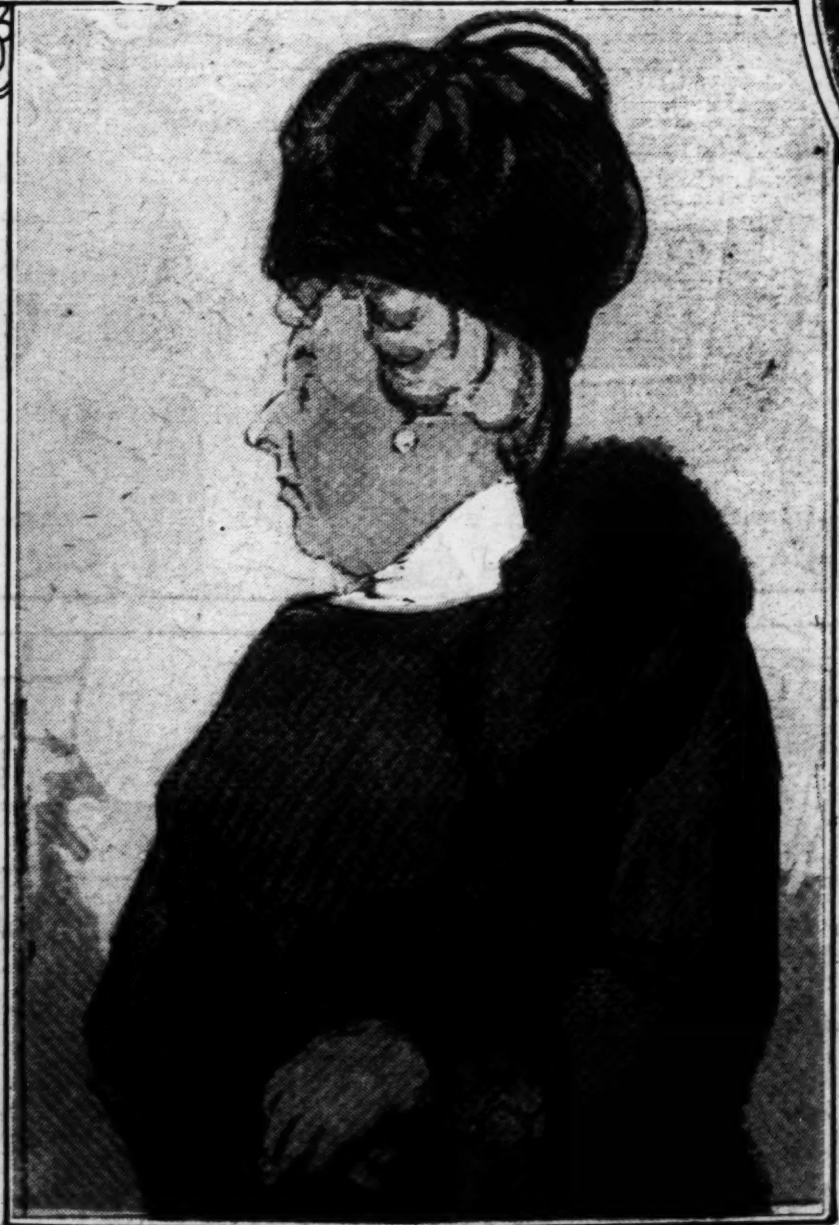
Mrs. Jetty started in married life practicing economy early and late. Now, in prosperous days, she can't get over it. See, bold as brass, how she's carrying two rolls done up in a napkin, from the dining room of the family hotel. It seemed such a shame to leave them.



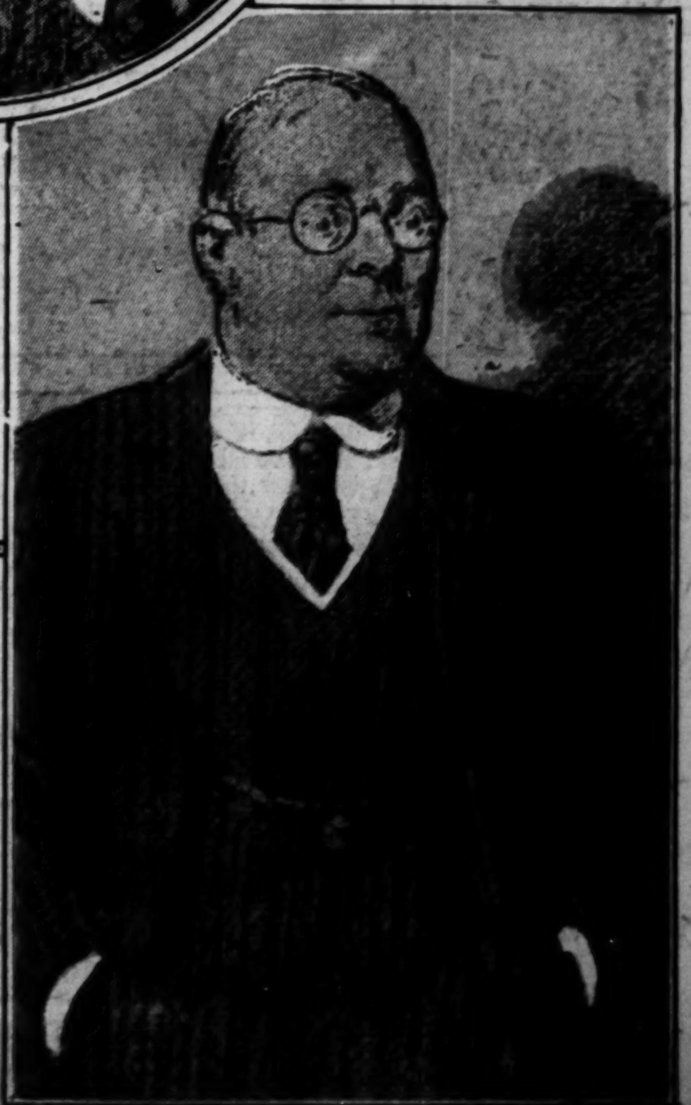
Another cute way in which many bright people practice economy is to make use of the telephone when calling on friends. Long distance, particularly



Economy in transportation. Aren't you sorry for poor Mrs. Traub, who thought the man in the garage had such an honest face? He said the used car was a great bargain and she alas, trusted him Mrs. Traub has taken Aunt Sarah Wickham and two visiting cousins out for a little spin Five miles out the car refuses to spin, and there's nary a towline in sight



One of the cleverest ways to economize is to let the doctor's bill go unpaid indefinitely Observe Mrs. Henry Dougherty, looking intently at nothing in particular when passing the doctor's house



Economy may begin in the home, but it often travels far and wide Take the case of Senator August R. Begg, who is saving his home town hundreds—nay, thousands—of the town's precious dollars in the matter of the new macadam road Senator Begg's great friend, Jerry B. McGiffney, will get the contract at a reasonably low bid, and the papier-mache roadbed will look great until the first heavy rain

BROOKLYN 'L' TRAIN FALLS TO STREET; 7 PERSONS KILLED

More Than 40 Persons Hurt —High Tension Wires Set Splintered Wooden Cars on Fire.

LERGYMEN MINISTER TO DYING IN WRECKAGE

Firemen, Fighting Among Terrified and Screaming Passengers, Check Flames —4 Women Dead.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 25.—At least seven persons were killed and more than 40 injured this afternoon when a two-car train plunged from the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit elevated structure at Fifth and Flatbush avenues in Brooklyn and were smashed . O fthe injured at least five are expected to die.

As the cars crashed to the street they carried with them a mass of high tension electric wires and these, spitting blue flame, ignited the shattered wreckage of the old wooden cars. Firemen, fighting amid terrified and screaming passengers, soon checked the flames.

Two Autos Crushed.

Witnesses said sor.ething went wrong with the first truck of the leading car and it plunged over the side of the structure, dragging the other with it. Part of the structure itself was carried away.

In falling the train crushed two automobiles beneath it.

Two dozen ambulances, all available fire apparatus and police reserves were on the scene in a few minutes They weer forced to fight a crowd of several thousand which were quickly massed.

Four of the dead were women The first identified dead were Alexander Lowsky and Mrs Louise Wright. both of Brooklyn.

Firemen tossed aside their helmets and rubber garbents and plunged into the wreckage, tearing at the timbers with their hands, when axes and crow bars could not be used without endangering the injured.

Ten clergymen rushed to the spot and plunged into the wreckage to minister to the dying.

Official Inquiry Begun.

Mayor Hylan and District Attorney Dodd were on the scene early an dan official inquiry was begun at once.
